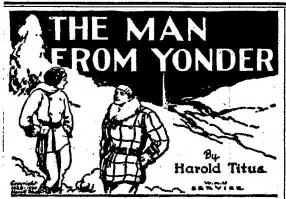
BE HAPPY TODAY by Lawrence Hawthorne

So often we look to a far distant day
For the joys that we think life should hold;
We want to be happy, contented and gay
But the world seems unfriendly and cold.
We hope that tomorrow our ship will come in.
That tomorrow success will arrive;
We dream of the time when our luck will begin
And we'll be mighty glad we're alive.

And yet, when we ponder, we soon understand
That our happiness all must be gained
From comforts and joys that are nearest at hand—
That contentment is never attained
Unless we are living each glorious day
To the full of its beauty and cheer.
The blessings we seek are not long years away
But are always abundantly here.



THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

CHAPTER VII

THE cars of veneer logs were coupled, their air hoses dangling, because the Hoot Owl never boasted air brakes for its trains. The locomotive panted asthmatically and leaking steam trailed off into the forest. McIver, the engineer, stood beside his car, wiping his hands slowly on a ball of waste and his fireman hung out the gangway as Ben came running up.

"You'll have to take 'em . . . all over at once," Elliott panted. "Local'll be there in . . . fifteen minutes! If they're not at the siding in time for the local, we lose! You've got to run for it, Mac, and pick up enough speed going down to carry you over."

McIver rolled the waste and eyed his employer. Then he shook his head slowly.

"Tough luck for you!" he said. "But with that rotten steel on a cold mornin', and no telling what that trestle'll do when weight hits it . . ." He shook his head again and looked Elliott in the eye. "I got kids," he said simply. "So's the fireman."

Some of the irate glare which had been in Ben's face dwindled. He, too, stared briefly down the track.

"Kids, yes," he said softly. "I can't ask a man with kids to try it, Mac. No hard feelings. I'll take a shot myself."

Teams clinked up, then, horses frost covered. Ben surveyed the crowd that pressed about the engine and swung up to the step.

"I'm going to take her over myself," he said. "If I get across that hump, with this load pushing me, I'll need a brakeman. I'm not going to ask anyone of you to ride. Maybe we'll pile up. But if we do get to the top, I can't stop her alone at the mill. Without air, with frost on the steel we'll go into the pond. There's fifty dollars in it for the man who'll ride with me!"

They looked hard at him, and then, almost in unison, their faces turned down the track. To watch was to know what was in their minds: the dangers of that curve, with rusty steel so cold, the problematical strength of the trestle they had built through the night.

"Fifty dollars . . . against a broken neck," Ben said and his voice trembled a bit. He drew his watch. "We've got eleven or twelve minutes to catch the local. . . . I'll urge no man. . . . Fifty dollars . . . and a long chance. Any takers?"

No man moved for a moment. Then, quite simply, without a word, Tim Jeffers peeled his heavy sheepskin coat, took a peavey from a man beside him and advanced.

"Never mind the fifty, Elliott. . . . It's my neck"

Ben smiled, then. It seemed as though he were so weary from effort and strain that he must have cracked and cried had he not smiled. He said no word. He swung up to the cab as the safety valve popped and steam commenced blowing off.

Ben threw more coal into the fire-box, looked at his water gauge, shoved the reverse lever down into the corner and opened the throttle. The little old locomotive gave a sharp, an almost startled, bark as valves released their power, sending from its stack a great puff of cumulous vapor into the still morning air. The drivers spun and she let go a rapid series of exhaust coughs. He shut off; opened again, and this time the tires found purchase. The slack came out, the cars moved and, journals squealing, belching and stuttering, they broke over to the down grade.

Elliott had her wide open, now, and the loads, on that grade, ran easily despite the binding cold in their journals. The rock and pitch of the engine were beyond belief. It seemed as though its weight must carry the light steel from its spikes as the careening threw tons of strain first one way and then the other.

The curve at the trestle's approach rushed up the valley toward him and through Elliott's mind swam all manner of misgivings. It seemed at the moment that if by any freak chance the wheels should stay on the rails, then those rails must surely give before the strain that the train's flight would exert as it took that curve. He threw one quick glance backward to see Tim Jeffers crouched on his high perch as a circus rider might stand on his boldly galloping steed. The old man chewed briskly and, as he caught a flash of Ben's face, spat and made one impressive gesture with a mittened hand, bidding the younger man get outside.

Ben had done all that he could do in the cab. Nothing within his power would be of avail if they left the track and, inside, he would have no chance at all should the wild run come to its end in the smoking waters of the river.

And so he backed into the gangway between tank and engine and slid down to the step, clinging to the hand rails, staring ahead, ready to let go if the worst, and the highly probable, happened.

The curve was there, the length of their locomotive ahead. . . . The trucks took it with a screech and a bounce and a grind. She turned sharply and Ben thought he felt her tipping, tilting, the step beneath his feet rising as the force that strove them off at a tangent asserted itself. . . . He swung far out, to give her that much more balance, and they were straightening out with the loads thundering and clanking and leaping behind and he breathed deeply, realizing that for the interval his lungs had not functioned.

And now they charged at the bridge, at that rough, new crossing of Hoot Owl. The engine bounced and quivered and seemed to stumble as she took the newly laid track. But she slammed back to balance and her tires chewed the frost, and they were over and charging the rise beyond!

Ben clambered back into the cab and tugged at the throttle, cursing because it would not open wider. He strained as though by his very posture to help the machinery meet that demand upon it. Nobly, the little locomotive breasted the rise; bravely she lunged into that hill with the exhaust roaring fit to beat the rusted, burned stack from her. She spat cinders and smoke high into the air and the steam clouds from the leaking gaskets enveloped Elliott, curling about him, shutting off his view. They were slowing, now. The roaring drum of the exhaust had dropped now to a sharp panting.

They were half-way up before he touched the reserve lever. He let it down slowly, a notch at a time, using every last inch of the momentum he had gained. Up, now, three-quarters of the way. Ben could see the rails on the bit of level going at the top. Up another train's length, slowing with each foot gained. Afar off, across the snow-blanketed country, a plume of white vapor trailed a break in the forests. That was the local, crossing the river, swinging in toward his siding.

"Go it, girl! Go it, girl!" he yelled at the engine, swinging one fist.

She shoved her nose over the crest, seeming to weave it from side to side as in distress. Her drivers slipped and spun a half turn; caught on sand, held. She began a stuttering, dying puff. The sound wavered. She seemed to stop. . . . and cleared her cylinders with a short belch. . . .

She was on top. Her last breath had turned the trick.

"Hold to it, old timer! Hold to it!" Ben croaked.

The first car gained the crest, The locomotive was on the down grade, now; the second car coming across the peak. The third car rumbled over the top and Tim Jeffers, dropping his peavey, wormed along the logs and flopped down to the brake wheel as Ben shut her off, set the brakes and with a boyish swing of one arm yanked on the whistle cord to set her voice screaming.

Back on the last car Tim clubbed brake wheels. Out on the first, Ben Elliott drove the shoe home. The ancient locomotive dug her heels in and settled back. Down and down they went on the frost slick steel, gathering speed that was as alarming as the slowing of their pace had been a moment before. But with every train length traveled Tim Jeffers was setting more brakes against the humming wheels.

She slid, she slipped, she squealed and complained and clattered her way down that final mile. They had her under control at last, and slowly they edged around the curve at the millpond, out onto the siding and to a full stop.

Ben, dropping down, ran across to the main line and held up his hand. Half a mile down the track the local puffed in toward him. The whistle sent up its cloud of steam at his signal, he heard the engineer shutting off and in minutes the train slid in, brakes grinding.

"That stuff go?" the conductor called, swinging down from the way car.

"That stuff goes!" Ben said almost reverently and turned to face Tim who was filling his pipe with unsteady hands.

It was a moment for the right word.

But Tim Jeffers was not a man of words; not of many words.

"Well, you done it," he said simply.

"Yeah. With your help."

"Still needin' a camp boss?"

"Badly!"

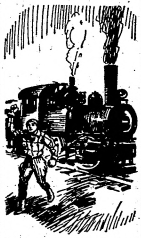
"S'pose I'd do?"

"Do! Lord, Tim, if—"

"All right. I'm hired to get out logs again. Guess I'll hit Mr. Buller for a cuppa carfee. I've rode trains now 'nd again, Ben, but of all the rides I've ever took that was what you might call th' dangdest!"

* * * * * * *

In a Minnesota lumber town a bearded man sat near the stove in a small hotel and heard the story of what was happening in distant Tincup.



Half a Mile Down the Track the Local Pulled In Toward Him.

"Know him?" another listener asked the narrator.

"Not the kid. I know Brandon, 'nd I know Tim Jeffers. Top loaded for him three winters. If Tim's back there's a hot scrap on and . . . gosh! but I like scraps."

"Mean you're pulling for Tincup?"

"I'll say I am!"

The bearded man cleared his throat.

"You think, then, that the lad's got a chance of making it against Brandon?" he asked.

"It sure looks as if he had a chance. With old Tincup shanty boys hitting back for their stamping grounds his chances are getting better. Ever been in Tincup, Martin?"

The other closed the blade of his pocket knife and pulled at the lobe of his left ear with his hand.

"I've heard of the place," he said quietly.

"Better hoist your turkey and come along with me. Likely he could find a place for a good bookkeeper."

Martin smiled oddly but made no other response.

In far flung camps and mill towns the story was being repeated, just such men were leaving jobs and turning their faces toward Tincup, known through the Lake states for the tyranny that Nicholas Brandon had exercised there so many years.

Ben, sitting with his feet on Able's desk in the justice's office, grinned broadly as he told of the latest developments on the job.

"Sixty-four men in camp this morning," he said. "Over thirty of 'em new and the best looking bunch of loggers I've seen since I was a kid."

Able glanced at a letter he had been holding.

"And with the Milwaukee people standing ready to finance us it looks as if you might, maybe, perhaps be getting ready to find it all down hill and shady, Ben. I think that interesting this particular bank is the best piece of work you've done yet."

"Nothing, Able. All I had to show was what we were doing. They can't lose with the lumber behind their notes."

"Unless Brandon finds a way.

"You've got to watch every loophole, Benny. And you've got too much for one man to do."

"Oh, it's not that bad. Things are straightening out. Tim's a wonder; Buller isn't missing a bet. We ought to keep right on stepping."

Ben rose to go and, as he did so, the door opened and Dawn McManus stepped in out of the lightly falling snow.

"Oh!" she cried in surprise. It was the first time she had seen Ben since that morning a month ago when he took the veneer logs on their mad ride to save the Hoot Owl operation from immediate insolvency. "Am I interrupting?"

"Come in, Dawn," said Able, rising.

And Elliott said: "If you are, it's nice to be interrupted."

She looked at him and, at first, her eyes held that coolness which was almost hostility but this melted and she smiled.

"You say nice things, Ben Elliott!"

"How can anyone help saying nice things to nice people?"

She made a playful mouth at him and Ben watching her as she advanced to Able's desk, thought again that he never had supposed women grew to such loveliness.

Her errand with the old justice was brief. She and Ben went out together, Dawn on her way home, Ben to finish his errands in town.

At the corner where their ways parted they stopped and Dawn hesitated in what she had been saying. Then, looking into his face, she asked:

"Does Mr. Ben Elliott ever take tea with a young woman? You know, I am beginning to think that I like to talk to you!"

"Then the risk of having it reported that I'm a lounge lizard is as nothing."

The house where Dawn lived was the house in which she had been born, a sprawling white frame structure beneath whispering hemlocks.

AWARDING OF PRIZES

The Good Will Campaign closes June 22nd, and the prizes will be awarded according to the vote standing of the Good Will Workers. The Worker having the highest number of votes will be awarded the first prize, $700.00 in cash, or, your choice of any one of three cars as advertised. The worker having the second highest numbe of votes will be awarded $500.00 i. cash, or, your choice of one of three cars as advertised. Third highest will be paid $300.00 in cash. Fourth highest $100.00 in cash and fifth highest $50.00 in cash. All other workers will have been paid a twenty percent commission in cash, daily.

The territory will be divided into two districts, number one will include every home within the city limits of Thief River Falls. District number two will include all territory outside the city of Thief River Falls. One or more of the grand prizes will be awarded in each of the two districts. Leading workers in each of the two districts are assured grand awards. City workers and country workers are in competition with one another, only in respect to the value of the three gran awards.

The workers themselves, if they wish to do so, can select the judges who will open the ballot box and count the votes at the close of the campaign.

Let it be understood that you cannot receive both a pirze and a commission. Every worker has an equal chance at winning any one of the five prizes; you will be paid a 20 per cent commission each time you make a cash report, and at the same time you will be given credit for the number of votes you have earned. If you are a prize winner, at the time the prize is awarded we will deduct the amount we have advanced you in cash commissions from the prize you win. If you decide to take a car you, will have to return the amount we have paid you in commissions. In this way we can assure everyone payment of and in proportion to what they do; the plan offers you the advantage of a daily cash settlement, which will help you to carry on the work, and to take care of your personal needs as well.

This campaign is conducted by the F. L. Nickeson Co., of Marion, Iowa. One of the largest organizations of its kind operating in the Central West. The campaign manager will be Mr. Floyd H. Nickeson.

5 BIG PRIZES

The Plan in Brief

The object of the big distribution is two-fold: primarily to increase the already large subscription list of the Thief River Falls Forum and advance subscription payments from present or new subscriptions, and at the same time afford our friends and readers an unparalleled opportunity to profit in a big way through their spare time during the next few weeks. So it is a plan that works both ways, and to the ultimate good of all concerned.

In order to gain this end quickly and advantageously, one of the most valuable and attractive lists of prizes ever offered by a local newspaper in this section of the country has been made ready for distribution among those who participate most heartily. Ambition and energy are the only requisites for success. The plan adopted is straightforward and simple and is fully outlined in this announcement.

Let it be understood at the very outset that it is not a "beauty" nor "popularity" contest, but a strictly legitimate competitive proposition for enterprising men and women, and boys and girls, and one in which no element of chance enters. One feature of this competition is the fact that there will be no losers in this race.

36 Per Cent Decrease In Number of Cattle On Feed Says Gove't

Washington, D. C., April 12 1935. —There was a decrease of about 36 per cent in the number of cattle on feed for market in the eleven Corn Belt states on April 1 this year compared with the number on the corresponding date of 1934, according to the estimate of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. This decrease is equivalent to about half a million head. The number on feed April 1 this year is the smallest for that date in many years.

The decrease was general over the Corn Belt with only two states —Ohio and Indiana—having an estimated number larger than a year earlier. The states east of the Mississippi River as a whole, had an estimated decrease of about six per cent, while the states west of that river had a decrease of about 42 per cent. The largest decreases were in the states west of the Missouri River.

Shipments of stocker and feeder cattle inspected at Stock Yards markets, into the Corn Belt states for the three months January to March inclusive this year were about 15 per cent larger than for the corresponding period in 1934 and the largest for the period since 1931. While the largest increases were in-shipments into the Eastern Corn Belt the movement into all of the western Corn Belt states except Kansas was larger than last year, and into some of the states was quite large relative to the feed supplies available. Apparently most of the cattle were for stocker purposes and not for immediate feeding. For the nine months, July 1934 to March 1935 inclusive, the inspected shipments of stocker and feeder cattle into the Corn Belt were but little different than for the corresponding period a year earlier, but were smaller than in any other similar period in the 18 years for which records are available.

Records from feeders as to the months in which their cattle on feed this year would be marketed showed the proportion they expected to market in April and May to be much smaller and the proportion to be marketed after August to be much larger than similar reports have shown in any recent year.

The estimated number on feed by states as a percentage of the number on feed April 1, 1934, are as follows:

Ohio, 110; Indiana, 115; Illinois, 90; Michigan, 90; Wisconsin 95; Minnesota, 65; Iowa, 82; Missouri, 60; South Dakota, 40; Nebraska, 42; Kansas, 35.

Corn Belt (weighted) 64.4 per cent.

NEW BONUS BILL BEING OFFERED IN U. S. SENATE

Complicated Compromise Bill Is Introduced to Defeat the Patman Bill

One long practiced trick in defeating legislation is to introduce additional measures along the same line, causing delay after delay and splitting ranks of supporters and dividing the support. This appears to be the strategy which the administration is using to defeat the Patman Bonus Bill which passed the House recently by a vote of 318 to 90 and is due this week for hearings in the Senate Committee. A new and very complicated "compromise" bonus bill has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Harrison of Mississippi, one of Roosevelt's right hand men, and chairman of the powerful Senate Finance committee. It is frankly designed to head off the 2,300 million dollar Patman measure.

The Harrison plan is to move up the maturity date of the adjusted compensation certificates to 1938, instead of 1945, and in the meantime to substitute negotiable bonds. Veterans could exchange these for cash.

However, the non-interest bearing to the veteran bonds, to be issued, would be for the cash surrender value of the certificates and not the 1938 maturity value.

Interest accumulating against the loans made by veterans on their certificates would be deducted from the cash surrender value of the bonds.

As a condition to compromise, the President insists that Congress adopt a declaration of policy against future payment of pensions to World War veterans.

Full immediate cash payment advocates have served notice they will battle in the Senate for their plan, rejecting the Harrison compromise.

The name of the play presented by this group is "Just Like a Woman."

REFUSED LIQUOR, INDIANS 'UPRISE' AT GONVICK, MINN.

Gonvick, Minn., April 22.—Gonvick, quiet little farming village near the Red Lake Indian reservation in northwestern Minnesota, Sunday was the scene of the first Indian "uprising" since the town's first white settler arrived with his ox team in 1896.

Some 50 Indians and their squaws, aroused because Gonvick merchants would not sell then liquor, precipitated several street fights that ended with deputy sheriffs from Bagley arresting about a dozen 'braves."

Seven of the Indians were jailed at Bagley on charges of disorderly conduct. Witnesses said most of the Indians were intoxicated before the fighting started.

GOVERNOR VETOES THE OMNIBUS BILL

Hopes for saddling a "sales tax" on the people in the form of the "Omnibus Bill" were shattered late last evening when Governor Olson vetoed the bil lafter it had passed both the house and senate by small margins. This action by the Governor was not unlooked for because he had made it plain to the legislators that he would veto any sales tax proposal they put up to him.

A bill introduced by Mark Nolan (F-L) of Gilbert, to change the date of the primary from May to late in the fall failed to pass the house at one time earlier in the session with the date for the primary being set for the third Monday in September. After passing the house the senate passed the bill setting the date for the primary as the fourth Monday in September; a joint committee was made and the committee reported the last Monday in August as being the date they agreed upon in the committee. After reporting the bill out, the senate passed the bill and it was then returned to the house where it was nuexpectedly killed yesterday by a vote of 70 to 53.

The State Senate, which has the power to confirm or reject appointments to the Minnesota Ed. Commission, and who recently rejected the two names submitted to them by the Governor, those of Miss Rood and Mrs. LeSueur, now has the names of two more appointments of the Governor to decide upon for these appointments. Governor Olson, late yesterday afternoon, submitted the names of Mrs. Colgren of St. Paul and Miss Nelson of Minneapolis to the senate and the confirmation or rejection of these names is expected before the Legislature adjourns. Both of these women apepared before the Senate in behalf of Mrs. LeSueur and Miss Rood at the time the senate was considering their appointments.

According to the Mineapolis Star Commentator's broadcast this morning a filibuster, "started by Marius Waldal of Plummer, a bitter opponent of the Farmer-Labor administration, killed the bill which would have permitted an extension of the Minnesota's Drivers' License Division." The tax rate, because of the legislature's failure to pass a bill that the Governor would sign to relieve the tax burden on property owners, will probably be increased three or four mills, acocrding to the radio report this morning.

Missionaries Evacuate War-Torn Area of China

PROCLAMATION

It is fitting that the return of spring should turn our thoughts to the problem of preserving and improving the abundant natural resources of our State. In view of the catastrophic effects of the drouth and the ensuing misery, we cannot remain indifferent to the nation-wide conservation movement. It is important that we understand and support the work that is being done in Minnesota, toward adequate water and erosion control.

The very existence of the state as a leading agricultural region has been threatened by the cumulative effect of decades of exploitation. If we do not lend our support to the conservation work being carried on by the federal and state government, we are placing in jeopardy our most precious possession, the land on which we live and depend. The nation has finally awakened to the need of replanting our denuded forest lands, of preventing soil erosion, and of maintaining our water supply.

The federal government has taken the lead in fostering this movement and by so doing has given employment to thousands of our youth. It is essential for our welfare and for the welfare of future generations that we continue to cooperate in this great work.

In order to further an understanding of the need and significance of conservation work, it is proper that one week of the year be set aside for the purpose of impressing upon our citizenry the far-reaching benefits that a planned program of conservation will insure. Thousands of our citizens have been given hope and encouragement through the employment opportunities afforded by conservation work.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Floyd B. Olson, Governor of Minnesota, do hereby designate May 5th to May 11th as

MINNESOTA CONSERVATION WEEK

and Friday, May 3rd, as

ARBOR AND BIRD DAY

I urge that schools, churches, and civic groups observe this week and this day with ceremonies appropriate to the occasion.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Minnesota to be affixed this 23rd day of April, 1935.

FLOYD B. OLSON,
Governor of Minnesota.

(GREAT SEAL)
Attest: Mike Holm, Secretary of State.

COUNCIL CALLS SPECIAL BOND ELECTION 28TH

Voters Asked to Authorize a Bond Issue of Sixty Thousand Dollars

DIESEL UNIT CONSIDERED

Proposal Would Sanction An Interest Rate of Not Over 4 1-2 Per Cent

A special election is in the offing, according to action taken by the city council last Tuesday evening, to let the people decide on whether or not the city should issue bonds to finance the purchase of additional power equipment for the plant. The date set for the election is May 28th, at which time the same judges that acted before will continue their duties.

Clerks of election were named as follows: 1st ward, Florence Gulrud and Mrs. Gust Crown; 2nd ward, Avis Aakre and Mrs. Ida Urdahl; 3rd ward, Mrs. E.E. Zeh and Mrs. Roy Belcher; 4th ward, E. M. Benes and Mrs. L. G. Larson. These were appointed by the city council last Tuesday evening.

The special election will call upon the people to decide by ballot whether or not bonds shall be floated, not to exceed $60,000, to buy a Diesel unit for the power plant, the bonds to bear interest of not more than 4½ per cent. The council will then decide, according to P. O. Myrum president of the council, on the size of the unit to be purchased, providing the people see fit to vote for the bond issue. As it is now planned bids will be called for on four different sized units of 500 h. p., 750 h. p., 1,000 h. p., and 1,200 h. p. If the bond issue goes through, Mr. Myhrum said, the council would then take steps to try to obtain a Federal grant to purchase the equipment.

Other business before the meeting Tuesday evening was the appropriation of money into the mayor's contingent fund and the arrangement of signers of the lease for the rental of the Rockstead place. L. Rockstead has signified his intention to re-rent the place at the same figures as last year. Tax adjustments took up the remainder of the time with one application receiving favorable action by the council, that of Elizabeth Sandberg was granted, allowing a twenty-five per cent reduction in her taxes.

Lloyd C. Lundberg, 21-year-old son of Phillip Lundberg of this city, was found dead about three miles northeast of the city Saturday, April 27th. Louie Wortz was walking by the straw-stack, where Lloyd was found, and discovered the gruesome body, which had been missing for about four weeks; the body was in a sitting position with a 12-gauge shotgun across his knees with the top of his head blown off, apparently by an accidental discharge of the gun.

All Workers Win in Big Forum Subscription Drive

G. T. Lindsten Speaks at R. R. Men's Meeting Sunday P. M.

G. T. Lindsten, legislative board member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and chairman of the Board, spoke to a group of members of the "Big 4" last Sunday afternoon at the Masonic Temple on the legislative record of the Minnesota legislature. He also told of how the Brotherhood bills were treated by House and Senate.

Farmer-Laborites of Four Counties Meet Here Sun., Apr. 28

Delegates from four counties met at the court house on Sunday and organized the Seven County Farmer-Labor Educational Forum. A general discussion of party and association problems was held and it was decided to hold regular meetings at this city. The next meeting to be held Sunday, June 2nd. The possibility of sponsoring a seven-county picnic this summer was also broached and was received with favorable comment. This question will be further discussed at the June meeting. A letter was sent to Gov. Floyd B. Olson commending him on his veto of the "Omnibus" Tax Bill.

G. T. Lindsten, representing the Railroad Trainmen on the state legislative committee was in the city meeting with the trainmen's organization and attended the meeting of the Farmer-Laborites, giving a short talk after the trainmen's meeting. The past legislature was mostly concerned with three vital questions, Mr. Linsten said, they were tax limitation, a sales tax, and discrediting Governor Olson and his administration. Mr. Linsten paid some splendid compliments to Eric Friberg, of Roseau county, Lewis Herfindahl of Swift county, and Edgar Hagen of Chippewa county for the splendid leadership of the progressive forces they are developing. "These farmers are real leaders and take an active and effective part in the debate on the floor of the House," Mr. Linsten stated. "I don't know what to think or say about the situation here in our district," he said, referring to the local election results. "How in the world could you send anything like Waldal to the legislature?" By far the more capable men in the legislature are found among the progressives, Mr. Lindsten stated, but in this session they were simply rolled under by a compact majority of conservatives.

IUAW Will Hold Meeting at Court House Sunday

Workers Off To A Fine Start In Both Districts In Big Circulation Campaign

The various workers in the Forum's Subscription Contest are getting off to a fine stare in their work of subscription getting. Although no candidate has secured any great amount of business, many workers have been very active among their many friends and acquaintances.

Every worker in the drive is a winner; they either get paid very liberally in the form of a prize or receive a large commission for their work of subscription getting. There are no losers, every one is paid in proportion to the amount he or she is able to accomplish. What an individual is able to accomplish will be found to be in direct proportion to the amount of actual work a candidate is able to do. Most of us have had an occasion to already know that the finer things in life are had as a result of persistent labors. To the ones that first apply themselves to this line of thought the fine prizes will surely go, beause they will enter the work with a determination that cannot be whipped.

There is Still Plenty of Time To Enroll

Our experience over a long period of time has been that a winning majority of votes cannot be accomplished in the first week. We believe that this is because the average person is reluctant to give their subscription to any of the candidates until they have been able to determine definitely who the other candidates may be. This issue of the Forum bears the list of candidates that have enrolled up to the present time. There is still plenty of time to enroll in the big drive and win one of the big prizes. You have nothing to lose by giving the work a try. You are either paid a prize or a liberal commission for any work you may do.

You will not know what you have passed up unless you give it a try.

Phone, write or call at the Forum office (Campaign Department) for further details.

Refer to the advertisement on another page of this issue for a detail of the prizes offered.

PROCLAMATION

It is fitting that the return of spring should turn our thoughts to the problem of preserving and improving the abundant natural resources of our State. In view of the catastrophic effects of the drouth and the ensuing misery, we cannot remain indifferent to the nation-wide conservation movement. It is important that we understand and support the work that is being done in Minnesota, toward adequate water and erosion control.

The very existence of the state as a leading agricultural region has been threatened by the cumulative effect of decades of exploitation. If we do not lend our support to the conservation work being carried on by the federal and state government, we are placing in jeopardy our most precious possession, the land on which we live and depend. The nation has finally awakened to the need of replanting our denuded forest lands, of preventing soil erosion, and of maintaining our water supply.

The federal government has taken the lead in fostering this movement and by so doing has given employment to thousands of our youth. It is essential for our welfare and for the welfare of future generations that we continue to cooperate in this great work.

In order to further an understanding of the need and significance of conservation work, it is proper that one week of the year be set aside for the purpose of impressing upon our citizenry the far-reaching benefits that a planned program of conservation will insure. Thousands of our citizens have been given hope and encouragement through the employment opportunities afforded by conservation work.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Floyd B. Olson, Governor of Minnesota, do hereby designate May 5th to May 11th as

and Friday, May 3rd, as

ARBOR AND BIRD DAY

I urge that schools, churches, and civic groups observe this week and this day with ceremonies appropriate to the occasion.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Minnesota to be affixed this 23rd day of April, 1935.

FLOYD B. OLSON,
Governor of Minnesota.

(GREAT SEAL)
Attest: Mike Holm, Secretary of State.

COUNCIL CALLS SPECIAL BOND ELECTION 28TH

Voters Asked to Authorize a Bond Issue of Sixty Thousand Dollars

DIESEL UNIT CONSIDERED

Proposal Would Sanction An Interest Rate of Not Over 4 1-2 Per Cent

A special election is in the offing, according to action taken by the city council last Tuesday evening, to let the people decide on whether or not the city should issue bonds to finance the purchase of additional power equipment for the plant. The date set for the election is May 28th, at which time the same judges that acted before will continue their duties.

Clerks of election were named as follows: 1st ward, Florence Gulrud and Mrs. Gust Crown; 2nd ward, Avis Aakre and Mrs. Ida Urdahl; 3rd ward, Mrs. E.E. Zeh and Mrs. Roy Belcher; 4th ward, E. M. Benes and Mrs. L. G. Larson. These were appointed by the city council last Tuesday evening.

The special election will call upon the people to decide by ballot whether or not bonds shall be floated, not to exceed $60,000, to buy a Diesel unit for the power plant, the bonds to bear interest of not more than 4½ per cent. The council will then decide, according to P. O. Myrum president of the council, on the size of the unit to be purchased, providing the people see fit to vote for the bond issue. As it is now planned bids will be called for on four different sized units of 500 h. p., 750 h. p., 1,000 h. p., and 1,200 h. p. If the bond issue goes through, Mr. Myhrum said, the council would then take steps to try to obtain a Federal grant to purchase the equipment.

Other business before the meeting Tuesday evening was the appropriation of money into the mayor's contingent fund and the arrangement of signers of the lease for the rental of the Rockstead place. L. Rockstead has signified his intention to re-rent the place at the same figures as last year. Tax adjustments took up the remainder of the time with one application receiving favorable action by the council, that of Elizabeth Sandberg was granted, allowing a twenty-five per cent reduction in her taxes.

All Workers Win in Big Forum Subscription Drive

G. T. Lindsten, legislative board member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and chairman of the Board, spoke to a group of members of the "Big 4" last Sunday afternoon at the Masonic Temple on the legislative record of the Minnesota legislature. He also told of how the Brotherhood bills were treated by House and Senate.

Farmer-Laborites of Four Counties Meet Here Sun., Apr. 28

Delegates from four counties met at the court house on Sunday and organized the Seven County Farmer-Labor Educational Forum. A general discussion of party and association problems was held and it was decided to hold regular meetings at this city. The next meeting to be held Sunday, June 2nd. The possibility of sponsoring a seven-county picnic this summer was also broached and was received with favorable comment. This question will be further discussed at the June meeting. A letter was sent to Gov. Floyd B. Olson commending him on his veto of the "Omnibus" Tax Bill.

G. T. Lindsten, representing the Railroad Trainmen on the state legislative committee was in the city meeting with the trainmen's organization and attended the meeting of the Farmer-Laborites, giving a short talk after the trainmen's meeting. The past legislature was mostly concerned with three vital questions, Mr. Linsten said, they were tax limitation, a sales tax, and discrediting Governor Olson and his administration. Mr. Linsten paid some splendid compliments to Eric Friberg, of Roseau county, Lewis Herfindahl of Swift county, and Edgar Hagen of Chippewa county for the splendid leadership of the progressive forces they are developing. "These farmers are real leaders and take an active and effective part in the debate on the floor of the House," Mr. Linsten stated. "I don't know what to think or say about the situation here in your district," he said, referring to the local election results. "How in the world could you send anything like Waldal to the legislature?" By far the most capable men in the legislature are found among the progressives, Mr. Lindsten stated, but in this session they were simply rolled under by a compact majority of conservatives.

Workers Off To A Fine Start In Both Districts In Big Circulation Campaign

The various workers in the Forum's Subscription Contest are getting off to a fine stare in their work of subscription getting. Although no candidate has secured any great amount of business, many workers have been very active among their many friends and acquaintances.

Every worker in the drive is a winner; they either get paid very liberally in the form of a prize or receive a large commission for their work of subscription getting. There are no losers, every one is paid in proportion to the amount he or she is able to accomplish. What an individual is able to accomplish will be found to be in direct proportion to the amount of actual work a candidate is able to do. Most of us have had an occasion to already know that the finer things in life are had as a result of persistent labors. To the ones that first apply themselves to this line of thought the fine prizes will surely go, beause they will enter the work with a determination that cannot be whipped.

There is Still Plenty of Time To Enroll

Our experience over a long period of time has been that a winning majority of votes cannot be accomplished in the first week. We believe that this is because the average person is reluctant to give their subscription to any of the candidates until they have been able to determine definitely who the other candidates may be. This issue of the Forum bears the list of candidates that have enrolled up to the present time. There is still plenty of time to enroll in the big drive and win one of the big prizes. You have nothing to lose by giving the work a try. You are either paid a prize or a liberal commission for any work you may do.

You will not know what you have passed up unless you give it a try.

Phone, write or call at the Forum office (Campaign Department) for further details.

Refer to the advertisement on another page of this issue for a detail of the prizes offered.

AUTO FATALITIES SHOOT UP TO A NEW HEIGHT

By W. G. Calderwood

The Bureau of Census in its monthly report on auto fatalities shows an increase of 27.6 per cent for the last four-week period as compared with the corresponding weeks in 1934. There are many factors which contribute to this tragic record. One of these is the sober driver who has only "taken a drink or two." By no extreme application of the word can such person be called drunk. Yet by every scientific test they are intoxicated—that is, while they are perfectly sober, yet the narcotic or benumbing effect of the alcohol has definitely impaired the functioning of certain mental and muscular processes.

In Berlin, Germany, every driver's license is accompanied by a cautionary card, which reads, in part, "The smallest quantity of alcohol is injurious to the motor driver. It is a widespread error that small quantities have no deleterious effect. On the contrary, they cause at first an increase in self-confidence . . They weaken one's capacity for swift discrimination and reaction in the presence of danger." Scientific tests have been carried on by skilled physical scientists, in every advanced nation, and all reach the same conclusion—namely, that a drinker who is not drunk is incapable of normal perceptions and coordination.

Such authorities as Dr. Miles of Yale University and Dr. Heise, pathologist of Columbia hospital, charge alcohol with 25 per cent of all traffic fatalities. This would average a traffic fatality, chargeable to drink, every 47 minutes of the year. Robbins B. Stoeckel, highway commissioner of Connecticut and an outstanding highway authority, epitomizes the situation in the statement that "The most dangerous driver on the highway is not the drunk, but the man who has had only a drink or two, and still believes himself to be in full possesssion of his faculties."

Junior Short Course At N. W. School to Be Held Week June 17-22

Plans for the annual Junior Short Course to be held at the Northwest School of Agriculture during the week of June 17 to 22 are rapidly taking form, according to District Club Leader H. A. Pflughoeft. Because of the marked increase in attendance during recent years it has been decided to hold two short courses in place of a single session as has been the case in the past. Four-H club members from the southern Valley counties will attend June 17 to 19, while the northern counties will be in attendance June 20 to 22nd.

Southern counties include Clay, Otter Tail, Becker, Norman, Polk and Mahnomen. The northern group of counties will include Kittson, Roseau, Lake of the Woods, Marshall, Penington, Red Lake, and Clearwater. By arranging two separate short courses Mr. Pflughoeft expects to hold each group to a maximum of not over six hundred, thus accomodating approximately twelve hundred club members during the week.

In addition to the regular class and laboratory work in agriculture and home economics, a special recreational program is being arranged by Coach R. J. Christgau. Other features will include special group stunts, county contests and entertainment. Mr. Pflughoeft has also announced a special conference of 4-H club leaders to be addressed by State Club Leader T. A. Erickson, and other leading officials. Registration of club members will be supervised by J. W. Mlinar, Northwest School registrar, and members of the school staff will assist with the educational program.

Landscape Planning for Public Parks Is Urged By N. W. School Expert

Definite landscape plans for public parks must be adopted and steadfastly adhered to if the greatest possible long time returns are to be obtained. According to T. M. McCall, Northwest School and Station horticulturist, the first step is to determine the general use to which the park is to be put; then adequate walks, drives, and parking places should be provided.

The informal or natural grouping of trees, shrubs and flowers is usually best suited for the city block or irregular shaped parks. On the other hand, small areas at street intersections can be planted according to farmal design.

Trees in parks should be grouped to provide adequate shade but not so dense as to prevent the development of a satisfactory lawn. General use of evergreen trees and shrubs should be made to furnish color and protection throughout the year. Since evergreen trees should not be trimmed, they are most useful in background and side-ground plantings. The Black Hills spruce has proven to be one of the best all-around evergreens for prairie planting. Other desirable evergreen trees include the Colorado Blue spruce, red cedar, arbor vitae, Scotch pine, and Dwarf Mugho pine.

Shrubs appropriately selected and placed add much to the attractiveness of park areas. A wide variety of native shrubs are available and should be selected for form, flowering habits and desirable color effects from both stem and flower. The common dogwood, highbush cranberry, Juneberry, Buffalo berry, blackhaw, wild gooseberry and currant are very useful for this purpose. The thorn apple, chokecherry, wild plum and pincherry, all low growing trees, blend in well with the shrub plantings.

In most cases, park plantings cannot be completed in a single year; hence the importance of a long-time program.

URGES PEAT LAND FOR GROWING EXTRA HAY

Farmers in a pinch about growing enough hay this summer should appreciate that peat land, properly seeded and fertilized, has wonderful possibilities, says George H. Nesom, extension soils specialist, University Farm, St. Paul. Mixtures of clovers with timothy or other grasses will produce a good crop of hay the first season, he explains.

The land may be broken, the fertilizer applied, the seedbed prepared and the seed sown without a nurse crop before June 1. Either of two slightly different plans may be used on peat that is very weedy. Plan one is to surface cultivate until about the middle or the end of June and then seed the hay without a nurse crop. The other crop is to sow about half to wo-thirds of a seding of oats, along with the timothy and clover mixture. Do this early, first seeding the oats and immediately afterward seeding the hay mixture. The whole crop can be cut for hay soon after the oats head. Sometime sa second cutting can be made.

For success in growing hay on peat, four points are important. They are a good seedbed, which usually means plowing; proper fertilization; a good seed mixture and rolling the land after seeding making it easier to operate haying machinery and avoiding lumps of peat getting mixed with the hay.

Except in northwestern Minnesota, most peats will need both phosphate and potash. Stable manure top dressing will do, or commercial fertilizer may be broadcast and worked in with the preparation of the seedbed. Rates of application may vary. For a home mixed material use one part 45 per cent superphosphate to two parts 50 per cent muriate of potash and apply from 150 to 200 pounds per acre. Ready-mixed 0-12-24 fertilizer may be put on at the rate of 200 to 400 pounds per acre.

Seed mixtures also may vary. For peat that is quite wet, alsike clover is better than medium red, the latter being preferable for drier locations. A common mixture is 6 6pounds of timothy with 4 pounds each of alsike and medium red clover. Twelve to 15 lbs. per acre of this mixture should be seeded. Bromo grass, red top and reed canary grass are also good grasses fo rpeat land. If cheaper, red top could be used in place of timothy in the mixture given. Bromo or reed canary grass should be used without a nurse crop.

Facts Farmers Need About Pastures Free

If farmers in most parts of Minnesota ever needed advice on pastures, they need it now. "Pasture Plants and Pasture Combinations," which is Minnesota Agricultural Extension Circular 40, gives a raft of suggestions by Ralph F. Crim and A. C. Arny, of the University Farm agronomy staff.

What kind of grasses and clovers to use for pasture, suitable seed mixtures and combinations, soiling and hogging off crops, emergency pasture crops and combinations, and fodder and silage crops, are discussed briefly, clearly and to the point.

Seedbed preparation and seeding are explained, and a scheme is outlined for arranging a pasture system to provide plenty of green feed throughout the whole growing season.

This circular is worth plenty of dollars to any farmer, but he can have a copy free from his county agent, R. M. Douglass, or by writing the Bulletin Ocice, University Farm, St. Paul.

NAZI RULERS STIFLE VOICE OF SAAR WORKERS

Saarbruecken, (TIS) — Bitter disappointment, growing difficulties and steadily tightening Nazi oppression are the lot of the Saarlanders who only a few weeks ago cast their votes enthusiastically for the return to the Fatherland. The outcome of the Danzig vote is greeted here as a confirmation of what Saar observers have consistently pointed out, namely, that the plebiscite choice confronting the Saar people was not for and against Hitlerism, but simply their allegiance to Germany. In Danzig, on the contrary, the question was clear cut and there are many Saarlanders who point out that the Saar vote has been misconstrued. With a choice similar to Danzig, the outcome might have been different, they say.

In any case, the consequences of the Saar plebiscite bear out the darkest predictions. Not content with the destruction of the old trade unions, and the smashing of the opposition parties, the Saar government immediately ordered the introduction of the German labor law, but with the proviso that elections of the workers councils provided under the same law and now taking place in Germany, should not be enforced in the Saar territory. The German Labor front has justified this act with the characteristic explanation that the election of workers councils and shop stewards "needs a lengthy and careful preparation of the working masses in the Nazi sense." In other words, the Nazis are well aware that the Saar workers are opposed to their dictatorial rule, and that they might turn the elections into an open demonstration against Nazism

Neither employment nor wages have been increased, despite the extravagant promises of the Nazis. On the other hand, prices are steadily rising and the benefits to which the workers are entitled by virtue of their trade union membership are steadily reduced.

"Through its sales tax features, this bill would actually increase the burden of the farmer who would pay about 36 per cent of the sales tax, which is 6 per cent more than he now pays under the property tax."—From Governor Olson's message vetoing the Omnibus Bill.

THE COMMUNTIY GAINS—IN UNITY

The city council and the Civic and Commerce association has apparently finally come around to agreeing with the Progressive group which eighteen months ago maintained that another power unit should be added to the local power plant. It would seem that this is our Golden Opportunity to say "we told you so," but we desist. We are glad that after having acquainted themselves with the facts, they have the timber to admit their past error. That must be said to their credit.

However, we feel constrained to point out that at the time this group secured an injunction restraining the past council from entering into contract for another power unit, and by their action prevented the city from securing a federal grant of fifteen thousand dollars which would have defrayed about thirty per cent of the cost of the new unit, the same information which has now changed their mind, was at their disposal. We at that time supported the then council in their stand for the addition, after having spent a few hours with the city clerk and the superintendent of water and light going over the city's records. The facts at that time justified and addition to the power facilities, and the records were available to any citizen who cared to make an investigation of the conditions. It is deplorable that men who have been successful in their own business to the extent that this group has been, should be so far led astray by a political "Mr. Punch" and an editorial would-be maker of judges, senators and congressmen that they refuse to even consider the facts.

Time has disproved the charges of waste, inefficiency, refusal to cooperate and gross mismanagement which was hurled at city employees and city council a year and a half ago. Now we are apparently agreed that an addition to the power plant and a revision of light, heat and power rates to place them on a scientific basis is necessary. To that extent we have progressed far. If the council will now step out and secure a federal grant to defray one-third of the cost of addition, we will heartily support the move for expansion and revision of rates, feeling that the loss in time and the advance in the price of equipment is more than offset by the unity and cooperation in civic affairs that has been attained. We should even try to overcome a justifiable reluctance to trust the purchase of a $60,000 power unit in the hands of a council which required only four minutes to consider spending over nine thousand dollars for a fire truck, which we are told could not be insured for more than six thousand dollars. We assume that their tenure in office has taught them more than one valuable lesson.

AN ACT OF HEROISM

While the conservative majority in the state senate shied panicky at any and all proposals that in any way resembled "socialism," it must be admitted that Senator Tungseth distinguished himself with signal bravery. In voting for the measure which would extend the municipal power line limits from 25 to 30 miles he in effect declared himself willing to go 5 miles along the road to "Socialism."

Four and twenty sailors went to kill a snail,
And only one amongst them dared to touch its tail.

WHY NOT PUT HIM ON THE PAYROLL?

The Minnesota Leader says that it has had an increase in its subscription list by over 1200 subscribers as a direct result of "Get-by-Rufus" Hitchcock's republican press agency. That's a pretty good batting average. We would suggest that the Leader puts him on the payroll. Maybe he could get enough subscribers to make the paper self-supporting and take the load off the boys who are donating to the sustaining fund.

THE PRESIDENT IS OPTIMISTIC

The president's recent "fireside talk" like those that have gone before seemed fairly to exude optimism. We wonder, if in the face of past disappointments, his optimism is as genuine as he would have the people believe. While we certainly do not share the belief of those who seem to see imminent disaster for the entire nation, neither can we seen anything in the president's present program that can be more potent as a vehicle with which to usher in prosperity than the hundred and one rabbits he has pulled out of the hat in the past. Last year he assured us that by 1935 we would indeed have Miss Prosperity with us again, and now, he assures us that the fickle Mademoiselle will arrive in 1936. We hope that we may be pardoned for being just the least bit sceptical. His repeated assurances are beginning to taste too much like the "just around the corner" hash we were being fed so copiously during the late, but not lamented, Republican regime.

Frankly, we must say that we can not see in anything the president has proposed in the past, nor in his present proposals that touches one single fundamental issue.

And we are quite reconciled to the idea of having to wait for a new administration that is willing to face the issues as they are and apply the proper remedies. But, we do not doubt that the patient will be kept alive with the president's "mustard plasters" until that time comes.

HOMESTEAD TAX EXEMPTION
(Tyler Journal)

The Iowa legislature has passed a bill exempting from taxation homesteads up to $2,500 valuation Such a program has been widely advocated in Minnesota by the Farmer-Labor party, but it does not appear that our legislature is interested in the proposal, except in finding means to block the move.

Iowa is predominantly an agricultural state. The state has seen its farm homes pass from nearly 100 per cent farmer-ownership to about 35 per cent at the present times. Sanely, the legislature realized that homestead exemption is one great step in the direction of increasing this percentage. Real tax relief will result, but it will not be tax relief to those interests that have amassed the 65 per cent of the land in their own hands.

While the Minnesota legislature talks glibly about tax relief, and removing the tax burden from property, it is doing nothing at all in the direction of relieving home owners more than it proposes to relieve absentee owners.

WHAT KIND OF A NEW PARTY?
(Farmer-Labor Progressive)

From all quarters comes the demand for a United new party. The voters are jumping off the New Deal bandwagon by the tens of thousands every day. They see their need of a new deck rather than a new deal.

One of the most discouraging things one meets is the tendency of these disillusioned voters to jump for another program of half-way measures. The present Roosevelt New Deal is failing because it has refused to face the irrepressible issue of the present profit system versus abundant production for use. It is seeking to patch up an old garment which is outworn and should be discarded. The present system by large holding companies and monopoly control has concentrated over four-fifths of our wealth in the pockets of a handful of our people, and killed the purchasing power of the many. It is economically unsound and cannot possibly be saved. Any effort to save the profit system will eventually result in Fascism. Fascism is failing everywhere in Europe and it will fail here.

The irrepressible issue of the profit system versus a socially planned economy with plentiful production for use, is becoming as clear as was the issue of slavery. We must make our choice. We cannot have both. We want a new party, but it would be disastrous to launch such a party unless it is definitely opposed to the profit system and is committed to a new social order that will bring the abundance that it is possible to provide. We must not straddle the fence. Are we for or against the profit system? The new party must answer that question.

NO PUBLICITY
(Minnesota Union Advocate)

The daily press is quick to grab at huge advertising contracts with the power trust to spread propaganda against any government interference with so-called holding companies. Perhaps this explains why there was no general publicity given to a report issued last week by a legislative committee in New York which has been probing into the earnings of certain public utility corporations in New York.

The report reveals the fact that one Ellis L. Phillips and a group of associates purchased the Rochester Gas & Electric company in 1928 along with some other properties. About $100,000,000 was involved in the transaction, every penny of which was put up by the public. Stock in the holding company figured in the stock of that year and 1929 when everything crashed. But in that one year Phillips and his associates netted a profit of $34,-000,000. And they had not put up a thin dime to make this cleaning.

There was no publicity given to this little deal because it constitutes a valid reason for the absolute elimination and outlawing of every other holding company that operates on the same basis.

PASS THE PATMAN BILL
(Minneapolis Labor Review)

Progress of the Pattman bill in the House of Representatives to pay ex-service men their adjusted compensation, commonly known as the bonus, was a matter of pleasure to all trade unionists.

Throughout this struggle for just a mead of justice for the servicemen, organized labor has steadfastly aided in bringing about the payment of this long overdue adjusted compensation.

It is to be hoped that the Senate will hasten to give its approval to the Patman bill, and that if President Roosevelt vetoes it, that that body will join with the House in overriding the veto.

Already veterans are planning to expend this money, when received, in ways that are bound to make a lot of employment.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, who on many occasions, have aided organized labor on the legislative and economic field, are to be commended for their refusal to be discouraged and their indomitable courage.

In heart and action, the trade unions are with the ex-service men in their campaign for the payment of the adjusted compensation.

AMERICAN DICTATORS
(St. Paul Daily News)

"PWA money has never gone to build up any political machine and it won't be used by Sen. Long to further his share-the-wealth plan."

Sec. Harold I. Ickes, who is dishing out some of the $4,880,000,000 public works job-relief money, is speaking about the $1,800,000 allotment for Louisiana.

"Sec. Ickes can go slam-bang to hell for all I care . . . We are sick and tired of these Washington messages. We are doing the government of the United States a favor when we let them do business with us."

Sen. Huey Long, Louisiana Kingfish, is answering, as befits the only actual dictator of an American state.

Sec. Ickes is an optimist if he really believes that none of the public works money "has gone to build up a political machine." These billions will no doubt contribute materially to the success of the next Democratic campaign as they have already helped.

Sen. Long utters a partial truth when he says "we are doing the government of the United States a favor when we let them do business with us." The federal government has been having a hard time to find enough "worthwhile" projects giving jobs upon which its huge appropriations can be spent.

Just a couple of dictators paying their respects to each other..

A DUD
(The Minneapolis Star)

Unless a miracle happens the 1935 legislature will adjourn next week with next to nothing accomplished for the good of Minnesota.

The session will have amounted to little but a long political powwow financed by Minnesota taxpayers to the tune of several hundred thousand dollars.

Campaign promises have been brazenly ignored.

The loudly heralded investigations of state administration haven't bothered with more than a couple of departments and have yielded about the same sort of minor scandal that a hostile board of inquiry could find in any governmental operation involving large expenditure. t is not necessary to belittle what was uncovered to admit it seemed petty as compared with what had been promised.

The session has been a striking example of the difference between politics and statesmanship.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

STATEMENT BY THE NATIONAL OFFICER

Two resolutions providing for amendments to the Constitutions of the United States relating to Prohibition, introduced by Senator Morris Sheppard, are pending in the Congress.

One provides for Federal Constitutional Prohibition of the liquor business as did the Eighteenth. This resolution is much stronger than the former amendment, substiting "alcoholic" for "intoxicating" and with other charges. (Text in the Union Signal of February 9, 1935).

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is pledged to "the abolition of the liquor traffic" both by our constitution and by the acts of our conventions, including that of 1934. It will therefore give its support to this resolution.

The second resolution provides for an Enabling Act. It empowers the Congress, if it so desires, to pass a statutory measure prohibiting the liquor traffic. It is a sort of Local Option in a national sense. The support of such a measure was discussed at our last National W.C.T.U. convention and was opposed.

The Farmers' Union at Washington

Washington, D. C., April 25.—The Bill which provides for amending the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and among other things provides for a correction in the method of figuring parity, which may bring to the wheat producers approximately eleven cents per bushel additional or about forty-seven million dollars, was reported out of committee yesterday. This bill also provides for licensing processors when two-thirds of the producers sign a marketing agreement. There is much adverse publicity about the licenses. No licenses can be put into effect until—

(1) Two-thirds producers affected sign up for it,

(2) Public hearings must be held before the Secretary,

(3) Approved by the President. Licenses do not affect retail stores. This license will enable the Administration to inquire into prices and profits of the distributors and processors, and will enable the producer to receive a larger share of the consumers' dollar. Swift & Co., have made the biggest holler, and in 1934 made the highest per cent profit, on their sales, of any year during the last ten. No wonder they are fighting the license.

Our Dairy Conference of April 19 was well attended by members of Congress, Department of Agriculture, and representatives of other farm organizations, including dairy cooperatives. At a conference held the next day with the dairy division, the following partial program was outlined.

Limit agricultural imports to a quota basis, determined by a 1930 to 1934 average, plus a flexible tariff imposed to maintain prices of dairy products at parity. Licensing importers of agricultural commodities to control their practices. These are points that organized agriculture has fought for for years. This requires an amendment to the Agricultural Adjustment Act. A fund of $25,000,-000 was proposed for the purchase of surplus dairy products, to stabilize prices, and a small equalization fee assessed on the industry to maintain the fund.

Under the provisions of the seed loan bill recently passed by Congress, it is mandatory that the farmer give a lien on cash crops and in the case of feed crops, a mortgage on livestock. Farmers in the drouth area, who have exhausted their credit, can not obtain loans for feed crops such as grass seed, emergency pasture, hay and feed grain.

The committee with the assistance of Congressman Hull, contacted Department officials and after discussing this problem, Mr. Sanderson (Congressman Hull's secretary) and Mr. Hones were asked to draft a program to meet the situation. The program submitted suggested that rural rehabilitation through FERA make available at once on open notes, seed to farmers, who could not qualify under the emergency seed loan act, and to empower local committees to issue orders on the dealers for seed as soon as the application was approved by them; the rural rehabilitation plan to be worked out later. This program was accepted and was to be put into operation the next day.

A conference was held yesterday attended by this committee, representatives of flax growers of California, flax crushers, linoleum manufacturers and representatives of the Department of Agriculture, to iron out as far as possible any differences that may exist. This committee; the flax growers of California and the flax crushers will support the bill, while the linoleum and paint manufacturers will oppose the bill in its present form. The bill contemplates increasing flax production and giving growers a benefit payment which based on a production of 50 per cent of our consumption will return to the farmer parity price. t also carries the crop insurance feature. Last year we grew less than one-third of our flax requirements, the other two-thirds being supplied by imports of foreign flax and oils. This bill contemplates the correction of this and its supporters hope to be able to produce at least one-half o four requirements by 1937 which is about all we ever produced.

We are experiencing difficulty because most of our congressmen from the spring wheat states are more interested in some of their own pet measures.

Failure to pass this bill would mean a loss of several million dollars. Write your Senators and Congressmen to support the Flax Bill.

Spring Petery

Now is the time for all good (and bad) poets to come to the aid of their flowers, bees, showers, trees, girls, eyes, curls, skies, etc., etc., in a rising crescendo, which culminates in the heat of July, when it all evaporates in the drouth.

Society, an Organism

Old philosophers used to compare human society to a beehive or an anthill; and for centuries we have been given these examples from the animal kingdom as a goal for human endeavor. Now we know that the comparatively simple government of a beehive on an anthill would not fit modern conditions at all. One who has studied botany will find a better counterpart in a plant. A tree, for instance, represents the acme of planned activity: a multitude of inter-dependent individuals (cells), each with his specialized task, working on the basis of "All for one, one for all." A tree more truthfully exemplifies society in this respect also; that it can grow, sending out branches in one direction and roots in another, its capacity for growth very great.

In a tree, as well as in society, we see the need for co-ordination of effort—co-operation, in other words. Not one cell stands out as the "center of things"; by working together, one group of cells started the seedling. As the thing grew, new varieties of cells arose, to fit new needs. The heritage of team-work is passed on to the multitude of cells coming after the originators.

This organic conception of human society is more correct than most people would imagine. Life is a growth: we owe a lot to those who have lived before us; and we are not above the level of animals if we cannot profit from past experience.

Spring Poetry by Oscar Ameringer

Among the most promising of the old-guard Socialists is Oscar Ameringer of the American Guardian of Oklahoma City, Okla. Whenever biting humor, or any kind of humor, is discussed, you invariably arrive at Oscar's door. Here is a bit from his pen which I memorized:

"Work for all who can work;
To each the fruit of his work;
Help for those who can't work;
Hell for those who won't work."

Echoes of Abe Lincoln

"There is one point," said Abe, "to which I ask brief attention. It is the effort to place capital on an equal footing with, if not above, labor in the structure of government; it is assumed that labor is available only in connection with capital, that nobody labors unless someone else owning capital, somehow, by the use of it, induces him to labor. Labor is prior to and independent of capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital and deserves much the higher consideration. No men living are more worthy to be trusted than those who toil up from poverty; none less inclined to take or touch aught which they have not honestly earned. Let them beware of surrendering a political power, which, if surrendered, will surely be used to close the doors of advancement against such as they, and fix new disabilities and burdens upon them."

It is interesting to note that in the period immediately following the Civil War ,Capital did all the things Lincoln feared it would do.

A HAM SANDWICH. WHO MAKES IT?
B. E. H. H. Holman

What a simple thing! Just a ham sandwich!

Not so simple after all—if one stops to ask "What is a ham sandwich?" Where does it come from?

Ham—a farm product, part of a fat hog.

To fatten the hog farmers raise corn. Hogs are usually fattened with cattle. Cattle and hogs bring into the picture all the stock men in the west and Iowa farmers in their corn fields and railroad men hauling both cattle, corn, hogs and hams.

Butter—here enter the dairy farmers and the milking machines and the co-operatives and girls wrapping butter and all the grocery clerks and delivery men and housewives.

Mustard—a concoction from the laboratories. Enter now the scientists who know about flavoring essences and food value.

Salt—a mineral product or else evaporated from salt water. Enter here a lot of other people with a whole series of jobs which are prior to the making of a ham sandwich. What a poor thing is a piece of ham without salt. An ancient monarch levied only one tax. He collected from everybody. He taxed salt.

Bread—throw the doors wide open and let the farmers troop into the picture.

A ham sandwich is the product of the sun, plus seed wheat, plus farmers' labor, plus threshers and truck drivers, plus elevator men, plus railroad men, plus flour mill workers, plus bakery workers, plus delivery man, plus the corner store clerks, plus the flaxen-haired waitress who hands over the ham sandwich to some hungry customer.

Who made the sandwich? All these useful workers (and many more).

Schools—workers have families. Children must have schools.

Factories and railroads must have trained young people to take the places of old workers when they die.

Education is a preliminary part of production. Unless schools are kept up society would soon slip back into semi-barbarism. Men would forget how to make and operate machines or to blend tasty foods or to run self-binders or to run factories or to make sandwiches.

The teacher today is getting her pupils ready to raise wheat or to make bread tomorrow. The ham sandwich contains the work of teachers as well as of farmers.

Laboratories—The same with hogs. Fat hogs are partly the work of experts . . . of scientific research . . . in universities.

Hospitals—At the same time the doctors keep the people well, able to work. What class of useful people can be left out of the picture?

Why go on? Farmers raise the wheat. They do not make sandwiches. Millers grind flour. They do not make sandwiches.

Who makes the sandwich?

Every one of us, in every industry, WHO DOES USEFUL WORK.

LINDBERG (SENIOR) ON THE WORLD WAR
(From May, 1928, "Critic and Guide," Dr. Wm. J. Robinson, Editor.)

"If there is anything more absurd than to call this 'a war to end war', it is to characterize it as 'a war for democracy'. All real democrats will suffer just as deeply and mortally as the boys in the trenches. The movement toward good government will be set back more than we have advanced in a generation. I'll probably go down. You are younger, and may live to see a recovery from this shell-shock to civilization. . . Instead of more democracy, either politically or industrially, there will be less. Dictators will spring up, perhaps even here."

These prophetic words were spoken by Charles Lindberg, Senior; and his attitude during the war required more courage than was necessary for young Lindberg in his flight across the Atlantic.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

Read Luke 10:25-37.

The modern Jericho road is lined with the victims of the slums of our great cities, men, women, and little children who have been sacrificed to that robber called Greed.

Millions of men are still lying by the side of the road beaten and half dead at the hands of a glorified robber called War.

Along all the highways of the world, we find wrecks of our industrial system; human wrecks, the broken bodies of men and women who have been treated as so much machinery by that robber called Profit.

The inevitable issue of the swiftly converging crisis of history will be the acceptance of Christ's law of love or the triumph of the world spirit of selfishness. Unfortunately, Jesus does not fit into our present civilization because it has been built upon the acquisitive instinct as against His way of unselfish service. But we must make civilization fit Him by giving Him first place in our individual lives, otherwise there is naught ahead but chaos.

A Path to the Cooperative Commonwealth

(Reprinted from the Farmer-Labor Progressive, official organ of the Farmer-Labor Political Federation and League for Independent Political Action.)

We are at the end of an era. The world is in the throes of change. The old system is crumbling. We need courage and intelligence to build a new order. Modern technical developments in production enable man to fulfill his wants in abundance for the first time in human history. The equivalent of $5,000 a year today or more can now be assured every family.

Yet men starve in the midst of plenty. Women are in rags while cotton is destroyed. Boys and girls wander homeless while houses are empty. Millions of Americans have lost their homes, farms and life savings.

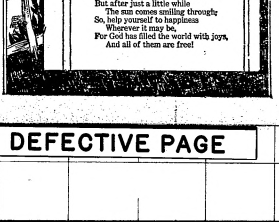
Four per cent of our population controls 90 per cent of the wealth. A handful of bankers rule the live sand destinies of our people. The two old parties which govern us are paid and bossed by these same Wall Street bankers.

This cannot continue. We, the masses of the people, must rise up and win economic and political control. We must organize to establish a new social order, a scientifically planned system. We must own and control the means of production and distribution. We must produce to supply human needs instead of for profit. We must be able to enjoy the wealth which modern science makes possible. We assert the right of every American to a livelihood. Economic security for all is the basis of life, liberty and happiness.

We, therefore, propose the following, recognizing that these demands can be met fully only in a new social order:

1. A job for every worker on a high American standard of living.
2. Security of tenure on the land for those who farm it, guaranteeing cost of production;
3. Abolition of speculation and profiteering in food and other necessities of life to protect both producer and consumer;
4. A national insurance scheme to protect every citizen's right to economic security throughout his life, including allowances for children during infancy and education, and insurance for illness, accident, meternity, unemployment and old age.
5. Restoration of unearned wealth to the community by heavy taxes effectively administered on large incomes, gifts and inheritances, and by a capital levy if necessary.
6. Nationalization of banking and return of sole control over credit and currency to the Federal government, as provided in the United States Constitution.
7. Public ownership of natural resources, railroads, public utilities, mines, and other basic industries and agencies for marketing farm products.
8. Drastic reduction of armaments, government ownership of all arms and munitions plants and international co-operation for financial and economic ends as well as for peace.

We are dedicated to the task of helping to bring into existence a united new political party which will carry on to realization the foregoing program.



The world is full of joy and cheer,
Of beauty and of song;
There's happiness for everyone,
And those who trudge along
With gladness glowing in their hearts
Are mighty sure to find
That life is friendly to us all,
And fortune's hand is kind.

There may be clouds of grief or pain
That sometimes dim the view.
But after just a little while
The sun comes smiling through;
So, help yourself to happiness
Wherever it may be,
For God has filled the world with joys,
And all of them are free!

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

The fine odor of baking bread permeated the place and as they entered Dawn lifted her voice in a light hail:

"Oh-ho, Aunt Em!"

Sounds came from the rear; a door opened and closed, and then another door opened which gave into the room where they stood, and an ample woman in a checked apron, her face flushed as by stove heat, entered hastily.

"Yes, dearie— Well!"—stopping in surprise.

"Aunt Em, this is Mr. Elliott.

"How d'y do!" Her voice was full and deep, like a man's. "I've seen you, young man, and if I was a hand to say what most folks say I'd tell you that I feel like we're old friends." She shook hands vigously. "You're a big young feller, Ben Elliott!"—eyeing him up and down.

Dawn laughed again as she drew off her coat.

"Don't you tell a soul, Aunt Em, but we are going to have tea! If his shanty boys ever heard about it they might think he was too much civilized for them."

"Pshaw! As if what other folks think counts!" She looked narrowly at Dawn and Ben saw the girl's face change. "It's what I've told Dawn ever since she was little, Ben, that it's what you think about your own self that matters; not what anybody else thinks. Well! You two set and I'll get tea."

She hurried out and Ben drew up a comfortable chair before the fire.

In the half hour that elapsed before the older woman returned Ben learned much about Dawn McManus. This was her house, her home. Aunt Em, then a young woman, had been housekeeper, there after Dawn's mother died. She had stayed on, keeping the place up through the years that Dawn was away at school, making a living for herself by baking, and now that Dawn was home again she was the girl's closest friend and only confidant.

"There are so many people here now who are not . . . No, I'll put it the other way: I'm not congenial company for many people in this country. It isn't their fault. It's wholly mine. People have a right to their opinions, of course. Evidence was strong against my father. But he was no killer. He never harmed anyone. I'm sure of that. When people think of him as alive and a fugitive or dead and disgraced it stirs my temper! You've heard about my father."

"Of course."

"Naturally, you would."

They talked, after that, of personal tastes, of the glories of big country, of the limited recreations offered by little towns.

"Just the movies! Now and then there's a dance," the girl said, "but none of the boys seem to want to take me. . . . It is my fault, likely." She was staring moodily into the fire. "I frighten them away. Mr. Brandon asks me to go to the movies now and then, but . . . I don't know . . ."

"So Brandon wants to amuse you, does he?"

"Yes. He's been awfully kind to me, always. Of course, I know that Able and a lot of people think he's after the Hoot Owl and is quite ruthless about it, but they can prove nothing. He was so good to me when I was little and talks so reasonably to me now that I can't believe their suspicions are well founded. Still . . . Things do seem to happen at Hoot Owl. Mr. Brandon's explanation of the fire and dynamiting is that you made an enemy of Bull Duval and his friends, and that they are striking back for spite. That sounds reasonable, doesn't it?"

"Yes," said Ben, unwilling to argue any such point with her.

At this juncture Aunt Em came in with food that was surpassingly fine and for an hour they sat and talked while darkness fell.

Ben was rising to go when the doorbell rang. Aunt Em went to answer the summons, and as a man's voice sounded in the hallway Dawn broke short what she had started to say. A moment later Nicholas Brandon entered the room.

The man's face, as he crossed the threshold and saw Ben, was a study. Lights flickered in his black eyes, a faint flush whipped up over his dead white cheeks and he opened his lips as in a gasp of surprise or else preparatory to sharp speech.

But he gathered himself on the instant, moved directly to Dawn and with an even, kindly tone greeted her.

The girl turned as Brandon still held her hand and Ben thought she was moving it gently for release.

"Mr. Elliott, I think you must know Mr. Brandon." Ben bowed, a bit stiffly.

"Yes," he said. "Yes. I met him once."

Then Nicholas Brandon did an amazing thing, which went far in explaining Dawn's skepticism of the town's attitude toward him to Elliott. He laughed. He laughed easily, naturally, and in the laughter was an admission of embarrassment which rang true.

"Indeed we have! Under different circumstances! How are you today, Elliott?" He advanced and extended his hand, still smiling, and Ben was so amazed that mechanically he accepted it. "Yes, we've met before,"—turning to Dawn and Aunt Em—"under quite distressing circumstances, We met on unfriendly ground, and both lost our heads a little. I hope Mr. Elliott doesn't harbor any resentment. As far as I'm concerned, I've only regret for the affair!"

He smiled at Dawn and then at Ben, and for the life of him Elliott could think of nothing adequate to say for an instant. When he did speak, he said levelly:

"In a lady's house the only thing to do is to reply in kind. Isn't that true?'

The other bowed slightly, but his eyes did not meet Elliott's."

"I'm glad you are so generous," he said, and probably only Ben caught the mockery in the tone. "Am I too late for tea, Dawn?"

Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, watched this with grimly set lips. Dawn replied that Brandon was only just in time and Ben, picking up his cap and coat, prepared to go.

"You were talking of dances," he said to Dawn. "There's one on the cards for Saturday night, I'm told. Would you mind going with a mere employee?"

Her face lighted. "Mind! I'd love it!" she said and the honest enthusiasm in her voice caused Nicholas Brandon to look at her sharply.

"Saturday night, then. Good-by, Mr. Brandon,"—with that challenging smile. He turned to the woman in the doorway. "Good-by. I guess I'll have to call you Aunt Em. That's the only name I know you by!"

As Ben passed out beneath the hemlocks and turned into the street, amazed at Brandon's manner, he brushed against a man who, he thought afterwards, must have been standing there. In the twilight he could not be certain but he believed that he had never seen that heavily bearded face before. He looked over his shoulder later to see the man, who had started on in the opposite direction, return and pass slowly before Dawn McManus' home again.

CHAPTER VIII

NICHOLAS BRANDON was a man of forty-five. He was rich, he was powerful, he had achieved much of what he held to be desirable.

But his experience had been empty of things that most men crave above all else. He had not seen Dawn McManus in three years until she came back to Tincup that November. He had known her always. He had watched her grow from infant to child; from child to a wistful, shy girl, living under the cloud of her father's tragic disappearance; but the transition from girlhood to womanhood had been made during her longest absence from the town that had been her only home. And so, when he saw her, after her arrival, instead of the young girl he remembered, toward whom he had always been gentle and kind while he sought to pilfer her heritage, he encountered a lovely, compelling young woman. She charmed him, stirred in his heart long neglected and now twisted and distorted wants which, given liberty in his youth, might have been fine and open and clean. He wanted Dawn McManus as he never had wanted anything before.

He saw her frequently, dropping in to visit briefly in passing, taking her in his cutter on a drive to a camp once, casually asking her to do this or that with him. But he could not interest her despite his persistent efforts, and now another element was injected into the situation. When he encountered Ben Elliott that afternoon in friendly conversation with Dawn it required all his resourcefulness to retain a show of self-control. Inwardly he seethed with a hatred which now had the element of jealousy for an embittering ally. He hated Ben Elliott with all his soul and mingled with his passion for Dawn McManus was a species of hate as well. He hated her for her cleanliness, for her sweetness, for her power to attract young men to her.

A double motive impelled him, thereafter, to plot and scheme and strive to possess the Hoot Owl. Without timber and the tidy fortune it might some day represent Dawn would be without resources. And a girl without property, he believed, would be easy prey.

But complications rose to stir his ire and chagrin. And so this night—it was very late—he sat in his office, with Lydia on the other side of his flat-topped desk.

Lydia. Just that. She needed no other name for identification in Tincup. The women who, with her, occupied that short and bleak and isolated row of houses across the tracks—Section Thirty-Seven, it was called by the town—needed none but a given name. He had summoned her and she had come according to instructions, furtively and alone, long after the rest of the town slept.

She sat, a bit tight-lipped, her button eyes on Brandon's face, and listened to him talk, crisply and incisively. But after he had stopped the woman leaned just a bit further forward.

"It's a rotten deal!" she said in a quick, nervous manner. "Why, she's only a girl, Brandon; and the boy, he's as clean as a hound's tooth. It's rotten!"

Brandon shrugged and looked away.

"I don't care to be mixed up in this," she went on. "I don't fancy playing any such game."

Defiance was there, and it struck the man's temper. His dark eyes swung back to focus on her face and about his lips was the beginning of a malicious smile.

"You refuse?"

"If I do, what?"

He leaned quickly against the desk edge.

"One word to the immigration people and you go back to Canada. Do you think they forget . . . the Canadians?"

Lydia blinked rapidly and bit her lips.

"You wouldn't turn me up!" she said sharply.

Brandon leaned back, laughing comfortably.

"Wouldn't I, though! Wouldn't I? If you refuse . . . Try it, my friend, and then try Canada's memory. You've been safe from their law for three years. In twelve hours I could and would toss you to them and have the satisfaction of a duty done."

For a moment they sat in silence. Then Lydia spoke with a bitter shake of her head.

"I know when I'm licked," she said crisply. "It's rotten; a foul blow . . . but I'll have to go through with it, it seems!" She rose, and her breath was somewhat quick.

"But some day, Nick Brandon, you'll slip! For years, as I get it, you've had others carry your dirt for you. Remember, the time will come when this power you feel so sure about will crumble! The time will come when you'll have no one to turn to, no one to threaten into fighting your fights for you! I wonder . . . what'll you do then?"

"That," he said easily, "is distinctly my own affair."

CHAPTER IX

IT WAS Saturday night and Tincup was dancing. In the Odd Fellows' hall a violin, a cornet and a piano made music for the scores who had paid their fee and danced in the glaring, barren room. And among them, a cynosure for all eyes, went Ben Elliott and Dawn McManus.

It was the first time many of the townspeople had had a real good look at Dawn since her return; it was Ben Elliott's initial encounter with a social function in Tincup; it was their first appearance in public together. Curiosity prompted much of the neck craning because Dawn, the daughter of Denny McManus, always had been a conspicuous figure, but now her loveliness was heightened by a flush and both men and women forgot that she was known chiefly as the daughter of a murderer.

The two were apparently having the time of their lives. Ben talked. How he talked! He talked of this, that, the other thing constantly. He felt he must talk and keep talking of impersonal matters or he would find himself blurting words of love into Dawn's ear, there in a public dance hall. He felt that unless he kept talking of trivial things he would find himself shouting:

"You are the most lovely thing that ever breathed and I love you, love you, love you!"

So he seized upon every subject that came into his head eagerly, almost desperately.

Now he was telling her of the new bookkeeper he had hired the day before.

"Queer fellow, in a way. Seems to be capable of a much better job than keeping books for the Hoot Owl. At first I was a little leary of letting him into the office and had him in the mill a couple of days but, gee, you can't let a man who's certainly a high grade office hand do work like that!

"I brought him in and told him I needed a bookkeeper but had just had one experience with a man that made me a little jumpy. I had a boy out there who was a little light fingered. He didn't get away with anything, luckily.

"But I told Martin—John Martin, his name is—that I was going to put him on the books if he'd take the job with the understanding that I was going to suspect him of a lot of things for a long time. He gave me one of the funniest looks I've ever seen and said he wasn't afraid to be suspected.

"So there he is. We're in the new office, now. He and I each have a little room just big enough for a bed and I like him a lot."

The dance ended and they walked toward vacant chairs and were so occupied with one another that they did not notice the hush that had fallen over the place, nor the woman who had entered, until she had crossed the floor and stopped before them.

LABOR LEADERS AND CLERGYMEN ADDRESS W.P.A.

Julius Emme and Frank Ellis, Noted Union Organizers, Give Stirring Talks

REV. A. I. MERTH SPEAKS

Senator Tungseth Speaks On Legislation; Challenge to Debate Is Made

The increasing interest shown in the metings of the Workmen's Protective Association during the past few months reached the maximum by overcrowding the court rooms last Monday night. The meetings have been scheduled for eight o'clock every Monday night and last Monday night by eight o'clock the hall was filled to capacity with nearly every available seat being occupied. This has been due mostly because of the efforts of Wm. Douville, president of the organization, in securing prominent men to address the meetings on economic questions.

Frank Ellis, business agent for the Independent Union of all Workers, of Austin, Minn., was the first speaker on Monlay night's program. Mr. Ellis stressed the importance of organization and of the folly of placing so much importance on the dollar as is done by the capitalist, stating that "the dollar is incapable of doing any work without the application of man-power." "We are in a revolution," Mr. Ellis stated, "not a bloody revolution, but a revolution of power from the hands of the few to the hands of the many and we must do all we can to help turn the wheel."

The struggle between capital and lobar was ably described by Father A. I. Merth, and definitions of the terms "Capital, Labor, Raw Material and Wealth" were given by him. He stated that this struggle between Capital and Labor was caused because capital in general has been violating the Seventh Commandment "Thou Shalt Not

Forum Circulation Is Doubled In 1 Year

One year ago this week the Thief River Falls Forum had a circulation of 1,250 and today the circulation is double that figure with 2,500 copies being sent out from this office. The increasing demand for a liberal newspaper is the direct cause of this and it is expected that when the Subscription Campaign is over the Forum will be going to well over 3,000 homes every week. The position taken by the Forum on questions pertaining to the welfare of the farmers and workers of this community has always been consistent and will continue to be so.

Mother's Day

In all the preceding years the observance of Mother's Day has assumed a deep and growing significance. The tribute which will be paid to mothers should not be given as a matter of form, but they should come spontaneously from our hearts, as an expression of the love and reverence held for the mothers of our country.

SPEED COUNTS IN GOOD WILL SUB. CAMPAIGN

Workers Are Off to a Flying Start in First Two Weeks Of the Contest

The workers in the "Good Will" campaign are off to a fine start in their quest for subscribers to the Forum. The candidates are rounding up their friends, too, in fine style;this is shown by the great interest that is already being taken in the drive.

From now till the close of the campaign SPEED is a very important factor. The speed with which each candidate is able to secure subscribers to the Forum. There are only six weeks left. Only six short weeks in which to secure the subscriptions that will count votes toward the big prizes to be given on June 22.

Workers and Wishers

Always in a drive of this kind we find many WISHERS. They "wish" that they could win one of the big prizes but haven't the PLUCK to put in the required amount of energy. The wishers need not build up false hopes. Wishing will never win one of these fine prizes; they will go to the Workers. This is not a LUCK campaign, it is rather a PLUCK proposition. The fine prizes will go to the plucky workers, to those with the determination to carry on, Work and win is the formula. It is the old Story of "the Tortoise and the Hare." The persistent worker that determinately carries on, the one that accomplishes a little every day will be the winner.

Mr. Kaplan is one of the best speakers in the state at the present time and is well known for his power of oratory. AGRI. CENSUS SHOWS NINTH DISTRICT GAIN

A Mean Average of 14.5 Per Cent Gain Is Recorded In the District

An increase of fourteen and a half per cent in the number of farms in the Ninth congressional district in the five-year period from 1930 to 1935 is indicated in the final report of C. W. Bouvette, supervisor of the agricultural census for the district.

The increase is believed to be largely due to the arrival of many families from the drouth stricken districts of the Dakotas and elsewhere, and in locating here the great majority of them have chosen the eastern counties of the district, where fuel is plentiful, land is cheap and the water supply above average.

All Counties Gain

Every county in the district shows a substantial increase ranging from around six per cent in Norman, Clay and Wilkin to twenty-nine per cent in Clearwater, twenty in Roseau and eighteen in Beltrami.

This does not mean new farms to any great extent. While a few new places have been opened, the great bulk of the increase has come through occupation of farms that were idle in 1930. As a result there are now very few idle and abandoned farms left in the district. The new places opened are generally small, consisting of a few acres and usually located close to the larger towns, and a number along the lakes and rivers.

The total number of the farms in the district in 1930 was 31,633 and the enumerators this year

The Forum's Good Will Campaign is getting well on its way. Many of the candidates are very active in getting subscriptions to the Forum

You will note this week that a number of names have been removed from the list. There will no doubt be other reductions from time to time. This is strictly a campaign for hustlers.

On May 22nd, there will be a sharp decline in the vote earning power of subscriptions so subscribe before that time.

There will be absolutely no more votes given at any time during the campaign than as advertised in our announcing issue. Those who insist that there will be are misinformed, and are basing their opinion on "what people say," instead of facts.

WORK ON NEW APPROACH JOB STARTS SOON

H. P. Lund and Sons Lowest Bidders On Construction Of New Parkway

ENGINEER PRESENTS THE FINAL PLANS

Acquisition of Abutting Property Is Being Pushed By Dept.

The Minnesota State Highway Dept. announced that H. P. Lund and Sons, local road contractors, submitted the lowest bid on the bridge approach project in this city. The contract has not yet been let but the bid of the local concern was approximately $1,200 lower than the next lowest bidder, the low bid being $34,995.08.

The projet, which is to include 1.2 miles of construction work, is to be completed by July 15th, according to specifications made by the highway department, but according to A .O. Torgerson of Detroit Lakes, it may be neecsary to extend the time to August 1st if any additional delay is encountered in securing property on the north side of Johnson street. Representatives of the highway department were in the city Tues. and Wednesday this week arranging to move two dwellings on Johnson street and it is indicated that an agreement may be reached soon.

A special meeting of the city council was held last night at which time Mr. Torgerson went over the final plans with the council. He stated that there would be very little difference in the road level of the new road so that very little difficulties will be met with in that connection.

H. P. Lund, low bidder, stated that if the contract was let this week work on the project would start almost immediately.

GROWERS SHOULD CONSIDER WHEAT SITUATION FACTS

Before wheat farmers go to the polls on May 25 to vote in the wheat adjustment program referendum, they should consider at least six important facts, says R. M. Douglas, the county agricultural agent.

The first is that our export demand is small and is likely to continue so. Foreign countries have placed high tariffs and quotas against our wheat. Our own tariffs against foreign goods have also made it difficult for foreign countries to buy our wheat. Every effort is being made to increase export markets, but this is a slow process. .

Second is the fact that world prices are not materially higher than when the wheat adjustment program began. Our two short crops have kept us on a domestic price basis which is materially higher than the world price. Unrestricted production in the face of the world situation, would probably cause our prices to slump at least 30 to 35 cents a bushel.

Third, there is still enough wheat land available to produce bumper crops and surpluses. Drought caused heavy losses, but farmers do not expect drought every year.

Fourth, domestic consumption of wheat remains relatively constant. Efforts are being made to improve the quality and appeal of bakery products. Use of wheat for livestock feed is ordinarily increased only when wheat is cheap in relation to other crops.

Fifth, farmers are protected, through the adjustment payments on their domestic allotments, against low world export prices.

Sixth, the drought, while solving some of the immediate surplus problems, has not changed the fundamental causes of the wheat problem, which are the large potential wheat acreage, and the difficulty of reopening export markets.

QUALITY EGG PROGRAM OUTLINED BY AG. DEPT.

The Department of Agri. Dairy and Food of the State of Minnesota, issued a bulletin this week on the "Quality Egg Program" for 1935 from Commissioner R. A. Trovatten's office.

The bulletin makes the following remarks on the marketing of eggs: To insure the highest return for the product the producer should be careful to sell only clean, fresh and sound eggs; sell to those dealers properly equipped to handle eggs; market at least twice a week; deliver eggs in substantial cases; SELL ON A GRADED BASIS; protect eggs enroute to market from all weather conditions.

On the breeding of chickens it is sgugested that stock bred for large egg size (24 oz. or over per doz.) be used; use eggs from birds of standard body weight; and to use eggs of desirable size, shape and color.

In feeding a liberal use of the proper ration to produce firm whites and strong shells is necessary as well as to feed green feeds to produce a golden yolk in the egg. Cleanliness of coops tends to produce clean eggs; and to produce infertile eggs the breeding males should be isolated by May 15th. To get more uniform eggs in regards to color and uniformity the flocks should be confined until noon; a house adequately equipped and well ventilated will add to the quality of the eggs, the bulletin states.

Care of eggs is stressed as one of the important things for the producer to bearin mind and it is suggested that eggs should be gathered at least twice a day by clean hands and immediately after gathering the eggs should be cooled to a temperature of about 45 to 656 degrees F. in a clean, well ventilated place. Eggs should be packed large end up to insure better results to the consumer.

HUGE WAR MACHINERY NEARS COMPLETION

Berlin, (TIS).—Germany's military authorities, unconcerned with Hitler's antics, are carefully the outcome of the Stresa three-power conference. The regulations concerning the military character of German's new army are still withheld but their spirit is already indicated by semi-official hints. All able bodied men between 18 and 35 years will be subjected to military service, while labor camps will serve for the pre-military training of Germany's future soldiers.

In the meantime preparations for the technical equipment of the great military force to be constructed go steadily forward. 200,000,000 marks (about $80,000,000) have been set aside by the government for the purchase of necessary raw material abroad.

Federal Housing Farm Book Used as Textbook

Washington D. C., May 6—County superintendents of schools in many states are using the Federal Housing Administration booklet, "Open This Door to Farm Property Improvement," as a text book in rural schools or as the basis of lectures on farm improvement, according to the Administration.

In these courses emphasis is placed on the opportunity for bringing to the country home the labor-saving, comfort-giving and sanitary features which have become standard for the city home. The necessity for eliminating all possible fire hazards also is being stressed, according to the reports.

Inquiries for the booklet continue to come in from all sections of the United States, including Alaska and Hawaii. Among the latest is one from David D. Chong and Moses Malakana, both residents of Hawaii.

RESULTS OF REPEAL AS FORETOLD ARE REALIZED

By W. G. Calderwood

In August 1932 the editor of Church Management published an advertising man's story of the great advertising campaign to be launched to promote the sale of liquor. The usual wet prophecy of the great resurge of prosperity which was sure to follow repeal was a conspicuous part of the story.

"You know what advertising has done for the cigarette business," said the ad-man. "It has popularized smoking so that it is now the ordinary procedure in the most refined homes. The advertising which made that possible is not a circumstance to what we are going to do for beer as soon as repeal is a fact.

"Already tentative arrangements have been made to spend millions of dollars in beer and whiskey advertising. My house is in on the deal, so I have information direct. We are going to use every art known to advertising science to make beer a popular drink for men, women and youth."

The advertising salesman was aglow with enthusiasm as he pictured the growing sales of liquor re-employment of millions of idle men, factories a-buzz with activity, diminishing relief lines, hum of industry and the return of prosperity; respect for law; decrease in drunkenness; reduced taxes, balanced budget and happy days here again."

He was right about the millions of money spent for advertising, and about the new and clever ways of enticing men, women and even school children to drink.

But unemployment has increased; 1935 will record the greatest peace time deficit in the nation's history; taxes have mounted to an all-time high; drunken men reel in the streets, and boys and girls "pass out in our night clubs; traffic accidents and fatalities in which drink is involved have shot upward like a rocket; the $4,880,000,000 voted to the president for relief and to artificially "make jobs" is but a fraction of the burden of debt that is fastened upon our children's children.

Every prophecy made by the wets has failed, except that millions spent in advertising does allure men, women and children to drink and be drunken.

SERA Accident Pre'ent'n Campaign is Successful

Since the inauguration last fall of job inspection and accident prevention campaigns on all projects dirceted by the Minnesota State Emergency Relief administration, the injury frequency rate for each one million man hours of work declined from 13.21 percent during September to 7.53 per cent during March, it is announced by A. V. Roohweder, chief adviser of the SERA safety division.

The cumulative injury frequency rate, on the same basis of calculation, decreased from 13.21 per cent during Septemper to 10.11 per cent for the months of September to March, inclusive. During the last mentioned period, covering a total of more than 32 million man hours, there occured 328 lost-time injuries, three of them fatal.

Greatest number of injuries occured during October and November, when drouth relief work was at its height, Mr. Rohweder stated. Although cumulative effect of accident prevention efforts was being realized during the months of December, January and Febuary, it is anticipated that the opening of the road work season will bring about a slight increase in lost-time injuries.

The lowered injury frequency rate, according to the chief safety advisor, must be ascribed to the various safety activities carried on by the division during the September-March period. They are summarized as follows: project inspections, 23,147; safety talks, 12,272; safety suggestions, 11,969; job corrections, 5,721; transient camp inspections, 192. In addition, there were distributed 2,069 first aid kits and 1,906 goggles.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES GIVEN IN TRANSIENT CAMPS

Beginning Easter Sunday, church services were instituted in the transient camps, operated by the social service division, Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief administration), according to an announcement by Hilfrid Johnson, supervisor, transient social service.

Attendance is not compulsory, no collection is permitted to be taken, and officiating ministers are asked to avoid denominationalism. One Catholic and one Protestant meeting will be held in each camp every Sunday, the supervisor stated.

Co-ops of Nation Show Amazing Growth In Year

New York.—That small business men and even consumers and labor are turning to the cooperative movement as a solution of the problem of better distribution of profits, higher wages and lower costs, is indicated in numerous reports of the growth in the United States of cooperatives.

The latest reports come from the Eastern States Farmers' Exchange which lists a gain of 7,700 members in 1933. At the end of 1934, this association's membership reached 56,200 in the New England states, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland.

The exchange was organized in 1918 for the cooperative purchase of feed, seed and fertilizer. As distribution also proved successful, the exchange started also to produce the commodities sold. In a few years the co-op became one of the largest producers and distributors of farm supplies in the whole territory.

The dollar volume in 1933 was $9,740,000, and in one year jumped 28 per cent or to $12,300,000. The turnover was 415,000 tons compared with only 4,290 tons in 1918.

During 1934 at Buffalo, the co-op completed a 1,000,000 bushel grain elevator. The cost was paid in cash—$315,000 out of surplus savings.

N. W. Students Will Be Allotted Home Projects

Vacation time for students attending the Northwest School of Agriculture does not mean that studies are to be discontinued. By means of home projects they simply transfer their classroom activities to the field, the shop, or the home where the insturction received during the winter is put into actual practice. According to Home Project Leader E. R. Clark, 110 boys and 665 girls scattered throuout Northwestern Minnesota are now busily engaged in carrying forward their various summer projects. Each student is visited at least twice during the vacation period by E. R. Clark or R. J. Christgau, who offer timely suggestions as to the method of procedure. Thus, miniature demonstration farms have been scattered thruout this region. In many cases, practices resulting from these projects have ultimately been adopted for field and home use.

Two new projects have been added to the regular agricultural and home economics activities: namely, insect collection and mineral collection. The insect project, under the direction of T. M. McCall, station horticulturist, involves the collection, mounting and classification of insects common to this territory. The rock and mineral project includes the collection and identification of rocks and minerals to be found in this section and is being sponsored by R. S. Dunham, station agronomist.

In addition to the regular projects, all Northwest School students have agreed to plant an elm tree somewhere about the home grounds, this tree to be designated as the Northwest School Memorial Elm. This project has been sponsored by the Class of 1934. Former students and alumni who are interested in planting a memorial tree should communicate with the Northwest School for further information and instruction.

U.S. Inspectors Put O.K. On Minnesota State Roads

Federal engineers who made an inspection of 195 representative sections of the Minnesota trunk highway system in April found maintenance operations satisfactory in 193 cases, the United States Bureau of Public Roads has reported to N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner. The engineers reported that 8 of the 195 sections need further construction work.

In March the federal engineers approved maintenance conditions on 70 out of 73 sections inspected. They recommended further construction on 6 sections.

Government Invites the Manufacturers to Enter Better Housing Program

Washington, D. C.—Manufacturers of building materials and home and farm equipment eligible for financing under the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration are being invited to co-operate in the better farm home program now being conducted throughout the country under supervision of the Administration.

This program is being carried forward in each state under a special state committee, on which is represented practically every organization directly interested in rural progress, Special "Farm Building Days" and "Farm Improvement Days" have been held or are scheduled for the immediate future in hundreds of counties. The purpose of the program is to bring directly to the attention of each of the 66,000,000 farm families the benefits of modernizing the farm home and the farm itself.

"Through every channel the importance of making needed improvements now, and the assistance available through the Federal Housing Program, is being brought to the attention of farm families," the letter to manufacturers states. "Farmers are now displaying a renewed interest in the repair and maintenance of their long-neglected properties.

"The farm income for 1934 totaled approximately six billion dollars, which was 16 per cent higher than the preceding year. A further increase is probable for 1935."

It was stated by Administration officials that practically every farm family in the United States has received the illustrtaed booklet, "Open This Door to Farm Property Improvement" or a leaflet on the same subject.

Northwest Station Sets Seed Distribut'n Record

The distribution of pure seed has been one of the important projects carried on by the Northwest Experiment Station since its establishment more than a third of a century ago. In 1914 about forty thousand pounds of alfalfa seed were distributed to the [illegible] farmers scattered throughout Red River Valley counties. Reports submitted by these growers during the following three years indicated only nine failures, which is a remarkable achievement especially in introducing a new plant with which producers are not thoroly familiar. In 1918, 218 cooperative pure seed plots were established on Northwestern Minnesota farms. The following year Mindum wheat, noted for its high yielding ability and excellent macaroni qualities, was released from this station.

According to E. R. Clark, state pure seed specialist, 3,785 bushels of Mindum were furnished to farmers for seed purposes during the last fifteen years. Improved varieties of wheat, oats, barley, flax and corn, developed by the Minnesota Experiment Station in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture, have been increased and distributed from time to time as they became available.

The following are regarded by Mr. Clark as among the more important releases: Minota, Gopher and Anthony oats: Thatcher and Marquillo wheat; Velvet barley, and Red Wing and Chippewa flax.

The total amount of pedigreed seed grain furnished to farmers for foundation seed during the fourteen year period, 1921-31, was in excess of 52,000 bushels. This was distributed to 1715 growers. Increases from fields planted to this seed have in most cases been used for seed purposes. Through this method of distribution, improved varieties have become thoroly established in every county of the Red River Valley.

START YOUR FLY FIGHTING EARLY DOCTORS ADVISE

St. Paul, Minnesota.—It is not the fly but its habits which menace the health of humans. This statement is contained in a spring bulletin on flies issued this week by the Public Health Education Committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association.

When the fly eats, it steps into the food and not only eats all it wishes but covers legs, body, and wings. In this manner it may collect typhoid germs, tubercle bacilli, germs of diarrheal diseases or even infantile paralysis from no one knows what filthy spot and deposit them them on the milk pitcher, the baby's bottle or his face, or on uncovered bread or cake.

Once the fly enters the house, it is impossible to provide protection from the germs which enter with it. Therefore it is necessary to take measures in early spring not only to keep the flies outside but to reduce their number in the neighborhood to a minimum.

The elimination of flies will be assured if all breeding places are eliminated. This means the removal or disinfection of all refuse—manure, garbage, wet papers and rubbish of all sorts. Decaying grains, rotting fruits or vegetables. Waste cotton or woolen garments, sacking and paper all provide breeding places, especially when moist and warm.

There are several methods of overcoming the fly nuisance including modern methods of garbage and sewage disposal, fly traps, chemical treatment of refuse and screening. All of these should be considered now instead of later when millions of flies have already had a chance to breed. Flies love the garbage pail so that receptacle should always be kept tightly covered.

Chicago—The Italian Socialist Federation has dissolved the "pact of action" under which it was cooperating in certain activities with the Italian Bureau of the Communist Party, according to an announcement of Vittoni Buttis, secretary of the I. S. F. The agreement terminated April 13.

"Entered as second-class matter, April 27, 1932, at the post office at Thief River Falls Minnesota, under Act of March 3, 1897."

"....Public institutions and the laws have repudiated the ancient religion. Hence by degrees it has come to pass that Working Men have been given over, isolated and defenseless, to the callousness and greed of unrestrained competition. The evil has been increased by rapacious Usury, which, although more than once condemned by the Church, is nevertheless, under a different form but with the same guilt, still practiced by avaricious and grasping men." —From "The Condition of Labor," Encyclical Letter by Pope Leo XIII.

STRANGLING THE AGED WITH RED TAPE

And now to top off the accomplishments of what may well be referred to by future historians as "The Session of the Imbeciles," we are informed that the Old Age Pension law passed in the closing hours of the legislature will be inoperative because of a clerical error. The muddle is so inexcusable and indefensible that it cries to high heaven. Even the stones must weep. And to add further to the ludicrous fiasco Attorney General Harry H. Peterson; of all people, Harry H. Peterson; declares the law unconstitutional because of that idiotic error committed unintentionally or otherwise by a half-baked committee clerk.

The Forum has consistenly fought for Mr. Peterson's election. We have the highest regard for his integrity, and for his knowledge of law, constitutional, statutory and the ordinary common variety. His past record makes his ruling in the present instance so much harder for us to understand.

In the case of the state income tax law, many attorneys of unquestionable ability held that it must be ruled to be unconstitutional because it levied a double tax; one by the federal government and another by the state upon the same incomes. Peterson, like a true Progressive, held it constitutional and defended it thru the Supreme Courts. In the case of the Homestead Exemption Tax law many good attorneys held it to be unconstitutional on the grounds that it was "class legislation." Mr. Peterson held it to be constitutional and defended his ruling thru the Supreme Courts, and won. The Mortgage Moratorium law was held by many able barristers to violate the rights of private property. This law, too, Mr. Peterson ably defended thru two Supreme Court trials.

In all these cases Mr. Peterson based his appeal on the basis of law being applied "common sense"; on the thesis that government must serve the ends of justice and jurisprudence must administer the laws to the greatest good for the greatest number. In spite of possible and tenable constitutional objections, the courts agreed with the attorney general.

In the present case of the Old Age Pension, the attorney general holds that it is unconstitutional because of the error, gross incompetence and-or malfeasance of a committee clerk in spite of the clear intent of the lawmakers; in spite of the desperate need of the aged who must now thru no fault of their own, eat the bitter bread of charity; in spite of the hopes and prayers of the unfortunates who have lost a lifetime of savings thru a damable profit system; in spite of the heartbreaks and the tears of mortification that course down sunken and age-wrinkled cheeks of the unfortunates who have been left high and dry in the ebb-tide of life. The situation would be comic if it was not so devastatingly tragic.

The intent of the legislature is plain. It can be clearly established by the report submitted by the report conference committee to the respective houses and the roll calls on its acceptance and final passage of the bill. With all due respect for the knowledge of the constitutional lawyers, it appears to us, from the viewpoint of a layman, that a ruling holding it constitutional would have been easier to defend than one holding it unconstitutional. It would have thrown the burden of proof upon those opposed to the law, where the burden quite rightly should rest, rather than with the proponents who have already convinced the lawmakers.

If Mr. Peterson has yielded to an easily understandable temptation to smack a hateful opposition with a hefty forkful of barnyard offal he has to our mind used poor judgment in his choice of forks. It seems to us that the situation is of sufficient importance for the governor to call an extra session of the legislature to unsnarl the tangle so that the law can go into operation on July first as the final clause of the bill specifies. We submit that to strangle the aged with red tape is not a Farmer-Labor platform plank.

HOLDING UP THE BUSINESS CURVE WITH GOVERNMENT PROPS

The capitalist press has set up the old cry of "support the President" again. We are admonished that we must not criticize because "it retards recovery," we must not be pesimistic because "it breaks down the morale of the people," et cetera. The diea is apparently that we should get out and yap about the improved business conditions and cast an optimistic halo around the entire New Deal ventures, in order that the people may be put in a happy, carefree, spend-easy frame of mind.

Such blatant propaganda is quite unnecessary. History has proven that the people forget very, very easily, past discomforts. There is nothing more eternal than the hope that springs in the human breast. In the warmth of today's sun, last night's cold discomforts are always easily forgotten, and the best way is to bring out the sun—then we won't have to tell the people that it is warm. But to tell them it is warm and cozy when they are freezing is merely inviting brick bats and ridicule.

There is no denying the upward trend of the business curve. Neither is it possible to deny that this upward curve is a direct result of the millions of money being thrown into relief and other governmental enterprise. A year ago the CWA money accounted for a similar upward trend in the business cycle. The question still remains: What will we do when the government credit is exhausted? We are not inclined to be pessimistic, but, neither will we push our head into the sand and refuse to take notice of the things that must necessarily be done to make the business conditions which are now showing a marked improvement due to government spending, permanent. That can only be done by driving the capitalists off their strike for assured and higher profits. That can only be done by social security legislation and cooperative operation thru governmental authority of those industries which refuse to put men back into the ranks of the wage earners at wages assuring an American standard of living.

ALL IN THE NEWS
(Union Advocate)

One day last week the daily press carried three stories, none of them related and yet on close analysis—they were very much related.

One story carried the account of Andrew Mellon's testimony in federal court in Pittsburgh to the effect that he sold 123,000 shares of Pittsburgh Cola Corporation stock in 1931 in order to claim a loss on stock. Another story carried the announcement by the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau that almost a million dollars had been turned back to income taxpayers as refunds, credits and abatements. These all mean the same thing—it's money taken out of the U. S. Treasury. One of the largest rebates, $692,260.55 went to a Chicago newspaper which had been mixed up in the Teapot Dome scandal.

The third story was released by the U.S. Bureau of Education and stated that schools in 25 states, with 3,429,920 pupils and 102,116 teachers, have not enough funds to complete the spring term. Back pay owing to the teachers amounts to $24,544,874.

There is a definite connection in these three stories for every unpaid teacher and every parent of untaught children has a right to feel that these three things spring from a system under which wealth is privileged and poverty is ignored.

Under a crazy economic system the Mellons and the Morgans escape taxation, and under that same system little children are denied the right of an education while teachers who trained themselves to train others go unpaid.

ALICE IN BLUNDERLAND

The crisis is upon us. America, the richest country in all the world, is down on her knees. No longer can she feed her poor and needy. Over-population has finally wrecked "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

The "brain-trusters" have striven valiantly to find a solution. They have delved deeply into books on economics, studied cost indices, toyed with the regimentation of production, manipulated the dollar on exchange, plowed under cotton, slaughtered farrowing sows, shaken pebbles in cans to scare the birds out of the Washington cherry trees, and still no chicken appeared in the proverbial pot. But finally one day, while thumbing through the leaves of an age-worn volume of poetry, they found the solution they had been seeking. And what a simple one it is.

They begin by raising the slogan, "Save the Nation." They call for volunteers, twenty million of them, single men and women, married men with their wives and children who are ready and willing to lay down their lives if necessary for this noble cause. They tell them a great tale about our forefathers coming to this great land of opportunity and applying themselves so well that with their bare hands they built up great farms and factories which produce more than the people can consume. Because of this over-production they say that we must transfer at least one-sixth of our consuming population to another land. We must do this to "Save the Nation."

Where to? To Alaska, that glamorous land of the "Yukon days," where romance and adventure lurks behind every bush and rock, and where incidentally, but just incidentally, the inexperienced freeze to death by the scores.

And in another ten years the problem would arise again. But why worry about that? By that time our glorious "brain-trust" will have gone to its Valhalla, and its successors can worry about the social problems of this peculiar land in which people starve because there is too much to eat.

MAKING COMMUNISTS
(St. Paul Daily News)

Violence with callous disregard of their constitutional rights such as that visited upon two representatives of alleged rioters in New Mexico makes the best possible material for communism.

According to the story told by Robert Minor, radical editor, and David Levinson, attorney, they were taken from Gallup, N. M., beaten by hoodlums and tossed out in the desert some 35 miles away.

Obviously some one employed the hoodlums and the motive for the attack is to be found in the fact that the two men were defending some 10 persons under arrest for murder in connection with rioting during a mine strike.

It is barely possible, though not probable, that the assault was cooked up their supporters in order to gain publicity and win public sympathy. Such things have been done. In view, however, of the way the southwest has been handling "agitators" this seems like a bonafide case of unlawful violence perpetrated by short-sighted bourbons who think it is the best way to put down industrial protests.

BOUNDS AND LEAPS
(Polk County Leader)

Leaps and bounds is an old saying, but as Mr. Biever, (our worthwhile representative) puts it, bounds and leaps must surely have been one of the new laws he tried to pass, "The Sales Tax," while in St. Paul.

Mr. Biever should have spoken on Communism while at the Capitol instead of spending over a thousand dollars of our money and not having accomplished anything. In fact we think that Mr. Biever should call a special session and explain what he seems to know about Communism.

As to the removal of Mrs. LeSueur and Florence Rood from the Education Department, a good representative wouldn't come back to his home town feeling that he had achieved much for those who elected him, and spent over $1,000 to boot, by merely helping to "tie the can" to a couple of state employes, with so many other important matters to discuss for the benefit of those in distress.

Bounds and leaps, is wrong; what we want as a representative is someone who can do things by going ahead in leaps and bounds.

Editing a paper without ruffling anybody's feelings is like fishing without a hook on your line —you get lots of recreation but no results.—Sherburne Advance-Standard.

A SQUARE SHOOTER

He's a square shooter. It is a short sentence but what a lot of meaning it carries when applied to a man. Some men live a life time in a community and never learn that simple econium. He is a square shooter, he will do exactly what he says he will do. What a pleasure it is to deal with such men, when whose word is as good as any bond that might be given. Every community has such men. In dealing with them it is never necessary to be on one's guard or to be apprehensive of the transaction whether private or public.—Kendall News.

BEER REVENUES DURING FIRST TWO YEARS SHOW FAILURE OF REPEAL

On the eve of the second anniversary of the legalization of 3.2 beer by Congress, United States treasury officials jubilantly announced last Saturday that beer has brought $341,780,420 into the federal coffers, during the two-year period.

This is an average of $170,890,210 per year in revenue from beer, since it was legalized April 7, 1933.

During the 1932 campaign, the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment estimated that alone would be $1,000,469,898, according to an article in Fortune magazine, May, 1932.

The New York Evening Post put the estimated annual revenue from beer at $1,129,280,000, while Irenee duPont of the duPont Company, estimated that beer revenue would be $1,230,000.

Estimates from brewers and some others, as published in the press during the repeal campaign, often ran as high as five billions.

Actual revenues received during the two years since the legalization of beer reveal the fact that the federal treasury is receiving approximately 14 per cent of the amount promised by the "conservative wets" and approximately 3 per cent of the amount promised by the more "optimistic" beer propagandists.

The Farmers' Union at Washington

Washington, D. C., May 2.— Agriculture gained an outstanding victory insofar as recognition and sanction of governmental administrative departments are concerned regarding imports of agricultural commodities. For years industry has been protected against competitive imports by laws and high tariff barriers. Section 3E of the NRA was written to further protect industry by limiting imports of industrial goods. For years organized agriculture has protested against being put in competition with unlimited imports and fought for protection to maintain a domestic market at an American standard of living.

A mandatory bill, approved by governmental administrative departments and strongly supported by Chairman Jones of the House Agricultural Committee, providing for limited imports of agricultural commodities, on which a program or stabilization operation has been inaugurated by the AAA, fixing flexible tariff thereon, as well as placing under regulation the importers of agricultural products, has been worked out by the Northwest Farmers Union Legislative Committee and through Congressman Gerald Boileau of Wisconsin has been introduced as an amendment to the Agricultural Adjustment Act. This provision together with the other proposed amendments will greatly strengthen the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and is a recognition of the fact that Agriculture must have this protection in its fight to obtain cost of production.

There is every reason to believe that these amendments can be made into law at this session of Congress if the farmers of this nation will get behind them and demand their Congressmen's support.

Cnogressman Hull of Wisconsin has introduced two bills, H. R. 7564, for the doubling of the tariff on all dairy products, and H. R. 7563, increasing the tariff on barley from 20c to 50c, barley malt from 40c to 80c, flour 2c to 4c a lb., rye 15c to 30c bu., malt 40c to 80c, rye meal 45c to 90c per cwt.

The bill needs the support of every farmer in the Northwest.

Views and Reviews
By Ben C. Hagglund

A "Made-in-America" Revolution

Critics of the system, after vituperously denouncing capitalists and money-lenders and their ilk, often point out that "in Russia" they do things different; but they add hastily, "We don't want any Russian Communism here, but just plain socialism." In other words, what is wanted is a dyed-in-the-wool American shindig, pulled off by Americans in the interests of a "free America" for American workers.

This feeling on the part of American workers is just another indication of their bedevilment by the ruling class. It has been taught that "foreign radicals" are hell-bent to start a bloody revolution here by fair means or foul, and that we should stamp out any such "subversive" tendencies wherever we find it. Experience has shown that the most active members of any strike or determined resistance to acquisitive greed are always branded as "foreign radicals"—it is an easy manner to get rid of them.

In the face of this, how is it possible to get an "all-American" revolution? It is just possible that patriotic Americans don't know how to resist tyranny.

Power, Not Meekness

"You can appeal to the almighty mercy if you want to, but I shall not. The more I see of the world, the more evident it is to me that it is ruled not by mercy but by POWER. 'Right without might is moonshine.' It is said that 'hell is paved with good intentions.' Those who have the right should get the might. Those who have the good intentions should get the power. If they don't theirs is suffering and oppression.

"The Universe is ruled by unvarying law. Certain causes produce certain results. Henry George asked, 'Shall we ward the stroke with liturgies and prayers? Shall we avert the decrees of immutable law by raising churches when hungry infants moan and weary mothers weep?'

"So long as the righteous are without POWER, their lot is that of poor, foolish, helpless victims of their own meekness and stupidity. The MEEK do NOT 'inherit the Earth.' If we look about us a little, we see what a sanctimonious lie that assertion is. The POWERFUL inherit the Earth by the practical process of TAKING it tand kicking the meek off it! Moral: GET POWER."—Linn A. E. Gale.

That's the title of an International Bible Student's tract. I have a respect for Judge Rutherford's prolificness (I almost wrote prolixity); and I have read many of his tracts. (I once worked for a man who sold them, so I had to read them)

This new tract, "One Hope Left Now," interests me greatly. It seems to be a reversion to the monarchical form of government. "Human governments are failing," the Judge says, "including the American experiment of democracy." The "one hope left" is, of course, the Kingdom of Heaven

I might make the comment that several people have been obliged to try this Utopia whether they liked to or not. Modern conditions are helpful that way.

The American Dreyfus Case

There must be no commutation of Tom Mooney's sentence. The governor of California should pardon him and thus admit the state's injustice in holding an innocent man in jail for nearly two decades.

This, in substance is the conclusion recently announced by the Inter-Religious Committee for Justice for Thomas J. Mooney in its recently published pamphlet, "Our American Dreyfus Case, A Challegne to California Justice."

The plan of reactionaries to free Mooney without a confession of injustice by California should be blocked, according to the publishers of the Mooney pamphlet. They point out that the recent United States Supreme Court decision in the Mooney case, which threw the "Mooney tangle" back at California, has "brought consternation to the ranks of Californians opposed to justice for Mooney." Out of this consternation, according to the committee, has arisen the suggestion from the interests that Mooney's sentence be commuted.

"Anything except justice seems to be the approved course in dealing with Mr. Mooney," the publication committee observes.

The publication committee includes a long list of nationally known Protestants, Catholic and Jewish leaders, a number of whom are active in Los Angeles and California circles, and many from eastern groups. The chairman of the committee is the Rev. Aaron Allen Heist, P. O. Box 894, Hollywood Station, Los Angeles, who will send a copy of the pamphlet upon request.

The keynote of "Our American Dreyfus Case" is sounded by Lillian Symes in an article published under that title in the conservative Harper's Magazine and reprinted here. After an exhaustive survey of the facts which led to Mooney's imprisonment in 1916 following the tragic Preparedness Parade, Mrs. Symes concludes that both Mooney and his fellow trade unionist, Warren K. Billings, were the victims of a conspiracy on the part of rabid big business enemies of organized labor.

Whether one agrees with this view or not, the pamphlet is an exceptionally readable document.

In addition to the Symes article the publication contains a mass of documentary evidence — excerpts from federal reports, letters, evidence transcript, and legal opinions—which constitute valuable material for those seeking information upon America's internationally discussed labor case. Included in these documents is the first federal report by President Woodrow Wilson's mediation commission, the second federal report by J. B. Densmore, Director General of Employment, which contains the famous dictographs records, the third federal report by the Wickersham Commission's section, on Lawless Enforcement of the Law, Justice Langdon's classic dissenting opinion, and statements by United States Senators, Governors, world-famous writers and leaders of university and church forces.

The churchmen responsible for the pamphlet urge that as a means of forcing the attention of Governor Merriam upon an application for Mooney's pardon, California voters and friends everywhere write to the Governor and members of the state legislature and pour in their protests to President Roosevelt, the United States Congress the Federal Supreme Court, and the California State Supreme Court.

The cost of the Federal government is now reported to be more than double its income, a fiscal flunk never before approached in the nation's history. Who said "Repeal will balance the budget?" The New York Times reports that rum running has grown to such proportions that legislation is being sought to extend Federal control beyond the twelve-mile limit which the liquor interests so vigorously opposed during prohibition.

ON LENIN
By Geo. Bernard Shaw

I had never heard of Lenin before 1817 and many people in England, where I was at that time, and where I come from, had never heard of him. And we never learned much about Lenin personally.

Other people this evening have told you of his studies, his discoveries, the original ideas which he advanced. But what is curious is that even in countries where his personality and his aspect were completely unknown, he produced the same staggering impression as in Russia.

I can't explain it. I don't know why it was. Perhaps it was some curious phenomenon of magnetism. Science has not yet explained these things. Science has not yet explained these things. But they are as true in other countries as here in Russia. Although he was a man among other men, men of exceptional intelligence, remarkable energy and political skill, some of whom surpassed him in one respect or another and to whom he owed a great part of his work—yet he towered in the midst of this group of eminent men as a unique personality.

I canot explain this, I say. I only know that in England where nothing was known of him he seemed as great as in Russia where much was known of him.

But we must not think that the importance of Lenin is a thing of the past because Lenin is dead. We must consider the future. What does Lenin mean for the future? Only this: If the experiment in social organization of which he was the leader and which his personality represents for us fails, then our civilization must disappear as so many civilizations have disappeared before it.

We know from modern historical research that the history of those civilizations was exactly like ours, and that having reached the point which present day Western capitalist civilization has now attained they rapidly degenerated and were followed by utter chaos and the relapse of the human race into semi-barbarism. Time and again humanity has tried to round the cape, but never with success.

But Lenin found a way to round this cape. If his experiment is successful, if other countries follow his example and his teaching, if this gigantic experiment spreads over the rest of the world, history will enter upon a new era. We will not see the failure and collapse of our civilization, we will not see humanity begin all over again to travel the same road toward the same miserable end; history will enter upon a new era which we cannot even imagine.

This is what Lenin means for us. If the future is as Lenin envisioned it, we may smile and face it without fear. But if your experiment fails or is crushed, if the world remains on a capitalist basis, then the farewell I must say to you will be a very sad one.

An impromptu address given by the noted dramatist in Moscow on his recent visit to the Soviet Union.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

Matthew 25:31-46 is a picture of judgment. From this lesson we learn, those who received a blessed inheritance were the people who had seen Jesus in the eyes of the needy. Their eyes had been, while on earth, on society's suffering and need.

The people who went out from the presence of Jesus in that judgment scene with the Master's words of condemnation ringing in their ears were the people who had seen Him in the garb of a suffering and needy humanity.

The final test of what we deserve will not be whether we believed this or that, went to this church or that church but whether we saw Jesus in the clouds of human need which hover about us.

Ultimately, life's worth while blessings are for those who live trying to make the world a fit place for even "the least" to live.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

BRAZIL DECLARES WAR ON FASCISTS

Rio de Janeiro (TIS)—The war against Brazilian green-shirted Fascism has reached a new stage by the decision of the government virtually outlawing the Integralista movement led by the Mussolini disciple Plinio Salgado.

The movement claims to have 200,000 followers and 200,000 others who furnish approximately $70,000 a month to the Fascist cause. Other sources say that the movement does not exceed 80,000 members. Under the government decree, uniforms and military equippment are forbidden.

JEWISH WORKER SUES NAZI TRADE UNION FOR HIS RIGHTS

Berlin (TIS)—The suit of a German-Jewish trade unionist against his former union for payment of an old age pension has raised anew the question of labor relations in the new Germany, much to the discomfort of the Nazi regime. While no decision has yet been rendered, it is indicated that the claim of the Jewish trade unionist will likely be upheld, and will thus have an important bearing on legal labor decisions.

Jewish membership in the old German trade union movement has been estimated at approximately 7,000. The German Labor Front, styled the legal successor of the old trade unions, does not admit Jewish members, thereby depriving them of their rights for which they have paid many years.

The Brewers Board of Trade of New York claims that the average New Yorker, including men, women and babies, consumed 22 gallons of beer and 20 gallons of coffee during the last year.

The prohibitionists in the Tennessee legislature administered a stinging defeat to Old John Barleycorn when a bill raising the permissible alcoholic content of so-called non-intoxicating liquor was overwhelmingly rejected.

Friendship
by Lawrance Hawthorne

Just about the finest thing
That the fleeting years can bring
  Is the comfort of a friendship staunch and true!
Life is full of happiness,
But all other joys mean less
  Than the kindly deeds a friendly hand will do.

Wealth and fame are dearly bought
If their benefits are sought
  At the sacrifice of loyal, helpful friends;
And the saddest man I know
Is the one compelled to go
  All alone to where his earthly journey ends.

Friendship lights the darkest day,
And the rough and weary way
  Is made pleasant by the sunshine of a smile;
Every joy brings twice the cheer
When the folks we love are near,
  And our friends make all our blessings more worth-while.

Labor Leaders Address W.P.A.

Steal." Stealing, as defined by Father Merth, is the taking of anything which does not rightfully belong to you, and when the capitalists take more than their just share of the wealth produced they are stealing, he said.

Mayor Frank Rinkel spoke on local conditions stating that considerable work has been planned for this city during the coming summer, and that every employable man will be given a job on local projects. He cited the importance of the coming election on the bond issue and stated that the demand for electric power has increased on the average 12 per cent per year for the past ten years and if the city is to meet that demand additional equipment must be bought or else the city must hook up with the high-line. A federal grant may be gotten to help in the purchase of the equipment but it is unlikely that complete information will be available before the election which is set for May 28th. Work on the new postoffice will begin in a few days. according to Mayor Rinkel.

Julius F .Homme, former member of the Minnesota Industrial Commission, stressed the value of collective working and stated that if the lower forms of animals recognized the importance of working collectively then we of the higher animals should surely be able to organize for our mutual benefit. The struggle between the classes is a struggle for existence, Mr Emme stated, and it is the fear of want that causes this struggle. He told of how wolves would begin to devour each other when extreme difficulties arose, and stated that the NRA was put into operation to prevent the capitalistic wolves from devouring each other. Organization of the working people was held by Mr. Emme as the only way civilization could be saved from itself. Mr. Emme repeated a statement that he made at a union meeting some time ago which cost him his job, "there has never yet been a law passed to benefit the worker as a worker." This was wrongly quoted in some of the papers. "European workers had to stick by their unions because they could not go back to the soil as the American people could at one time, and now the American people no longer have the soil to go to when labor conditions become hard to deal with; the only hope is to organize," Mr. Emme said in explaining the importance of unions to the American workers. He made a plea to the unemployed not to "scab" on their fellow workers, and stated that it is up to the people to save society from its own madness.

Senator Tungseth spoke briefly on his disappointment in things accomplished by the past legislature and stated that laws passed were not as good as he would have liked to have seen them. He also said that the Governor's tax plan came too late in the sesison for them to take any action on it. He said that the legislature was as poorly organized as it could be.

R. M. Aalbu spoke about Mr. Emme's background of service and devotion to the labor movement, stating that as Executive Secretary of the State Industrial Comission he was a real friend of the laboring masses. Thru his efforts, Mr. Aalbu stated, some of the best labor laws possessed by any state were put upon the statute books of Minnesota during the past several years.

Referring to Senator Tungseth's speech, Mr. Aalbu called attention to the fact that altho he professed to have favored legislation in behalf of the common people, he aligned himself with the conservative majority in the senate which was battling to protect the rights of special interests to continue to exploit the people. He challenged Senator Tungseth to defend his record as a senator in public debate at the city auditorium at such time as he himself may decide. Senator Tungseth ignored the challenge, altho he spoke again shortly afterwards in regard to the omnibus tax bill.

A special meeting has been arranged for next Monday night, Mr. Douville announced, and the auditorium has been secured for the meeting. It was announced that the city council would meet with the group and the question of the special bond issue election would be thoroughly discussed. Every one is urged to attend by the president, W. J. Douville.

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

Lydia stopped just within the threshold and shook the light snow from her fur coat and that gesture was enough to cause words to die in the throats of those who saw. Lydia, here! Lydia, from Thirty-Seven, invading this place where decent people, where good men and women and little children, were assembled.

The woman did not hesitate. Head up, intently, she crossed the floor straight toward Ben Elliott who, eyes fast on Dawn to miss no change in her mobile face, still talked with animation, unaware of the hush about them.

He did not stop talking until the woman's shadow fell upon him. Then he looked up, saw her, and rose.

He rose, because a woman was standing there, evidently waiting to speak to him. He did not know her; had never seen her before. He had no time to observe and judge. He would have risen, anyhow, because he was naturally courteous to women. He did more than rise. He even bowed just a trifle when he saw that her eyes were so fast on him. He did not notice that Dawn started, that one hand lifted quickly to her cheek.

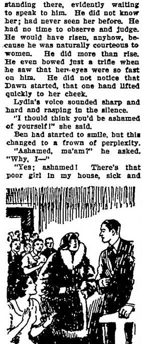
Lydia's voice sounded sharp and hard and rasping in the silence.

"I thould think you'd be ashamed of yourself!" she said.

Ben had started to smile, but this changed to a frown of perplexity.

"Ashamed, ma'am?" he asked. "Why, I—"

"Yes; ashamed! There's that poor girl in my house, sick and crying for days! You brought her here, didn't you? You're the one who got her to come to Tincup. And now, when she needs you, you won't come near her!"



"I Should Think You'd Be Ashamed of Yourself!"

Ben looked at Dawn, who was shrinking back in her chair; at other people, whose faces reflected incredulity, or vicarious guilt or fright.

"Ma'am, I . . . That is, I don't understand you," he stammered.

His eyes were taking her in, now, from her costly fur coat to the emerald earrings, and the hardness of her eyes; and, as in a daze, he classified her, put her in the shameful niche which was hers. A great flush of bewilderment swept into his face.

"Don't understand! Maybe you think you can abuse a girl like that and get away with it in this town, but not while she's in my housea, you can't!"

A wave of humiliation overwhelmed Ben. What could a man do in a situation like this? What could he say? He was fouled, outmatched. Nothing in his experience stood him in stead to meet such an emergency as this one.

"Why . . . Why, this is an outrage," he began weakly. But his fighting spirit surged upward, steadied him. "I've never seen you in my life! I don't even know what you're talking about! This is either a mistake or—"

"Mistake!" the woman cried shrilly. 'Don't try to get away with that! I suppose it does surprise you to have me find you here! But you've kept out of sight, dodging me and—"

"Stop!" he thundered. "Stop it, I say!"

For an instant his conviction checked her. Movement was going on about them, people shifting to see and hear better, one man mounting a chair. The crowd by the doorway had turned back to him after watching Dawn McManus scurry down the stairs. But Elliott was unaware of all this.

"There's no stopping me now, Elliott! I've come to show you up—"

"You come to make trouble on a foundation of lies!" he said and stepped closer to her.

His face was drawn and pale, now, jaws set, and his eyes flared dangerously.

"This is some outrageous plot," he said evenly, and so low that only those nearest him could hear. "This is done deliberately to give me a black eye before these people here! You're a party to a filthy scheme, whoever you are!"

"Fine words, Elliott! Fine words! But this girl's tears and misery are on your head and if you won't help her, I will. She goes back where she came from tomorrow!"

With that, she turned and, self-composed, almost proud in her bearing, crossed the floor. Ben watched her go until she had disappeared down the stairway. Then he faced about, wondering what he could say to Dawn McManus, but she was not there.

His face went blank with amazement, bewilderment.

"She ducked out," a man whispered, and the sound carried through the room.

Gone! Fled because she believed this woman? His heart went cold, but he gathered himself and stalked out of the hall.

Brandon, alone in his office, drank deeply from a whisky bottle. Then, on a telegraph pad scrawled an Ontario address. The message itself contained but two words:

"Send Red."

He signed his name and sat back, brows drawn and after a time nodded vindictively.

* * * * * * * *

Out at the Hoot Owl Ben Elliott went through a week of unbroken dismay. It was a situation such as he had never dreamed of facing.

Dawn had heard and seen and . . . believed! She had fled the hall, convincing him of her belief in Lydia's accusation. Days had passed and he had heard nothing from her. He was impelled to go to her, but under such circumstances, a young man does not do that. There are some affairs so embarrassing that words fall flat.

He was walking, wondering grimly what Dawn was thinking then, what she was doing; he was hearing once again the biting voice of Lydia; hearing, in memory, the hush fall over that dance hall.

He was wholly alone. Far behind him loggers worked in the timber; down yonder the mill sent up its plume of smoke and he could hear the distant puffing of the exhaust in the stillness.

No wind blew; nothing stirred . . . that he could see. He could not observe that slight, cautious movement to his left, that figure which watched him some and edged out through young hemlocks to a point from which his view was unobscured but where he still had good cover.

The man up there stood still. Slowly he shook off his mittens and with a bare thumb released the safety on the rifle he carried, settled slowly to one knee, placing it on the tail of the other snowshoe. His breath was not just steady as he snuggled his cheek against the rifle butt. No man's would be, shooting from ambush that way. Nor were his hands just steady.

He sighted carefully, trying to still the tremor of his arms. He let his breath slip out slowly, he squeezed.

The crack of the rifle echoed and re-echoed across the chopping. Ben Elliott lay still, as he had pitched on his face. One of his hands was outstretched, the other pinned beneath him. His face, one cheek in the snow, was turned toward the man who had fired but it was far away.

For many minutes the man in the timber remained kneeling. Elliott did not stir. Then, cautiously, the killer groped for the ejected shell, slipped it into his pocket, raised to his feet and, backing cautiously, struck into the deep timber.

CHAPTER X

THE rifle bullet had passed so close above Ben's head that he had felt its breath even before he was aware of its whine.

A bullet . . . here . . . . for him! A hunter? But what would a hunter be shooting at here? That bullet was designed for him and had missed by inches. And he was pitching forward, simulating a fall, letting himself go limp. It was the only protection he could conjure.

He saw nothing, no movement, even; heard nothing. He was a-tingle, scalp creeping with an odd sensation as he waited for another bullet from these heights to the eastward.

But no other come. Ben lay there until deep dusk had fallen. Then he rose to his hands and knees, watching, listening. After a moment he stood still. Then, resolutely, he left the road, wallowed through the deep snow, crossed the railroad track and toiled up the heights. He went on, through the snow to the first fringe of trees. Then he spoke, in a light hail: "Hi!"—and immediately dropped behind a stump.

After a moment he rose, went forward again and entered the shadows boldly. No one was there, for certain, but before he had gone more than a few paces he came on that which he sought: a snowshoe track, visible in the gloom because of the softness of the snow. Whoever had gone that way had sunk deeply.

He followed this out of the thick timber to a little clearing. The trail was not visible in the darkness so he struck a match and holding it cupped in one hand, bent low.

The flare showed the track of a long, narrow shoe plainly and as he moved the tiny torch along toward its tip he stopped all movement. The match burned out. He moved on to the next track and lighted another. He examined several of the imprints made by the shoe. Then he went as rapidly as possible back down the slope to the road and started on to camp.

After supper Ben called Bird-Eye Blaine to one side.

"I'd like to have you harness the supply team and spend an evening in town," he said.

The little barn boss cocked an inquisitive eye.

"Just in town, Misther Elliott? Or fer somethin' special?"

"Something special . . . But no one else is to know. What I want to find out is this: Who is wearing a pair of Canadian snowshoes with the webbing in the toe torn so it makes a hole about this shape."

Quickly he sketched a rough outline on a leaf of his notebook. Bird-Eye scanned it and nodded.

It was after midnight when Ben Elliott roused from his sleepless bed to hear Bird-Eye speaking to his team outside. He crawled out of his blankets and opened the office door to let the other in, but before he asked any questions lighted a lamp.

"Well, how about it?"—as he replaced the chimney.

Bird-Eye looked at him narrowly.

"I found th' shoes," he said with an emphatic nod. "'Nd I found out who's they be! They're the property av' wan Red Bart Delaney, a celebrated killer from somewheres in Canady!"

From the second small bedroom separated from the office by a board partition, a bed creaked sharply. Elliott did not hear it.

"So that's it!" he said softly.

"Yis! That's ut! Th' prisence av a rattlesnake loike Red Bart in th' community don't forecast nawthing but th' hottest kind av trouble! Ye've heard av him, ain't it?"

"Yes, I have. He was mixed up in that spruce war on the Zhing-Wauk. A hired killer."

"Killer is roight! 'Nd what may he be a-doing in these parts?"

Elliott did not reply to that question.

"What else did you find out?" he asked.

"Well, he brought his stinkin' prisence into Tincup Wednesday noight on its own two stinkin' feet! He's favorin' Joe Piette's hotel. Te' snowshoes was in th' office 'nd it come up so's I didn't have to seem curious to foind out whose they was. He's here lookin' fer cedar, he says. But it gives a body a lot av bother [illegible]nderin' what his rale reason moight be. Lyin' 's as natural as breathin' to th' loikes."

"I can tell you," Ben said. "He's gunning for me, Bird-Eye."

"Saints! . . . I thought ut, I did! Ah, me b'y—"

"Yes, he started today. I was shot at with a rifle two miles up the road just at sundown. The man who shot at me wore a snowshoe with the web broken. He wouldn't be lending his snowshoes."

Bird-Eye stood motionless and silent for a moment before he spoke. "Thin th' sooner we give him both barrels av somethin', th' safer ye'll be, Misther Elliott! He's a harrd chunk, him. It's Nick Brandon's work, who's tried everything else 'nd who'll not refuse to try murder to get ye down, Benny b'y!"

"Likely you're right," Ben said and rubbed his chin with a knuckle. "But we'd have to prove that, first. There's nothing to worry about, now we know the man's here to get me. Likely he thought he got me. Still there, was he? Um. . . . Well, that's something to think over, Bird-Eye. You better hit for camp, and get some sleep. I may call you in the forenoon."

Bird-Eye sniffed and twisted his head gravely and after adding imprecations on Nicholas Brandon and warning Ben to stay close to the office, departed.

He could be heard unblanketing his team and climbing into the sleigh; and when the frosty runners screamed in departure sounds came from that second bedroom behind the partition, the door opened and John Martin stood looking out. His dark eyes held on Ben Elliott, anxious and troubled.

"I couldn't help hearing," he said simply. "Do you mind?"

"Of course not, John. Looks like lively times!"—with a grin.

"It's none of my affairs Elliott, but I'm an older man than you. I've seen trouble . . . a-plenty." His voice dropped significantly, as though old wounds were being opened. "I've heard of Delaney. I can't help but think Bird-Eye's advice is good. Swear out a warrant for him the first thing. This is a time for caution. It'll do you no good to take risks."

"I'll not walk into any traps, but if Brandon thinks he can make me hunt my hole—"

"Oh, Brandon!" The cry was bitter and Martin threw his arms wide in a gesture of helplessness. "You've got to watch him as you've never watched a man in your life. Why, son, you don't know, you don't dream, of the ends he'll go to!"

"But I thought you didn't know him," Ben said, puzzled. "I thought you said you were a stranger to this country."

"Yes. But stories travel. And isn't your experience today enough to convince anyone of the man's ruthlessness?"

"Oh, sure," Ben agreed, but still wondering at Martin's mood. "You're right. He'll stop at nothing, not even murder. And I agree with you that he's got to be watched. But if I ran into my burrow or didn't try to get at the bottom of this thing, he'd gain part of what he's after, you see. No, that can't be done."

He rose and began to pace the floor.

"And it's not only the Hoot Owl, now, that's at stake. He's mixed up in more important matters than just property. He caught me foul where it hurt . . . hurt!" Martin, following him with his eyes, winced. "He's used a woman to come between me and the finest girl that ever walked the earth!" Martin looked away as Ben confronted him, almost as one will avert his face from a painful sight. "Lastly he brings a hired killer to polish me off. Darned if I know what to expect next. But one thing he can bank on: I won't run. I'll drive him into the open if I can by hook or crook, but I won't run!"

The increase in each county by percentage is as follows: Becker, 12.3, Beltrami 17.7, Clay 6.6, Clearwater 29, Kittson 10.7, Lake of the woods 42.3, Mahnomen 6.3, Marshall 9.1 Norman 6.3, Ottertail 9.3, Pennington 18.5, Polk 14, Red Lake 10.6, Roseau 19.9, Wilkin 6.6.

Part of the increase in Lake of the Woods county is due to the omission of figures from one township in the 1930 census and the actual gain there is about 30 per cent.

Shifting of Stranded Families Continues

With the Minnesota quota of Alaska emigrants safely started on their venturesome trek as wards of Uncle Sam, the biggest rehabilitation plans now being worked out by the federal government in Minnesota concern the relocation of 309 rural families in Lake of the Woods and Roseau counties, and 100 in Koochiching county, according to R. I. Nowell, regional director of the federal land program, with headquarters in Madison, Wisconsin.

The first, or Beltrami Island state forest group will be moved gradually to fertile lands along the Rainey river, near the towns of Spooner, Swift and Roosevelt. As to the Koochiching county families, their removal is contemplated from sub-marginal locations to better lands along the Little Fork and Rainy rivers, in the vicinity of Little Fork and International Falls.

"Wastful maintenance of roads, schools and other governmental services will be eliminated by the concentration of these families in more compact areas," Mr. Nowell stated.

HUNGER STRIKE OF SOCIALIST PRISONERS FORCES CONCESSIONS

Vienna (TIS).—While the trial against 21 Socialist Schutzbund leaders is progressing and the prosecution has suffered a tremendous blow by the collapse of its main witness, the police spy Korbel, official pressure and persecution of the Austrian workers is steadily growing. Conditions in the prisons and concentration camps where thousands of Austrian Socialists and workers are held, are unbearable. They recently led to a hunger strike of more than 400 Socialist worker prisoners in the police prison Rossaherlando near Vienna. The strikers, who insisted on better food, permission to bathe at least once a week, extension of visitors' time from 2 minutes to 15 minutes, and cessation of brutal beatings by the guards, won their points after one week's duration of their hunger strike.

MINNESOTA BREVITIES

FISH LIVES SIX MONTHS IN HEAP OF LILY WEEDS

Luverne.— A gold fish which remained very much alive and healthy far removed from water for a period of six months was the unusual discovery of Aaner Skeland, Luverne, last week. Skeland, a landscape gardner, has had many unusual experiences in his profession, but the prize of them all came when he was unpacking some water lillies from winter storage, preparatory to placing them in the lily pools at his home. As he picked up a handful of the flowers from the sodden heap in which they had rested since last November 1st, out jumped a gold fish, wriggling and very much alive. For nearly six months the fish had managed to successfully hibernate with the lilies; despite the absence of the quantity of moisture normally required by the finny tribe.

CONSCIENCE TRAPS ILLEGAL FISHERMAN

Lewiston.—Illegal fishing doesn't pay, but it isn't always the game warden who makes that saying true, and a group of early fishermen at Lewiston had the strange experience of being caught by their conscience. The group had made arrangements with a farmer to go thru his yard to the lake. One night last week they started out, but the farmer was not at home and they proceeded to the lake, caught their fish, and were returning thru the yard when the hired man, who knew nothing about the "deal" heard them coming. Believing those in the car to be chicken thieves, the hired man got out the gun and ordered them to stop. Conscience smote the illegal fishermen, who believed the hired man to be a game warden, and they "stepped on it." The hired man opened fire, and shot up a couple of tires, making the fish a rather costly catch.

EASTER BUNNY CRASHES THROUGH WINDSHIELD

An Easter rabbit arirved in an unusual fashion for George Grovedahl, of Sargent, on the day before Easter. Grovedahl, with his mother, was riding along the road near Sargent when a rabbit suddenly appeared on the road. The bunny, quite bewildered, did not know in what direction to go, so he took a flying leap and when he came down it was through the windshield and into Mrs. Grovedahl's lap.

ANT-EATING ARMADILLO FOUND AT FARMINGTON

Farmington.—An ant-eating armadillo, with its natural coat of armor, was found on a straw stack on the Bowe farm in East Castle Rock recently. The armadillo, common in the south but rarely seen north of the southern Iowa line, and whose habitat is South America, 'probably due to severe dust storms in the south decided to move to a good country and 'hitch-hiked' to Minnesota," according to Mr. Bowe. It is a harmless creature and lies buried in the earth throughout the day, moving about only in dark hours. Like a turtle it withdraws into its hard shell when danger threatens, rolling away from its enemy.

DOG FINDS LOST WALLET WITH $96

Breckenridge— Some folks do not care for dogs, but they don't have a dog like the one owned by Ed Evenson, Foxhome resident. Evenson believes that the dog is the smartest animal on earth, and has some reason for believing so. Evenson lost his billfold containing $96 not long ago. Nick Hennenfent discovered a dog playing with a billfold. Nick had the dog give him the pocketbook, and when he found $96 in it, he brought it to Evenson. There is one dog in Foxhome that will not go hungry if Evenson knows about it.

MOTHER ABANDONS 10-DAY OLD BABY GIRL

Crookston.—A tiny baby girl, believed to be about 10 days old, was left on the steps of St. Vincent's hospital at Crookston recently, wrapped in two fresh blankets to which was pinned a note signed "A heart-broken Mother." The note was addresed to "the Person Who Finds This Baby" and stated "Please take care of my darling baby as I have tried and can't make enough money. A mother can starve herself, but can't see a tiny baby suffer. May God always be beside her and I know you people will do your best." No clues are available as to the baby's identity.

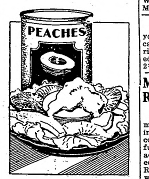
Wabasha.—A freak pig with three eyes, one like Cyclops in the middle of his forehead, and with the head divided from there down into two complete "snoots" with one eye on either side, was born with a litter of 11 black Poland China pigs on the William E. Hook farm near Thielman. The pig lived only 20 minutes, his death being due not so much to its deformity as to the fact that his mother stepped on him.

PLACARDS WILL IDENTIFY SERA WORK PROJECTS

The posting of signs on all outdoor projects directed by the Minnesota SERA (State Emergency Relief administration), each sign carrying the project number, to keep the public apprised, is suggested to governmental sponsoring units by Walter F. MacGregor, state engineer and director of the work division.

According to the work director, the signs could suitably carry the following inscription: "Work project of the Minnesota Emergency Relief Administration. Project No. ...."

Mr. MacGregor suggests that trucks operating on highways while used in SERA work should be equipped with placards bearing the words: "Minnesota Emergency Relief Administration," and the project number. Obviously, the placards should be attached or detached from the trucks as they are on or off the SERA payroll.



Peach Salads

GINGER PEACH SALAD: Drain the peach halves from half a No. 2½ can and lay in lettuce leaves on salad plates. Mash one cream cheese, add two tablespoons mayonnaise, and cream together. Crumble three gingersnaps and mix in carefully. Pile this mixture on top of the peaches, and chill. Garnish with the rest of three-fourths cup mayonnaise. Serves four.

Peach and Cottage Cheese Salad: Have everything very cold. Drain four peach halves (half a No. 2 can), and place, cut side up, in lettuce leaves. Pile one-half cup cottage cheese on top, put a dab of English Chutney (you will need two tablespoons of it) on top of each, and garnish with four tablespoons mayonnaise. Serves four.

These Are Decorative

Jack-O-Lantern Salad: Chill twelve small-sized canned peach halves, drain and slightly scoop out cavities to make holes larger. Mix one-half cup halved, seeded white grapes and one-half cup chopped salted almonds with enough mayonnaise to moisten. Stuff cavities with this and then press the two halves together. Place each stuffed peach in a wreath of shredded lettuce. Make a Jack-o-lantern face on each with bits and strips of date. Makes six salads.

Five Fruit Salad: Drain a No. 2 can peach halves, a No. 2 can grapefruit and a 10-ounce can figs, and chill. Remove all the skin and fibre from two oranges, and cut in thin circles or in sections. Cut two bananas in fingers. Place a peach half in the center of a bed of lettuce and fill the cavity with cream mayonnaise to which has been added bits of preserved ginger and chopped salted almonds. Arrange the other fruits in groups around the peach. Serves eight.*

Minnesota Sets National Record in Road Work

The Minnesota Highway Department is leading the United States in amount of road construction completed with federal grant funds made available last year, according to a tabulation completed by the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads. Receipt of the tabulation was announced by N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

These figures show construction progress in every state in the Union as of March 1. Although Minnesota's allotment of federal road funds last year was less than half that of some other states, the amount of money put to work in completed, federally approved projects at the time of the tabulation was nearly three times greater than the second ranking state.

As one of the prime considerations of the government in making the grants was to get the work under way as quickly as possible, the record places Minnesota in an unusually favorable light. Out of the state's allotment of $5,425,551, there had been completed March 1, $1,456,525 worth of construction. Some states as of this date had not completed any work, while several others had less than $100,000 of completed projects to their credit, according to government figures.

Action Started for New Mooney Trial

San Francisco, Cal. — A new court action on behalf of Tom Mooney has been filed in Marin county superior court by Atty. George T. Davis.

The move is a result of the U. S. supreme court decision directing the famous labor prisoner to bring suit in state courts for a habeas corpus writ.

At Sacramento, Assemblyman Jones, Epic floor leader, has introduced a bill which would entitle Mooney to a writ of habeas corpus and thus enable him to gain his freedom.

Estimates based upon government reports indicate that in 1936 the cost of government will be 104 per cent above income—the greatest peace-time deficit in the nation's history.

$133,848 ROAD AID ALLOTTED TO 3 COUNTIES

Total Aid From State Road And Bridge Fund Increases $200,000

GAS TAX SHOWS GROWTH

Three Counties Receive $10,116 Each From One Mill Road Levy

Minnesota counties will receive approximately $200,000 more from the state road and bridge fund this year than in 1934. The state Board of Allotment, consisting of Julius Schmahl, state treasurer, N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, and Stafford King, state auditor, has determined the available 1935 fund to be $4,411,647, compared with approximately $4,200,000 last year. The amount is an estimate made by the board of receipts from one-mill state road tax and one-third of the state gasoline tax in the current year.

The one-mil tax is expected to yield $1,011,647 this year, or about the same as last. The allotment board estimates gas tax receipts for the counties as $3,400,000 as against $3,200,000 in 1934. Money from the one-mill tax goes to state aid roads and the gas tax money to county-aid roads.

Amounts allotted in this territory are as follows: Pennington county, from the one mill tax $10,116.00, and from the gas tax allotment, $25,500. Marshall and Red Lake counties will also each receive $10,116.00 from the one-mill levy while Marshall county will receive $52,500.00 as its share of the gas tax and Red Lake county will get $25,500.00 from the gas tax.

Baseball Team to Play Park Rapids In Season Opener

A letter from M. E. Dekko states that plans are made to play the first baseball game of the season next Sunday afternoon at the fairgrounds with Park Rapids baseball taem. The team is equipped with new uniforms and are reputed to be in very good shape.

Lefty Hieberg, former St. Olaf college star and captain, will do most of the pitching for the team this year, but he will also play in the outfield when he is not being used, Mr. Dekko said. Other members of the Thief River Falls team who promise to show good form are, Mr. Dekko stated: Halmach, who pitched for Red Lake last year; Gronnigan of Concordia college and Langlen, former player, will take care of the offerings of the pitchers; Langlen is also one of the mighty hitters of the bunch. Brovick, one of the best outfielders in this part of the country, will cover the center field. The left-fielder, a lad who is good enough for the major leagues, will be M. Thordahl.

A very good game is promised fans next Sunday as the Park Rapids team is an all-salaried team, Mr. Dekko said.

LABOR SWAMPS OPPONENTS IN MPLS. PRIMARY

Candidate for MayorReceives More Votes Than Three Leading Opponents

By Henry C. Teigan

It was a glorious victory! Minneapolis Farmer-Laborites swamped their opponents in the city primary election last Monday.

Thomas E. Latimer, life-long progressive and leader in the Farmer-Labor movement of Minneapolis, polled a huge plurality over his 18 opponents for the mayoralty nomination. Mr. Latimer received 46,488 votes to 20,943 for Charles F. Keyes and 16,899 for Mayor A. G. Bainbridge. Other candidates trailed the leaders.

While it was expected that Mr. Latimer would lead, it was not anticipated that he would poll more votes than his three leading opponents combined. He actually received 1,000 more votes than was given Keyes, Bainbridge and Caton all told.

F-L Candidates Lead

In the race for other offices the Farmer-Laborites also fared well. Mrs. Alfred Carlson and Arthur Lesueur, F-L endorsees for school directors, were nominated, as were Oscar C. Hall for the office of city comptroller, Al Hanson for board of estimate and taxation, and Myrtle Harris and Leila Witchie Hard-

1ST CAMPAIGN PERIOD ENDS IN SIX DAYS

Vote Value of Subscriptions Will Take a Sharp Decline

CANDIDATES IN CLOSE RACE AS TIME SHORTENS

Promisers Urged to Subscribe While Vote Value Is The Highest

The first period of the Forum's "Good Will" Subscription campaign will close in only six more days.

The first period will close promptly at 9:00 P. M. Wednesday, May 22nd. After that time subscriptions will not be accepted on first period credits. All candidates must be in the Forum office by that time in order to apply their business on higher vote schedule of this period.

Candidates are reporting many promises of subscriptions at a later date. Candidates receive so many of these promises that it is sometimes physically impossible for them to call back on all of these people before the close of the period. We therefore wish to appeal to everyone who has told a candidate to call back before the close of the period, to send in your subscriptions to the Forum office if you see that your favorite candidate isn't going to be able to make the call that you have been anticipating. Mail your subscriptions so that they are postmarked before May 22nd at 9:00 p. m., and they will apply on first period credits. After the close of the first period there will be a sharp decline in the vote getting value of your subscriptions.

Some people seem to feel that, "They will give a lot more votes for subscriptions at the end." This is not true. We will NOT give any more votes for subscriptions at any time during the campaign than as advertised in the announcing issue and outlined on the cover of each candidate's receipt book.

Those who insist that we will are "mis-informed" and base their opinion on their own suppositions.

Those of you who have not had a candidate call on you, if you can, give the candidate your subscription when they call, so that the worker may apply your subscriptions on first period credits.

If your favorite candidate does not call, mail your subscriptions, with your candidate's name, to the office of the Forum Campaign Department, and that worker will receive full and proper credits for your subscription.

"Tons of Money" Will be Given At Auditorium Friday

"Tons of Money" will be presented at the auditorium tomorrow night, Friday, by the Lincoln High School Senior Class, under the direction of Miss Edberg. The play is a modern English comedy concerning the escapades of one Aubrey Matland Allington (Kendall Gustafson) who is trying to keep creditors from cutting in on a fortune which he has inherited.

Aubrey went into consultation with his wife Louise (Adele Holmstrom) and they decided to make people believe he had been killed in an explosion. A few weeks later he returned as George Maitland of Mexico who was the next inheritor according to the will in the event of Aubrey's death. This plan seemed to be fool-proof.

Jean Everard (Kathleen Monesbroten) a visitor of Louise's, claims the make believe George Maitland as her long-lost husband and, since Aubrey was not a Mormon at heart, he and his wife decided that he must "die" again. This time he "drowns," an idea of his wife's, but a blundering gardener spoils the plan after which Aubrey swears that he'll never die again.

The butler (Jerome Hall) has his ear to the ground and decides to cash in on the fortune and disguises his brother (Marvin Lindberg) as George Maitland and the resulting circumstances are hilar-

MORRIS KAPLAN TO SPEAK HERE FRIDAY, MAY 24

Merchant Who Pulled NRA Tail Feathers to Appear At Auditorium

Morris Kaplan, prominent Bemidji merchant and a well-known lecturer and student of Sociology, Economics and Political Science, will speak at the municipal auditorium Friday evening, May 24, under the auspices of the Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor association club.

Mr. Kaplan has been identified with the progressive political movement in Minnesota for over a quarter of a century, touring the state as a Socialist soap-box orator twenty-five years ago. Shortly after that time he entered the mercantile business in Bemidji, and altho he has been a busy man, and made an outstanding success in his business, he has never been too busy to take an active and militant part in the political affairs of the state.

After the inauguration of the "New Deal" he took issue with the administration's policy of "Killing off the little felolw to benefit the big fellow," under the AAA and NRA. This culminated in a run-in with Mrs. Annie Dickie Olson, state NRA enforcement officer when she called him on the carpet for alleged violations of the NRA code provisions. Mr. Kaplan's reply to her was widely reprinted in the daily press of the state and is considered an epic in parliamentary moves.

COUNCIL FAILS TO APPEAR AT MASS MEETING

Civic and Commerce Assn., And Other Groups, Have Spokesmen

DISCUSSION HARD TO HOLD, FACTS LACKING

Dahlquist Now Favors More Power Equipment; Did Not Two Years Ago

Bitter disappointment was expressed by Wm. Douville, president of the Workmen's Protective Association, because of the failure of the city council to send a representative to explain the coming Bond Issue Election, last Monday night. A crowd of approximately 350 people gathered to hear the pros and cons of the question but as there was no statement made by the council it was difficult to conduct an enlightened discussion.

A letter from P. O. Myhrum, president of the council, stated that his personal opinion was that a sewage disposal plant was a better project to push at this time. His reason for this statement was that sooner or later the city would be required to build such a plant and that sufficient power could be gotten from the water turbine to furnish any great increase in demand on the plant.

Lincoln Arnold, appearing as a representative of the Civic and Commerce Association, stated that he had conducted an investigation to the best of his ability and had found that the maximum production obtainable from the present equipment, exclusive of water power, is 810 k.w. hours. The peak load last fall, as computed from figures given by Ole Legvold, was 750 k.w. hours, and that the rate of increase in consumption was ten per cent per year for the past ten years and for the first four months of 1935 the consumption jumped 12 per cent over the consumption of the same four months of 1934. If the present rate of increase continues until next fall the equipment now in the plant wil lnot take care of the peak load which has been estimated will be 814 k.w. hours, four k.w. hours more than the present equipment can generate. The question before the people, according to Mr. Arnold, is how

SCHOOL BOARD ACTS TO ESTAB. AGRICUL. DEPT.

Agriculture I, II and III to Be Initiated Into Curriculum Next Year

As per instructions given at the last meeting of the school board, Mr. Morris Bye, superintendent of schools, investigated the cost and set-up for an agriculture department in the high school. Information gathered by Mr. Bye from Carl Calrow, state supervisor of agricultural education, and presented at the meeting of the board Monday night brought out that the aims of an agricultural department in high schools are: To develop an understanding of the dependence of the nation on agriculture; to acquaint students with the sources of foods and the costs of production of them; to develop coperation in economic activities; to give an understanding on how to establish and maintain farm homes; to enable students to better participate in social and civic enterprises; to build leadership and to make known the value of real leadership; to teach the younger generation how to manage farms effectively and to help establish successful farming.

It is planned to teach Agriculture I, II and III which will cost approximately $410 for equipment and the high school's share of the instruction cost will be about $515, according to figures submitted by Mr. Bye. The growth of agriculture education during the past five years was cited by Supt. Bye, which brought out that the number of students enrolled in these classes in the state has increased from 1752 to 3810 while the number of departments in the state has increased from 65 to 86 in the five year period. Mr. Bye also stated that 22 per cent of the boys enrolled in Lincoln high school were boys living on the farm.

Action was taken by the school board to establish an agriculture department in the local high school next year. The Thief River Falls Soft-Ball League was granted use of the Lincoln Athletic field for the games during the 1935 season.

Mr. C. H. Jung attended the state baker's convention at Bismarck, N. D., last week from Monday until Thursday.

Jack Houfek left this week for Bellingham, Minn., where he will be employed.

Canada Firm Commends Forsberg Seed Cleaners

Fred Forsberg and Sons of this city manufacturers of seed cleaning machinery, have recently submitted samples of seed sent them forcleaning by large grain processors in Canada and have received some very flattering comments on the work of their machines. "Your machines have done cleaning that is far superior to any equipment we have here," the letter states.

The Canadian firm offers the Forsbergs the problem of producing a machine that will reclaim extremely foul seed which now is worth only $16 per ton, stating that if a cleaning system can be built that will eliminate the foul seeds and trash which amounts to about 75 per cent of the volume, the remaining 25 per cent of good seed will be worth about $60 per ton.

Phantom Truck Starts Itself And Wheels Down Third Street

A truck belonging to a local business concern astonished spectators Tuesday morning by starting its engine and then leisurely crossing Main avenue and heading down Third street. B. Mitchell, who happened to be near, jumped in the cab and finally brought the vehicle to a halt before it had done any damage. The truck was parked near the Montgomery Ward store, apparently inert, when, through some unexplained cause, the starter turned the engine over, the truck was in gear, and the ignition switch was on, according to Mr. Mitchell.

Local Leaders To Attend Farm Bureau Meeting

Thousands Township Units Will be Represented at Dist. Meets

Plans for progress during the summer months will be taken up by farm leaders in more than 70 Minnesota counties when the annual spring conferences of local Farm Bureau officers opens today at Fergus Falls. Eleven district meetings are to be held, each to draw attendance from six to eight neighboring counties. The schedule, revised since the preliminary announcement, includes Crookston, May 17; Bemidji May 18; Grand Rapids May 20; Litchfield May 22; Clarkfield May 23; Slayton May 24; New Ulm May 25; St. Paul May 27; Owatonna May 28, and Lewiston, May 29.

Recent legislative achievements of the American Farm Bureau at Washington will be discussed by V. L. Vaniman, of the national organization. He will also explain how, through organization, farmers working through the A. F. B. F. were able to head off a general freight rate increase. J. S. Jones, secretary-treasurer of the state organization, will discuss the part played by Minnesota agriculture during the 1935 legislative session, and outline progress made on the 1935 Farm Bureau program as laid down at the annual meeting last January.

A. G. Mereness, organization director, and Mrs. Lewis Minion, home and community director, will also speak at each of the meetings.

Officers of more than 70 County Farm Bureaus and about a thousand township units will attend the meetings.

DEMAND FOR FARM EQUIPMENT HOLDS THE UPWARD TREND

Washington, D. C., May 13.—While orders for farm equipment of nearly all types continue well above last year's level, reports to the Federal Housing Administration from its special representatives indicate continuance of the decided upward trend in demand, not only for farm equipment but for improvements to farms and farm homes.

The one qualification in these reports is, "provided weather conditions are in any way favorable."

Even the most adverse weather conditions cannot down the optimistic spirit of the farmers in some areas which have been suffering from drouth and other calamities. The recent report of the farm representative in Oklahoma shows this spirit. He reports:

"In spite of drought, high winds and sand storms, farmers and farm women in Roger Mills county are cheerful and optimistic. I was agreeably surprised to find a nice lot of home improvement being done and to see so much interest in the home improvement program."

The potential demand for farm equipment, including tools and heavy machinery, is considered by specialists to be the greatest in the history of the trade because farmers have been "holding back" since 1927 and 1928. The actual demand, according to trade reports, has cleaned out warehouse stocks in some sections of the country and is keeping orders well above production, which is nearing capacity in some lines.

Sheer necessity is given by the farm representatives as the reason for the continued upward trend of the demand for farm equipment and other farm improvements. This necessity is summed up in the statement of a Virginia farm woman, reported by the representative for that territory, as follows:

"We just can't continue to put off making repairs and some improvements to our house. Whether we have any money to do it with, or not, we must do something about it."

One of the surprisingly frequent comments in the field reports is that farmers are doing their building largely with private money, as well as with their own labor.

While the Federal Housing Administration offers an easy method of financing farm improvements under the .modernization credit plan, it was pointed out that the Administration is trying to stimulate demand for all types of necessary and advisable farm improvement, regardless of whether the farmer pays cash, borrows money on regular terms or gets it under the modernization credit plan.

Pactically every form of permanent improvement to the farm home and outbuildings, and to the farm itself, and all necessary equipment which is permanently installed, are eligible for financing through the medernization credit plan, it was explained.

UNION HEAD SHOT IN COLD BLOOD BY SCAB TRUCK BOSS

Stockton, Cal.—R. G. Morency, vice-president of the Weigners, Warehousemen and Cereal Workers' Union was killed Monday in cold blood by Charles Grey, son of the proprietor of a notorious scab trucking firm, as Morency, stepped unarmed, from the curb to speak to Grey, who was passing in a car.

The union, which is affiliated with the Longshoremen's International, went on strike two weeks ago. A special anti-picketing ordinance was rushed through the city council to handicap the strike, and fifty armed deputies were asisgned to strike meetings to "protect" the bosses.

LOS ANGELES AND A CROSS ROADS VILLAGE MAKE REPORT

By W. G. Calderwood

Two letters arirved in the same mail. Both were highly interesting and instructive, tho the content of neither was unusual.

One carried official figures from Los Angeles showing that arrests of women for drunkenness in the City of Angels has increased 178 per cent under repeal. This is proof, supported by records from many other cities, that in the busy centers of population repeal has been a blistering fiasco.

The other came from a young woman school teacher in a little rural village of 174 population. It read in part:

"In our town there are three beer saloons. Our town voted dry on repeal, but the council will do nothing; the constable is usually around these places, and often referees the fights between drunks; on occasion he has had to walk his own daughter around the streets to sober her up; the county attorney only laughs, and says we should have a village liquor store.

"Already children are suffering for lack of food and clothing just because their fathers and mothers go to these places to drink and play poker.

"Age means nothing to the sellers for I know young children who go to buy the liquor.

"Lodging is provided for some men who have brought with them young girls, some not over 15 years old.

"We have always been pround of our town because hitherto it had nothing of this sort going on, but now we are sincerely ashamed of it."

There is an increasing cloud of witnesses to the fact that the small-town and rural center beer saloon is a veritable gate to hell for children, youth and the home.

There were many honest repealists who urged the repudiation of prohibition in the belief that repeal would promote true temperance and sobriety. Many of them made sincere and heartfelt appeals in the name of youth, childhood and the home. To them these conditions must be an abhorrent disillusionment for which they may be able to suggest some effective remedy.

BIOLOGIST TO STRESS WILD LIFE RESEARCH

Wild life resources of Minnesota were given a boost in the appointment effective May 1 of Gustav Swanson as a biologist for the Division of Game and Fish. A Minneapolis resident, he is a native Minnesotan.

Mr. Swanson will initiate game management practices in many of the state game refuges and will have supervision over the propagation and distribution of game birds and mammals. Cooperative work now being carried on by the University of Minnesota, U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey, and the Minnesota Division of Game and Fish will be more closely corelated. He will represent the state Division at state and nationwide game conferences.

He received his Master of Arts degree from the state university after having done graduate work in zoology and entomology; he served as teaching assistant for four years in the department of zoology. He is a member of Sigma Xi, Gamma Alpha, American Society of Mammalogists, American Ornithologists' Union and other scientific societies.

In charge of wild life management and forestry work in the soil erosion service area conducted by the U. S. Department of Agriculture at Spring Valley, this state, he comes to his new position with a well-grounded background for his new work.

"Addition of a trained biologist in game management and research will make it possible for the Division of Game and Fish to stimulate work in wild life conservation and restoration to a greater extent than ever before attempted by the division," Erling Swanson, division director, said.

Mr. Swanson will work in close cooperation with Dr. R. G. Green and Ralph T. King of the state university who are at present carrying on wild life research projects.

VARIETY OF CONTESTS AT 4-H CLUB SHORT COURSE

A wide variety of educational and recreational contests will feature the 4-H Club Short Course to be held at the Northwest School of Agriculture, Crookston June 17-22. District Club Leader H. A. Pflughoeft has announced an expanded crops program which will include crops judging. This feature proved so popular last year that arrangements are being made for a large increase in entries in this division. Practice in livestock judging will also be given daily as a preliminary to the final contests in dairy and general livestock judging.

Last year every county in the Red River Valley took part in the recreational program consisting of an athletic tournament, dramatic and music contests. Based upon preliminary reports, Mr. Pflughoeft expects even greater intereest this year. County eliminations will be held to pick the winning plays and music numbers for competition in the district event. Many counties are also arranging play days to pick representatives for the athletic events. The winning plays and music numbers at the Northwest School 4-H Club Short Course will take part in the state contest to be held at St. Paul during State Fair Week. Each county will be entitled to enter two girls in a "Well Groomed Girl" contest. Points to be considered will include the suitability of the clothes worn by the individual while at the 4-H club short course and personal grooming.

"Winners in the various events at the Northwest School 4-H club short course last year included the following: crops and general livestock judging, Clearwater county; dairy judging, West Otter Tail; dramatics, Roseau; music, Roseau, athletics, Roseau. Roseau also received the honor for winning the highest number of points in all contests. Kittson county ranked second. Pennington county won first in their class with a 4-H club band, and second on a one-act play. West Polk had high man in beef judging. Norman county ranked high with both their band and one-act play. Clay county placed fourth with total number of points in athletics. Marshall county, with a chorus of 20 voices, won honorable mention.

Because of the marked increase in attendance during recent years, two separate 4-H club short courses will be held at the Northwest School this year. Club members from six southern Red River Valley counties will attend June 17 to 19, while those from the seven northern counties will attend June 20 to 22.

STATE PENSION ACT IS HELD INVALID

Minnesota's new old age pension law was held invalid in a formal opinion supplied today by Attorney General H. H. Peterson, to the state board of control. In a 7,000 word opinion, the attorney general held the act has no force because the bill signed by the Governor differed from the bill actually passed by the legislature. It was a clerical error, but fatal, says the attorney general, whose ruling was first announced informally in last Sunday's Journal.

Governor Floyd B. Olson declined to say whether the ruling means a special session of the legislature, but it is generally thought one will be called. A court action may be brought to test the law, on the chance the courts would hold the error not fatal.

Language in the printed bill, signed by the Governor, allows pension applicants to receive the $30 monthly allowance only in case they have no relatives able to support them. This language was not in the bill as agreed upon by the legislature, Mr. Peterson said.

"Notwithstanding the adoption of the report of the conference committee by both the house and the senate," said the opinion, "and the elimination of the provisions referred to from the bill, another bill was enrolled, which included these provisions, that had been eliminated by the action of the legislature itself. The enrolled bill with these provisions in it was presented to the Goevrnor for his signature, and this he approved.

"It is thus obvious the bill which was passed by the legislature was not presented to the Governor for his approval, and that the bill which he did approve was not the one passed by the legislature. This renders the purported law a nullity. We are constrained by this conclusion by the rules laid down by the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota."

FAT CATTLE OUTLOOK IS BRIGHT, SAYS LEE OF CENTRAL CO-OP

There is nothing pessimistic in the beef cattle outlook at least for the next three months, according to Charles E. Lee, cattle salesman for the Central Cooperative Association at South St. Paul, Minnesota. Mr. Lee contacts a great many livestock feeders in the corn belt and is in close tab with the supply situation as well as factors influencing demand.

"Fat cattle continue scarce, and long fed finished beeves undoubtedly will bring a premium over ordinary cattle during the next three months," says Lee. "Later in the spring when grass cattle begin to come to market in larger numbers, there will be the usual seasonal spread in prices. This grassy condition of cattle is undesirable from the stand-point of killers and it results in the lowering of prices on that class.

"Strictly choice long fed heavy steers are quotable at $14.00 per cwt. and above now, a shipment of long fed beeves having sold in Central's alleys at that price not so long ago.

"The feeder situation is about as expected by most stockmen. With excellent prospects for grazing demand for thin stock has far exceeded the available supply. All who have thin cattle now are holding them on the farm for grazing this summer. The feeding cattle market this fall depends entirely upon crop conditions. Present indications point to an abundant feed crop, and if this comes true there will probably be a scramble for feeding cattle this fall."

"The country is on the road to hell," said Judge Williams of McAlister, Okla., as he sentenced a boy on a liquor charge. Right, judge. The road to hell is a downward path, and lots of the boys and girls have roller skates.

"Entered as second-class matter, April 27, 1932, at the post office at Thief River Falls Minnesota, under Act of March 3, 1897."

Human beings are the most interesting objects on earth, and to know themselves and get along with one another is their most important business. That business drags because they do not know...... what they could do if they stopped quarrelling among themselves and used their brains to solve their common problems.
—Prof. George A. Dorsey.

WE ARE VOTING "NO"

The Forum has long recognized the need for additional equipment for the power plant. We printed charts and graphs two years ago to substantiate the arguments which we at that time advanced for the purchase of a Diesel unit. In this connection it is amusing to note that our esteemed contemporary finds room on its front page for similar charts at this late hour. We are inclined to wonder whether they just awoke to the need of additional equipment or have other circumstances been injected into the situation which may have changed their mind, since they now advocate the purchase.

Whatever the reason for the change of heart on their part may be, we are glad to know that the main part of the argument is at last disposed of. We are all agreed that another diesel unit is needed.

The thing to decide now should be: how are we going about to secure this additional equipment? And: what shall that additional equipment consist of?

Two years ago we favored the proposal advanced by the city council because the size of the unit was definitely decided upon before any action was taken; second because there was no bond issue; third, because 30 per cent of the cost was defrayed by a government grant, and fourth, because the debt was to be paid off in five years from the earnings of the plant.

At this time the council in a special election propounds the following question:

> "Shall the City of Thief River Falls issue its negotiable coupon Funding Bonds in the aggregate principal sum of not to exceed Sixty Thousand Dollars maturing serially three to twelve years from their date, and bearing interest at a rate of not to exceed four and one-half (4½) per cent per annum, for the purpose of providing funds for the improving of the Municipal Light and Power Plant of said city."

We respectfully point out that the council asks power of attorney to put the city into a debt of $60,000 to be expended any way they may see fit, or feel is for the purpose of "improving the light and power plant." The question does not state whether this improvement is to be another batch of cement "white way" posts, defraying the cost of securing "one hundred per cent efficiency," or just for another Viebahn. Neither does the question make the bond issue and proposed purchase dependent upon a grant to be secured from the federal government.

We also wish to point out that the citizens of Thief River Falls quite definitely turned down in the city election of eighteen months ago, the proposition of purchasing a 1000 H.P. unit diesel at a cost of $53,000 of which $15,000 would be paid by the federal government thru a grant and the remaining $38,000 would be paid in five years as follows: $5,000 the first year; $3,000 the second year; and $10,000 each of the next three years. And at an interest rate of 5 per cent. All to be paid from the earnings of the plant. There was no lien upon the property owners of the city in the form of bonds.

In contrast to this the present council proposes to place upon the city a debt of $60,000 drawing interest at the rate of 4½ per cent over a period of fifteen years, and this debt to be a general obligation on every stick of property in the city.

In view of these things we feel that the city of Thief River Falls will be better served if they vote "nay" on this bond proposal and let the question be settled in the regular city election this fall if the present council can not see its way clear to negotiate a grant and a contract, at least somewhat in line with that which they as members of the group that secured the injunction, knocked out eighteen months ago. The unusual rainfall this spring has placed us in far better condition to face the delay at this time than we were before. It seems reasonable for us to agree with E. L. Tungseth in anticipation of some wet years.

IT DEPENDS UPON THE POINT OF VIEW

While we have been inclined to think that the late lamented session of the legislature was a decided flop so far as beneficial legislation is concerned we find that all people do not agree with us in this matter. Thus we have received a "news release" from the Minnesota Association of Commercial Organizations which commends the present legislature as being about the best we have ever had. To quote from their communication:

"Few legislatures have worked so hard and few have so many accomplishments to their credit. Not only did the legislators pass many measures that will rebound to the benefit of the state as a whole, but they kept their feet on the ground and prevented passage of a large number of undesirable bills."

So there you have it. The above represents the views of Big Business in Minnesota as reflected in their report sent out to all the chambers of commerce and commercial clubs of the state. If you class yourself with Big Business you have a right to feel just as they do that it was an "outstanding session."

On the other hand, if you class yourself with the farmers who must accept what they can get and pay what they are asked; if you are a workingman who must pay what they ask and take what they are willing to pay; if you are a businessman who must pay what you are asked and sell for what you can get, competition considered, you have a right to feel just as we do, that the past session of the legislature was the biggest flop in the history of the state. It all depends upon your point of view and the camp you belong in.

P. S.—Probably you wonder what they mean by the "undesirable bills" that were prevented from passage. Well, their "news release" doesn't state, but we will venture the opinion that among them can be listed the Friberg-Dixon Rural Credit Bill, the Old Age Pension (which was made inoperative), the Bennett Social Insurance Bill, the Governor's tax proposals, the Stockwell Power Bill and all other proposals which would have reacted to the benefit of the people in general.

Second P. S.—Their "news release" deplores the fact that the Omnibus Bill didn't become a law.

WHEN INDUSTRY STRIKES
(Union Advocate)

It is a peculiar fact that whenever Labor strikes every newspaper in the land heralds the fact with scare headlines; but when industry goes on strike—there is not a line of publicity.

Last September when the United Textile Workers went on strike for a decent wage the newspapers sent their crack reporters into the Southern states and the New England area to give day by day accounts of the struggle. Then the government ment stepped in,—and ordered the big mill owners to settle. The textile workers had struck against the millowners.

Now the mill owners are striking against the government. They are closing down their plants, and refusing to pay the federal processing tax. One large industrialist has volunteered to go to jail rather than pay the tax to the government. But not a line in the newspapers about the strike against the government.

Some day the average man outside of the trade union movement is going to realize that the newspapers are criminally biased against the laboring man; that they do not sympathize with his ambitions to have a respectable job at a respectable wage; that they are always opposed to any rank-and-file movement for social betterment, and that they are owned, body and soul, by the very interests which have hammered down the American standard of living to a level as low as the lowest in southern Europe. When the average man realizes that trade unionism has been making a fight all these years for every man and woman who must work for their daily bread—then he will align himself with his real friends instead of his enemies.

For after all is said and done—there is as much opposition to trade unionism from the working class as there is from those who coin profits out of the sweat and heartaches of the masses. Think it over!

PENSION NEGLECT
(St. Paul Daily News)

Atty. Gen. Peterson's formal opinion that the old age pension act passed by the last legislature is invalid because of an error in engrossing the bill for the governor's signature again calls attention to a major legislative failure.

Mr. Peterson finds some cold comfort in the fact that the bill did go by error because, he claims, it was woefully insufficient. He suggests that the constituents demand now that their representatives and senators draft and pass a more generous measure.

This is, of course Mr. Peterson's personal opinion. The bill which was lost by this mistake seemeded on the whole to be vastly superior to any legislation which has been seriously considered heretofore. What is more, it was almost as generous a start as could be expected in these abnormal times. Had everybody been on the job a pension of $30 a month would have been available before long to the aged and that is a lot more than they are getting under the present niggardly system.

It is unfortunate that old-age pensions and unemployment insurance only become matters of wide public interest in hard times when it is most difficult to find the means to put them into effect. If we had been prudent in the days of our prosperity, such systems could far more easily have been established and in working order to cushion the subsequent depression. But, of course, when everybody was comparatively prosperous no thought was given for the rainy day.

If Gov. Olson does summon the legislature in special session for whatever official reason, one of its first tasks should be to enact an old-age pension bill—and see to it this time that no one tampers with it. The time is overdue to make a start toward some provision for the aged. At present we treat our dogs and even our machines better because most soundly managed concerns set up depreciation and obsolescense funds for replacement of worn-out machinery. Pensions are nothing more than community obsolescense funds set up for those worn out in industrial service.

WHAT KIND OF TIMES AHEAD?
(The Co-operative Builder)

The increase in industrial activity during the last two years has not been enough to scratch the surface of our unemployment problem and millions of those on relief must expect to remain on relief rolls for several years." That is the considered judgment of the American Federation of Labor in its recent analysis of conditions. The Federation estimated at the same time the number of jobless at 11,500,000 and relief rolls at 22,000,000. Dispelling any unfounded optimism for the future, the forecast bluntly stated that while prospects are good for a healthy pickup in "business" next fall, there are yet no indications of a rise large enough to reduce unemployment. Employers are calculating that whatever increased production there will be, it's going to be done by MACHINES, very little by additional workers on the payrolls.

The situation is sufficiently sobering, after more than five years of distress, to make a lot more people think straight. It also promises ultimately to make several million workers and farmers willing to cut out certain luxuries which they never could afford, meaning petty schemes and second-hand substitutes for real action. A lot of people are not going to take the prospect of endless hard times amidst possibilities for plenty without real effort to do something about it. You don't have to be the son of a prophet to guess that, and that is why the Co-operative Builder can speak so confidently of the future of the consumers' movement in America. Consumers' co-operation means real action against just those things that create economic distress and insecurity, and American consumers also are certainly going to make good use of it in due time.

The Province of Alberta is suffering from floods. Farmers in the Athabaska Valley have been driven to higher ground. The seven wet years appear to be beginning.

Just 160 years ago we were afraid the British were coming across. And now we wish they would come across—with the $4,000,000,000 they owe us.—Sioux City Tribune.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

Some highlights on the drinking driver: Michigan legislature considers bill imposing penalty up to one year in prison or fine up to $500 or both for drunken driving; a study in one city shows that liquor played a part in 60 per cent of auto fatalities; Detroit figures show increase of 90 per cent of traffic accidents involving drinking motorists; National Safety Council states that the problem of drinking drivers is getting out of hand.

In the 18 months that the United States participated in the World War our army lost 37,568 men in battle. During the 18 months ending December 31, 1934 motor fatalities in the United States totalled 50,000! During the 18 months in the war our wounded totalled 182,674, or just over 10,000 per month. During the 1[illegible] [illegible] ending December 31, 193[illegible] our non-fatal auto injuries totalled 1,750,000, or over 97,000 per month. As a human butcher war seems to be a piker.

ONE GETS 2 CENTS, ANOTHER $110 AN HR.

(Translated from "Nordisk Tidende Magasin" by R. M. Aalbu.)

The People's Federation interests itself—as well known—much in statistical material dealing with the activities of the human race all over the world. These statistics, as well as other data which are derived from various sources, makes it possible to give a not uninteresting description of what happens thruout the world every 60 minutes.

Every hour of the day there are 5440 children born and 4,639 persons die. This gives an "over-run" of 810, thus assuring the perpetuation of the races and a steady increase in population.

Marriage Institution Not In Danger

1200 couples are married every hour, while only 85 disappointing unions are severed, and here, too, there is an "overrun" of 1115, a fact which upsets the pessimistic prophecy that the Marriage Union is facing extinction. Nevertheless, experts insist that 85 divorces per hour absolutely indicates a crisis in the marriage relationships. The ideal condition would of course be an absence of divorces. However, it can not be denied that the percentage of separations is rising.

198,500 Crimes Per Hour

Fifteen murders horrify the people the world over every hour, and alas, crime of this kind, too, is on the increase.

On the average there are about 198,500 crimes committed every hour, and only in 177,000 cases are the criminals brought to justice. In the other 21,500 instances the culprits avoid the arms of the law. Judicial experts are of the opinion that this percentage is far too high and that every possible effort should be made to bring more of the criminals before the bars of justice.

NO Shortage of Production

There is produced 99,600 tons of sugar each hour, but of this enormous quantity humanity consumes only 98,000 tons. From this it would be indicated how large the overproduction is in this field. Nevertheless, there are thousands of individuals all over the world who are unable to secure their daily ration of sugar. An undeniable proof of our faulty distribution.

176 tons of tobacco is processed each hour thruout the world, including cigarettes, cigars, and pipe tobaccos, to a value of over $1,625,000.

What Humanity Consumes Each Hour

It is interesting to consider what the human race consumes each hour. Thus we find that we imbibe 2,2000,000 quarts of wine, 780,000 quarts of beer and 50,000,00 cups of coffee. Also in the matter of foodstuffs the figures are formidable. 50,000,000 pounds of potatoes, 8,500,000 pounds of meat, 70,000,000 pounds of bread and 2,500,000 eggs are consumed each hour by the inhabitants of the earth.

The Money That is Made

After these figures it is also interesting to look into the human race's ability for making money.

The average hourly income ranges from two cents for the Chinese coolie to 110 dollars for the head of the American Electric power trust. There are, however, other large incomes to note. Thus Jose Padilla, the famous Spanish composer, who composed the song "Valencia," has earned as high as $70,000 in a quarter of an hour.

Each hour of the day there are 114,000 telegrams sent, and it is interesting to note that some over half of these are business telegrams, while the rest are of private character. This large number of telegrams is an illuminating proof of the tempo of the times. There is demanded always more haste. All efforts are made to increase the speed.

1,141,600,000 letters, postcards and packages are expedited each hour by the postal service thruout the world, and the total of postage paid aggregates over $25,000,000.

34,000,000 Miles of Film

The international film industry, whose phenomenal growth is without a parallel, uses every hour of the day 34,000,000 miles of film.

60,000,000 copies of the world's different daily papers are printed every hour.

To conclude we might mention yet a few figures: the earth travels aproximately 68,400 miles an hour and there are on the average four tornadoes and one earthquake each hour.

We must, however, add that these figures are not infallible. Everything in the world undergoes a change and figures are no exception to the rule, but these which have been given can be considered as interesting pointers.

Views and Reviews

Ben C. Hagglund

The Daily, Long May It Rave!

The daily newspaper is a great institution; one of its not inconsiderable functions is to provide weary editors and columnists with something to write about. By it we can learn, for instance, of the situation in the Phillipines, in Germany, in China, in Abyssinia, and in Timbuctoo; we learn that Barbara Hutton is divorced and re-married; we find that a few more unemployed have solved the problem by shooting or hanging themselves; we obtain the edifying information that the value of the quintuplets has sextupled;—and so on and so forth. Then, after we find out everything we want to know, we can turn to the editorial pages and find out how we should think about various matters. For instance, there is Arthur Brisbane, who puts up a great show about being liberal minded, and this and that. Recently he speculated on the advantages of a fascist dictatorship in America. His reasoning was as follows: capitalism being what it is, the workers have never had the chance to exercise their own initiative. In these times, when they have been dependent on relief, they have had even less of a chance, or desire, to think and act for themselves. Ergo, we must put up someone to do it for them.—I see where the Filipinos get independence, of a sort. Years ago, when the subject was first broached, an American congressman expressed the opinion that the Philippines should not have freedom until they have learned how to govern themselves. Which is to say, that a man must not go into the water until he learns to swim.—So, as I said, one can learn a great many things from that great American institution, the daily newspaper. Long may it rave!

Dust and the Dry Science

Economists, and those pretending to be economists, have always been chided with the universal belief that the science, besides being dark, is incurably dry. There are various points of view. Economics, as we studied it in school, is admittedly dry: our capitalist economists did not have the "human touch." But, since we met up with Marx, Engels, Lenin, and others, this objection was obviated.

By means of the new economics, for example, we can explain what the school-book economists shy away from—the concrete case of the drouth and the dust storms. As we know, these dust storms depend largely upon natural causes—they have as their origin, large areas of land whereon very little vegetation grows, and the condition of prolonged drouth. But there is an economic factor also, which is almost never mentioned. In years gone by, there were drouths as bad as the present one, but dust storms never assumed major proportions. The reason was: vegetation of some kind prevented the dirt from working loose and blowing away.

As the west was settled, every inch of tillable land was put under cultivation. As long as crops were grown on this land, dust storms were kept down. But along came the depression. Grain prices dropped; big farmers began voluntarily to reduce their acreage, leaving millions of acres of land uncultivated, sometimes in a totally fallow state, to keep the weeds down. To add to this, Secretary Henry Wallase began taking more millions of acres out of cultivation, with his crop reduction program. Good farming has always predicated that such land be kept free from weeds—from any vegetation. Consequently, the stage was all set for a little drouth to start a big duststorm; and you know the rest.

The radical solution of this problem would have started years ago, when far-sighted individuals first saw the danger of taking land out of production, especially in the face of a drouth. National planning of production (instead of non-production) would, however, necessitate a complete change of system. Under the present set-up, national planning is well-nigh impossible. The present system has always gained "progress" by destroying natural resources; it is incredible that it should begin at this late stage to preserve them.

So it would seem that economics and dust are more closely related than one would imagine at first—barring the figure of speech denoting economics as a "dry" science.

—o—

The Passing of a Scholar

One of the tragic by-products of dust storms is dust pneumonia, which has taken hundreds of lives. Among the recent victims of this new disease is Judge James M. Rea, of Tonganoxie, Kansas, who died April 10, 1935. Rea was national president of the Equitist League, and well-known as a student and thinker of a high order.

Equitism, as you know, proposed a dollar to be based on an hour of human work, and free natural resources. Almost all economic doctrines have arrived at this conclusion, but none expressed the need as clearly as did the Equitist philosophy.

The science of putting Equitism into practice is so far incomplete. The political method was abandoned long ago, the revolutionary method was denounced; Mahatma Ghandi's method of non-resistance and non-cooperation was adopted. In a western world, where Power is the creed, Ghandi's method seems strange and ineffectual,—which is not to say that it will not succeed.

Despite my belief in the revolutionary method, I have always had a deep respect for Equitists, because they well-nigh solved the problem. Judge James M. Rea spent a long life helping to spread the Equitist doctrine, and from his activities, I imagine he gained a deep satisfaction. Economics was not a dusty thing to him, but a living reality.

FARMER-LABOR PRESS SERVICE
By
H. G. Teigan

Has Minnesota a state-wide Old Age Pension law or has it not? That is the question. The pension bill was among the measures that had to wait until the last minute for enactment by both senate and house. A controversy had arisen over certain provisions of the bill; the reactionary leaders of the senate insisting that the law be made as inoperative as possible and to provide as low pensions as possible.

Thus, a conference comimttee representing both houses shaped up the measure for final passage. The house members of the conference committee were Barker, Hastings and Wangensteen. The senate members were Novak, Rockne and Adams. Wangensteen dissented from the conference report contending "that the minimum requirement by the state for an old-age pension for an 18 month period will be $3,000,000 on the most conservative figures."

Rockne's Amendments

As the bill passed the house it was made far more liberal than any previous scheme of its kind. The senate, due in large measure to the efforts of Senator Rockne, proceeded to limit the measure in its beneficial effects. Rockne offered two amendments, one affecting Section 2, providing that the recipient of the pension should have the same based in part upon "subsistence or service from legally responsible relatives or net income available to such persons from his own resources;" and that only a person who "has no child or other responsible person under the law of this state liable for his support and able to support him," might receive aid under the law.

These two sections were adopted by the senate by a vote of 31 to 30. They were, however, later stricken out by the conference committee. The report of same will be found on page 96 of the senate journal for Wednesday, April 24.

Yet, when the bill was "enrolled" the two Rockne sections had again been reinserted in the measure notwithstanding the provision in the conference report that they both be stricken out. In other words, the bill was passed by both house and senate following the report of the conference committee did not contain the two Rockne amendments.

It is upon the insertion of these two amendments following the bill's pasage in the legislature and which are contained in the enrolled bill signed by the Governor that the constitutionality of the act is being called into question.

Another Bill Tampered With

But it happens that this is not the first instance that a bill has been emasculated after its passage by both house and senate. The rural credit act of two years ago creating a conservator for the department had one section eliminated from the measure after its passage. The section referred to read as follows: "Section 22. The salaries provided in the foregoing act shall not be subject to any reduction on account of any law that may heretofore have been passed reducing salaries."

The conference committee representing the two houses of the legislature reported the bill back with certain changes and among those was the addition of Section 22 referred to above. This section was, of course, somewhat objectionable to the reactionary element in the legislature, the members of which were constantly harping upon economy and demanding wage reductions.

Rockne on Both Committees

Senator Rockne was a member of the conference committee and the writer on that account wrote him on June 28, 1933, calling his attention to the discrepancy between the enrolled bill on file in the secretary of state's office and the bill which the legislature had passed. Mr. Rockne replied to the letter, briefly stating that he had not had time to examine the journal of the senate to see just what changes had been made in the measure.

Now the writer is not intimating that Mr. Rockne was wilfully guilty of emasculating either the old-age pension bill enacted by the 1935 legislature or the rural credit bill passed two years ago. Yet it is a curious fact that Rockne was a member of both conference committees.

The question now arises, "is the old-age pension act unconstitutional on account of the enrolled bill signed by the governor containing two sections not enacted by the legislature? And, if so, what about the rural credit act which appears to be minus one entire section which had been passed by the legislature. Surely there is less reason to believe that the insertion of two provisions in the old age pensoin act which had not been adopted by the legislature is more likely to be held constitutional than a measure which appears upon the statute books with one entire section of the measure missing.

The rural credit act originated in the senate. Dave Shandorf was enrolling clerk. While the old age pension act originated in the house and the enrolling clerk was Al. Weidemann. Did the enrolling clerks in both instances err on their own account or did they act upon the suggestion of someone else who was interested in seeing the measures mutilated as they now appear in the session laws?

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

"But there was no room in the inn." Luke 2:7.

No room for the babe Jesus, 2,000 years ago. No room today for the man, Jesus.

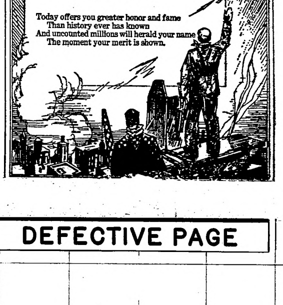
Jesus stands for the abolition of war; for the Christianizing of industry and business; for the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man, for the right of each individual to have a chance at equal opportunity, and for the unity of all his professed followers. But what professing Christian nation is taking these teachings seriously?

In the United States after eight years of trial we have not secured sufficient States to pass a federal child labor law though we defeated the Eighteenth amendment within a few months and voted mililons for the promotion of militarism.

What Churh is taking seriously the words of Jesus relative to the unity of professing Christians?

Are we not in the midst of a mess of church divisions?

Is it not the truth that we make room in our civilization for preaching Jesus but give no room for the living Jesus?



ACHIEVEMENT by Lawrence Hawthorne

Who says that the day of achievement is gone?
'Twas never more certainly here!
The summons to Youth: "Carry on! Carry on!"
Was never so urgent and clear.

Today calls for men self-reliant and true,
Courageous, clear-visioned and free—
Who fashion a program, and carry it through Whatever its problems may be.

Today offers you greater honor and fame
Than history ever has known
And uncounted millions will herald your name
The moment your merit is shown.

STATE BOASTS ORANGE TREE THAT PRODUCES

Worthington.—M. P. Thornton's orange tree is again bearing fruit. The tree—it's really more of a plant as it's dwarfed and stands less than a foot high—grows in a pot and is kept in the office of Walter Pfeil in the court house. One orange is beginning to ripen and another is about an inch and a quarter in diameter. Two others are beginning to form. Last year Mr. Thornton ate an orange from the tree and reported that while it undoubtedly was an orange, it had little flavor. The tree is several years old and despite its lack of size manages to produce fruit each year.

THE TROUT OPENING BRINGS BIG FISH

Fergus Falls.—The opening of the fishing season brought joy to thousands, but Henry Leidal, Fergus Falls, had reason to be happier than the other 999 men when he landed a German Brown trout weighing six pounds and fourteen ounces exactly. The trout, landed in Straight river near Park Rapids, was the biggest of its kind ever landed in that section. For 35 minutes the game fish fought Leidal's line, after which Harvey Bertelson asisted him in taking it from the water. A fly and spinner was used as a lure. At Lewiston Charles Jackson landed a "King of the Whitewater" on the opening day without the use of a landing net. The trout weighed four pounds and 10 ounces, measured 23½ inches, and took half an hour to land. A dry dock for the fish was dug with the fisherman's toe while he played him, and when the fish tired he was nosed into the sand pocket.

STATE GOES AFTER POULTRY RECORDS

St. Peter.— Three eggs from the same turkey in 24 hours, another biddy hen which laid two eggs in one day, and a hen which laid a freak egg with a shell of two colors is the state's record in poultry production for the week. In St. Peter a Barred Rock presented her owner, August H. Topley, with an egg tinted on the large end a deep brown color, while the other half was nearly dead white. The turkey with a potential 700 eggs-a-year capacity hails from the Harris Ellis farm in West Langola, in Benton county. One egg was brought in Sunday evening, another at 11 o'clock Monday morning, and at one o'clock that afternoon the turkey hen was on again. When the hen got off the nest about two o'clock there was a third egg. There was no doubt about the feat, since there is only one turkey hen in that neighborhood, and "house chickens" don't lay turkey eggs." A one year old pure bred hen, the property of the Tracy Hatchery, also set a precedent in the way of productivity by hatching two large eggs on the same day.

MONKEYS WATCH WASHERS THEN SCOUR OWN CAGE

Duluth.—As workers whose diligence deserves reward, Tom and Jerry, chimpanzees at the Duluth zoo have few peers. For these two members of the monkey tribe these days are busily engaged in scouring their cage, tirelessly and without other remuneration than their daily fare. It all came about when a group of workmen were assigned to scrub the bars and walls of an adjoining cage. The two chimps observed the technique of the crew, set up a howl until they were supplied with rags and water and forthwith scaled the bars and scoured with an energy not exhibited in the other cage. Of the two, Jerry would rate the most proficient. She scrubs without respite while her male companion exhibits a tendency to loaf occasionally.

FEATURE STORY STARTS COMMERCIAL BUSINESS

Russell.— Minnesota papers go into all parts of the Union and are read thoroughly and it looks like George Banks, Russell, owes the writer of the Minnesota Briefs a few good cigars. Three weeks ago these columns carried a story telling of an electrically wired fence used by Banks on his farm to keep animals penned. The wires were charged with an ordinary storage battery, and after a few wild gyrations, the pigs and cows decided that their best bet was to remain inside the wire fencing. As a result of this story being published in some 200 newspapers in the state, Banks has had letters from as far distant as New Jersey, California, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Washington, not to speak of nearly every corner of Minnesota. Farmers everywhere seemed to be interested in the idea, and Banks has applied for a patent and intends to manufacture the sets for sale on a commercial basis. Another business started from "just an idea."

ENGINE FROM 1926 CAR MAKES TRACTOR A FREAK

Austin.—A tractor with a "bum" engine isn't much good, but Albert Spinner, farmer near Austin, purchased a 4-cylinder engine from a 1926 car for $6 and with a little tinkering he has a tractor that will pull a five-horse load half a day at five miles an hour without heating. The tractor is equipped with lights, self-starter, speedometer, ammeter, and fan that blows toward the radiator instead of the engine, causing the radiator to remain cool and also drawing crankcase smoke away from the driver. It took a little hard labor and quite a bit of mechanical skill, but Spinler now has a freak that is drawing quite a bit of attention from nearby farmers.

THE TORTOISE BEAT THE HARE BUT NOT THE AUTO

Lindstrom.—In Aesop's fables the proverbial tortoise had it all over the hare in a race to test the respective speed of the two, but the tablesare reversed when the tortoise backs itself against the automobile of 1935. Efforts to race with onrushing cars has resulted in a tragic ending for Mr. ortoise, and at Russell Beach between Chisago City and Lindstrom scores of turtles are lined up with their shells strewn across the pavement. Occasionally a mercifull driver will miss Mr. Turtle as he pulls his snout in his shell to find what he thinks is safety from crushing tires, but more often the man behind the wheel is too busy to bother about missing him. Hundreds of turtles which start migrating about this time of the year are killed annually in this fashion. At Melrose last week a truck killed a 44-pound male beaver, the accident being reported to the fish and game department.

Poisoned Bran Will Make Cutworms Behave

If any gardener ever sets his troubles to music and writes a song entitled, "Old Faithful," he is sure to pick Mr. Cutworm for his subject. Of all garden pests, the cutworm is one that is most certain to appear. year after year, and his habit of cutting off young plants makes him one of the most destructive.

Fall plowing and cleaning up rubbish to destroy over-winter shelter help in preventing cutworms. Wrapping stiff paper around the stems of young plants when setting them out avoids damage. Cutworms may readily be killed by applying a bait of poisoned bran. These practices are more fully explained, and recipes for poison bait given, in a new University Farm Booklet, Circular 48, "Cutworms and Army Worms," by William C. Cook of the Division of Entomology.

One reading this circular learns that the army worm is only a form of cutworm, about a dozen species being described. Illustrations show the life history of cutworms, including moth, eggs, larvae and pupae. Copies of Circular 48 are free from county agents or the Bulletin Office, University Farm, St. Paul.

PRES. ROOSEVELT SMILE HIDES BITTER TRUTHS

By Paul Porter

He smiles when he says it.

Otherwise there is precious little difference between the misleading way President Roosevelt discusses figures about unemployment, and the juggling of facts by his nigh-forgotten predecessor, Herbert Hoover.

Faced with the same stubborn crisis that plagued and licked Hoover, the President has resorted to Hoover's unworthy trick of citing selected figures, which standing alone, give a false picture of the economic situation.

In his most recent "fireside chat" the President professed to find proof of recovery in the fact that "for the first time in five years the relief rolls have decreased instead of increased during the winter months."

This statement is true—in the very little that it says. But in what it omits, it gives a completely distorted picture. Let us look at the FERA figures for the number on relief for the winter months of 1935, and the same months of 1934.

January, 1935, 20,670,042.
February, 1935, 20,523,042.
March, 1935, 20,440,000.

The President was right: there was a decrease—of a mere 230,042! But not a word from him to indicate that the total was 6,900,648 more than in March, 1934! The figures for the previous years were:

January, 1934, 11,102,452.
February, 1934, 11,621,637.
March, 1934 13,539,352.

If the unemployed obtain self-supporting work at the same rate in which the President finds so much hope, we will be back to the March 1934, relief figure by March, 1940!

Is that what the President means by recovery?

Among the things the President didn't say were:

That the relief received by the twenty million was so inadequate that on any one day one and a half million children are hungry—are being maimed for life by undernourishment.

That his own work relief program which he forced on an unwilling Senate, will through its $50 a month wage, prove to be the greatest assault ever made on the trade union wage scales.

That because or rising prices REAL income has already dropped 2 per cent in the past year.

That 11,500,000 are still denied jobs.

These facts the President hid. The facts he cited, upon examination, prove far less than he claimed.

Roosevelt has relied upon the respect milions have for his high office to make unsupported, misleading statements that are a disgraceful deception. Once the workers realize how they have been fooled, they will sweep him into the same discard where they sent Hoover.

STATE SUMMER SITES ON BEAUTIFUL LAKES

Lakeshore lots situated on some of Minnesota's most beautiful lakes, are available for lease, Grover Conzet, director of the Division of Forestry, stated. Included in the list of outstanding lakes where summer home sites are still available are Vermillion, Kabetogama, Birch, Bear Island, West Bearskin, Sand Point, North, Loon, Bear, Owens and Winnibigoshish.

A rental fee of $10 per year is charged on lots which provide at least 75 feet of shoreline and run back 150 to 300 feet.

Mr. Conzet said that "they are for the most part heavily wooded."

MINNESOTA CONTROLS PLANTING OF CURRANTS AND GOOSEBERRIES

Minnesota has qualified as a "control-area' 'in which the planting of currants and gooseberries is regulated by the Division of Forestry as a means of controlling blister rust of white pines. This disease spreads to pines only after developing on currants or gooseberries.

A control area permit must be secured from the state of destination for shipments of currant and gooseberry plants into those states which have legally established areas in which the growing of currant and gooseberry plants is prohibited. Connecticut, Idaho, Massachusetts, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, Rhode Island, and Vermont are states exercising control in this way.

The United States Flag Asociation states that Al Capone's income from brothels, bootleggers, and other crime totalled 150 million dollars yearly, of which he paid 120 millions to his gangsters and government officials and politicians for protection, leaving him 30 million dollars a year. That amounts to only two-and-a-half mililon per month!

MINNESOTA LEAGUE OF MUNICIPALITIES TO MEET AT MANKATO

Mankato, Minn., (Special).—Mankato will be the host to the twenty-second annual convention of the League of Minnesota Municipalities on June 5, 6 and 7. An attendance of over 600 public officials is expected at the convention.

Mayor Frank Mohowald of Mankato extends a personal invitation to every municipal official and to every interested person to attend the convention and to enjoy the city of Mankato.

Elaborate plans are being made by the many committees which have been appointed by the Chamber of Commerce under the direction of Mr. E. V. Nyquist, secretary, to assist in planning the three day stay of visiting officials. The meetings will be held in the Eagles Hall. A banquet, dance and many other entertainment features are being planned.

Preliminary plans for the program include discussions on: the proposed state civil service system, the state and municipal relations, legislative councils, conflicting jurisdictions in taxation, a sound municipal indebtedness program, expenditure control, the 1935 public works relief program and other important problems.

Two systems of meeting will be used at the convention. Prominent speakers will have a place on the formal speaking program while every person present will be invited to explain his views on subjects brought up for round table discussion.

The purpose of the convention is to bring together municipal officials so that they can become acquainted with each other and with the common problems of local govermental officials to assist them in better governing their own municipalities.

PLUMMER

SENIOR CLASS PLAY ON THURSDAY, MAY 23rd

The Senior Clas sof Plummer high school will present "The Path Across the Hills" Thursday, May 23rd, to permit the seniors to take part in the College Guest day at Bemidji on Friday. The cast has been practicing diligently under the direction of Mr. McCrady and promises to produce the best dramatic performance of the year.

The Story of "The Path Across the Hills" centers around Grandpa Crawford, who has shielded his grandchildren from the folly and guilt of his son-in-law's crime by taking the blame himself. The story opens with Grandpa and his two grandchildren, Ruth and Walter, very comfortable and happy in their own home. Tragedy enters when Robert Post attempts to wreak vengeance on Grandpa for the crime committed against his father. This sets the stage for a touching and dramatic play that proves again that love is stronger than hate.

The part of Grandpa Crawford is played by Joe Mack. Irene Saum and Joe Fallon take the parts of Ruth and Walter. Leland LaVoi acts the part of Robert Post; Mrs. Davis, a sweet neighborly grandmother, is portrayed by Dorothy Schroeder. Lutie, the school girl sweetheart of Walter, is acted by Ethel Hoole.

Flo Gray and Dr. Jimmy Reed add a domestic tragedy that contrasts with the main plot. Lucille Hemly and Arne Karlstad take these roles. Juanita Ripple and Ray Houtari provide the comedy relief as two negro servants, Zuzu and Salamander John Henry Jones.

A matinee performance will be given Thursday afternoon for the school children and the evening performance will begin at 8:15. The chairs have arrived for the hall so a large crowd can be seated comfortably.

Plummer High School Commencement will be held on Friday May 31st at the village hall. Dr. Breitwieser, Dean of the College of Education of the University of North Dakota, will deliver the commencement address. Fallon, president of the board of education, will present the diplomas to the high school students.

There will be several vocal numbers sung by various members of the Senior class.

Diplomas will be presented to sixteen seniors and eleven eighth grade graduates.

Seats will be reserved for the parents of the graduates.

The Junior-Senior Banquet and Prom will be held May 30th. The banquet will be served in the dining room at the school house and the Prom will be held at the village hall immediately after the banquet. A 5-piece orchestra has been procured for the Prom and elaborate plans have been made to insure success to this event. Alumni, faculty members, and Seniors have ben invited to this social event.

On Friday, May 24, the Seniors have planned to take a trip to Bemidji as that is Guest Day at the Bemidji State Teachers College. The Seniors of last year reported a very enjoyable time on their trip to Bemidji.

On Friday morning, May 31st, the high school and eighth grade graduates will present a short program to the upper grades and high school students. The eighth grade graduates will formally confer all their privileges on the seventh graders, read a history of their class, and say goodbye to their grade school days.

The Seniors will likewise grant their place in the sun to the Junior class and formally bid goodbye to their high school days. The High School faculty members will each deliver a short address to the students. These Class Day exercises will mark the end of the school year 1934-35.

MIDDLE RIVER TO HAVE CO-OPERATIVE OILS

Plans have been carried out to build a Farmer's Co-operative Oil station in the Middle River vicinity. Surrounding farmers have invested in shares for that project. The date of building construction has not been determined.

Finger-Smashing Epidemic

Spring fencing has been unusually destructive this year as at least three workers in the Middle River vicinity have suffered crushed fingers by a descending post maul. Two of the unfortunate victims required amputations, one a thumb, the other a finger. A warning to the fencer: It is foolhardy to recline your digits on the top of a fence post while the other guy is swinging a maul.

Juniors and Seniors of the Middle River high school will spend their spring outing at Maple Lake during the week end.

Eat Your Spinach

AND like it. For you will like spinach if it is thoroughly cleaned, properly cooked and nicely seasoned. If the fact that it takes hours of precious time to clean the bushels of spinach you would like to serve this summer, keeps you from giving your family their quota of this healthful vegetable, you will be interested in a first-hand story of what happens to spinach from the garden to the cannery.

Have you ever wondered how canned spinach could possibly be as clean as that which you prepare—when you examine each and every leaf? Let's see.

To Insure Freshness

Let's follow the spinach truck trail, as it winds from gardens within a radius of thirty to forty miles of the cannery right into the yard of the cannery. The trucks travel along at pretty fair speed because the spinach has just been cut and tossed into bushel crates, and the canneries insist that no time be lost in getting the products into the cans while it is still "garden-fresh." They know, only too well, the difference between spinach one eats on the farm, and spinach that lies in baskets for city consumption.

The machinery of the canneries is timed to meet this need of immediate handling of spinach. The manager of the factory tells us that in spite of this seemingly never-ending line of trucks, it is possible to take care of it as it comes in. Seven tons per hour is the rate of spinach canning!

This is very impressive, but because we are skeptics and hate to get sand in our spinach, let us see with our own eyes what happens to the spinach during this time. Each crate is dumped, immediately after it is received, into the cannery shed, on small tray-like tables with bottoms made of heavy wire mesh screen. Two women sit at each small table and carefully sort over the spinach by hand—just as you sort it out before washing. Each yellow or imperfect leaf, and each bit of grass or foreign matter is taken out. The spinach is then thrown on a belt conveyor which carries it to the washing "riddlers." These are wire cages of coarse mesh which toss the spinach about so thoroughly that any tiny leaves or particles which the sorters might have missed are thrown out. With that process the cleansing has only begun.

The spinach is then dumped into a deep trough of cold water which is constantly changing, and where the green leaves are constantly pushed up and down with the clean water running in and the soiled water running out at the bottom. Then the spinach is placed on another conveyor belt of wire screen which carries it out of the water and between two vigorous needle-point sprays, one spraying the spinach from the top and one from the bottom.

But just as you and I are never satisfied with several washings of our spinach, neither is the canner. Down into another trough of flowing water it goes, for another washing just like the first bath. After this bath, which is a cold one, it appears on the wire mesh again for inspection and imperfect leaves are once more sorted out. Then follows a hot bath and then it is put in cans.

Now It's Clean

There you have your clean spinach—and the most fastidious person must agree that it is cleaner than we can possibly get it by using our home methods. In case you are interested in the processes, other than cleansing—if you like your spinach tender and properly cooked as well as being clean—here is the rest of the story. Each filled and weighed can is passed on a belt conveyor into a "briner" where it is filled with a solution of slightly salted boiling water, and passed on through the "steam box." Then the "topping machine" puts on the tops of the can by rolling down the edges under pressure. The final cooking process consists of putting the cans into deep tanks where they are cooked under live steam for a little over an hour. They are then cooled and put into the packing room, ready to be shipped—to people who like clean spinach, properly cooked. Season it to suit yourself. The ways of serving it are legion.*

1000 Acres of Land Sold In Penn. Co. This Spring

A marked "return to the land" tendency in Minnesota is revealed in a tabulation of sales of state-owned trust fund lands this spring according to a report submitted by F. A. Wildes, director of the Division of Lands and Minerals.

Public sales of trust fund lands conducted this spring in 21 counties, mostly in the northern section of the state, resulted in the sale of 21,920 acres. Last year spring state land sales amounted to 7,900 acres while in 1933 the total was only 2,940 acres, Mr. Wildes reported. There may be a slight variation in the 1934 figures when final returns are received from county auditors, Mr. Wildes said.

Sales in the various counties were as follows: Aitkin, 600 acres; Becker, 80; Beltrami, 200; Carlton, 320; Cas, 640; Clearwater, 760; Hubbard, 200; Itasca, 1,360; Kittson, 880; Koochiching, 3,040; Mahnomen, 280; Marshall, 2,400; Norman 320; Ottertail, 280; Pennington, 1,000; Pine, 320, Polk, 1,920; Red Lake, 160; Roseau, 5,120; St. Louis, 1,400; Wilkin, 640.

LIFE'S LITTLE JESTS

JUST INDIFFERENT

A man was buying a horse from a farmer, but before he made any payment he asked the farmer to let him ride. Out in the pasture he got on the horse and the animal started across the field. He hadn't gone far when he bumped into a tree. Then a few yards farther he bumped into the side of the barn. The man dismounted.

"I don't want that horse. He's blind!" he said indignantly.

"No, sir," replied the farmer, "he ain't blind—he just doesn't care what he does."—Washington Post.

Correct Interpretation

First Star—I'm awfully sorry to see you here in the hospital, but I never knew that pistol was really loaded!

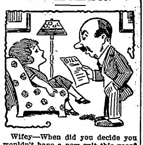
Second Star—Oh, that's all right. Accidents will happen. But what gets my goat was the way the director yelled, "You blithering idiot, don't you know you're shot!"

Frozen Grease Paint

Mr. Knosit—I am surprised to find you so hard up. I thought you had a contract for the whole season at $50 a night.

Herr Klavierland—I had, but they took me up to Alaska, where the nights are six months long.—Detroit News.

AMPLE REASON



Wifey—When did you decide you wouldn't have a new suit this year?

Hubby—When I saw this bill for your new spring outfit.

No Objection

Prospective Lodger—I like the room but the view of those factory chimneys is unpleasant.

Landlady—Oh, that is only because it is Sunday and they are not working—the rest of the week the smoke hides them.

Discreet Enthusiasm

"Do you enjoy music?"

"Of course, I do," answered Senator Sorghum.

"What kind?"

"Every kind. I see no possible reason for offending the musician vote."

CAPITOL NEWS REVIEW

By A. I. Harris

The Old Age Pension law passed by the last legislature is invalid, according to an opinion rendered last week by Harry H. Peterson, attorney general. The attorney general held that the bill presented and signed by the Governor was not the bill which was passed by the Legislature.

"We regret that the . . . rules renders the alleged law a nullity . . . ." Mr. Peterson said in his opinion. "We see no hope of escape from them. We think that the sooner the matter is brought to the attention of the proper authorities, the sooner the errors may be rectified and a new, and perhaps in many respects a better law may be passed to deal with the matter of Old Age Pensions.

"This is not our fault nor our responsibility. The responsibility rests on the Legislature and its agents. . . ."

The Old Age Pension law, although it fell short of the law proposed by the liberals in the House and the Senate, constitutes the only piece of major social legislation passed by the reactionary-controlled Legislature. Through an erorr, a Republican appointee inserted into the bill an amendment sponsored by Senator Rockne which would bar from the provisions of the law all elderly persons who have a relative with legal responsibility to support them. It is very strange indeed that this amendment, designed to remove from the bill most of its benefits should have been inserted into the copy which was sent to the Governor in all good faith signed. Governor in al lgood faith signed. Responsibility for the "error" has not been established.

One of the first utterances of Senator Rockne, reactionary leader, was a statement to the press as to how much money the taxpayers would save by virtue of the Old Age pension law being declared null and void as the result of the "error."

Unquestionably the nulity of the Old Age Pension bill will hasten the calling of a special session of the Legislature. The Governor has plainly indicated that such a session will be called to effect a tax revision program so that the heavy burden of taxes will be taken off the real estate, and it may now be called at an earlier date than contemplated.

Applications filed with Commissioner of Securities S. Paul Skahen for the organization of farmers' co-operative oil associations during the past few months, from all sections of the state, indicate that our people are rapidly becoming educated to the benefits to be derived from such associations. Patrons have the satisfaction of knowing that they not only save considerably on the goods purchased, but the community as a whole is benefitted and other businesses prosper. Licenses were recently granted for the sale of stock in co-operatives organized in the following communities: Underwood, Warroad, Branson, So. St. Paul, Perley, Winger, Climax, Gary, Bagley and Middle River, with inquiries coming in from many more cities and villages throughout the state.

While the Minnesota highway department is doing a considerable amount of advance planning of road construction projects in anticipation of additional federal funds, officials state that they cannot set up a definite program until more specific information is received from Washington. Early estimates of the amount which may be provided Minnesota for roads and grade crossing separations have already been somewhat reduced according to unofficial reports, but no definite statement on the matter has been forthcoming from federal authorities as yet. Whether the state takes full advantage of the federal aid offers will depend on the executive council, which was empowered by the Legislature to authorize a highway bond isue to meet necessary state expenses involved. Interest and principal payments on bonds already require nearly one-third of the total annual state revenues of the state highway department, but the Legislature felt it was better to authorize more bonds rather than restore motor vehicle license fees to their normal basis.

In a recent talk, Mr. E. V. Willard, commissioner of Conservation, said: "A major problem confronting the department of conservation relates to the restoration, propagation and protection of game and fish. The immensity of this problem is not perhaps fully appreciated by a large number of citizens. Man's encroachment on the natural domain of our game and fish has all but eliminated some of our so-called game species. To preserve upland game and make it available to the sportmen, requires the acquisition and intensive management of game refuges and game farms. Migratory waterfowl, at present facing a serious crisis, must be porvided with breeding, feeding and nesting grounds where they may find sanctuary. Statutory game refuges aggregating upwards of three million acres, eight public hunting grounds and game refuges distributed geographically over the state and purchased or in the process of acquisition from funds contributed by licenses purchased by sportsmen, are at present being managed for the protection and propagation of upland game and migratory waterfowl. . . ."

There is food for thought in the above remarks. Despite the tremendous amount of work that is being done, only a beginning has been made. It is far easier to destroy than to replace; and programs must be put into effect under which the amount created for several years will have to exceed the amount which is being destroyed.

—O—

A report issued by Elmer A. Benson, commisioner of banks, showing the condition of state banks, savings banks and trust companies as of April 18, 1935, discloses total deposits of $219,398,135 which represent an increase in deposits of $29,429,463 since the report of April 7, 1934. This is the largest increase in deposits for any quarter for a number of years.

The largest increase is in the commercial deposits, which increased $4,806,541, making a total of commercial deposits of $60,389,557. Demand certificates and cashiers' checks increased $2,266,088, to a total of $5,089,734. Savings deposits increased $3,511,863, to a total of $100,387,647. Loans and Discouts increased $2,022,760.

Commissioner Benson announces that this is the first time for a number of years that Loans and Discounts have increased. Other bonds and securities increased $5,187, 098. Cash on hand and Due from Banks increased $4,100,700.

The figures are significant, according to Mr. Benson, because, while the increase in deposits indicate a greater confidence in the security of the state banks on the public, an increase in local deposits indicate an increased confidence on the part of bankers in their local communities. The trend of recent years has been a lack of confidence in local business enterprises on the part of the bankers. This renewed confidence in local business enterprises on the part of banks, Mr. Benson said, means both more profitable banking and more sound economic development of local communities.

From the standpoint of law enforcement, one of the worthwhile laws passed by the last Legislature is the establishment of a statewide broadcasting station under the operation of the Bureau of Criminal Apprehension. For this purpose the Legislature appropriated $25,000 . . .

This will mark the first unit of the system of police alarm which ultimately will blanket the state and make Minnesota a difficult territory for the operation of criminals. Two other units will be established later as funds become available, according to plans of Melvin C. Passolt, bureau chief.

Found Sun's Power

The unknown individual who first focused its rays with a magnifying glass and set a splint of wood or piece of paper on fire, accidentally discovered, although he might not have known it, the power of the sun. Later came others refining on this discovery with larger magnifying glasses and concave focusing mirrors which concentrated the rays so that their heat boiled water, thus producing steam which might drive engines.

Started an Insurrection

Nat Turner was a negro slave, born about 1800, who was the instigator of the Southampton insurrection in Virginia in 1831. He believed himself chosen by the Lord to free his people. At an appointed time he set out with his followers from house to house to kill all white persons. Fifty-five were killed before the insurgents were dispersed. After hiding for a time, Turner was captured and hanged.

A $1.50 Dinner for 6

UNUSUAL DINNER
ORDINARY DINNER

YOU don't have to serve an ordinary dinner even if you want it to cost as little as twenty-five cents each for six persons. Here is a dinner for six which can be served for approximately that price, and which contains two unusual dishes. The menu and approximate costs are:

Chilled Prune Juice 17¢
Macaroni and Liver 46¢
Buttered Stringless Beans 17¢
Cucumber and Romaine Salad 25¢
Bread and Butter 12¢
Pumpkin Ice Cream 28¢
Demi-Tasse 5¢

The recipes for the main course and dessert, the two unusual dishes, are as follows:

Tested Recipes

Macaroni and Liver: Pour boiling water over one-half pound liver, let stand three or four minutes, drain and remove membranes and blood vessels. Chop fine. Chop one onion and sauté a few minutes in three tablespoons butter, but do not brown. Add liver and sauté a few minutes longer. Add the contents of a No. 2½ can tomatoes, salt, pepper, paprika and one-half teaspoon sugar, and simmer five minutes. Cook one package macaroni in boiling salted water, drain and add to the tomato and liver. Reheat and serve.

Pumpkin Ice Cream: Beat one egg yolk slightly, add one-half cup sugar and one-half cup hot milk, then cook in double boiler, stirring constantly, until mixture coats the spoon. Add to one and a half cups canned pumpkin mixed with one-eighth teaspoon salt, one-third teaspoon cinnamon, a few grains nutmeg and two teaspoons lemon juice. Beat one egg white until stiff, add one tablespoon sugar and fold into first mixture. Add one-half cup beaten cream. Pour into refrigerator trays and freeze, stirring occasionally. When half frozen, add one-fourth cup chopped nuts. This may also be frozen in an ice cream freezer.*

Pantomime Originated With Old-Time Romans

Pantomime owes its origin to the plays of the ancient Romans in which the male characters were always played by women and the female characters by men. Hence the tradition that the principal boy must always be a girl and the dame must be a man. Attempts to depart from this rule have seldom proved successful, states a writer in Tit-Bits Magazine.

Pantomime was brought to England in the reign of James I when some Italian players introduced a dumb-show burlesque in which the principal characters were Arlechinno, Columbine, and El Pantaleone. That was the origin of the harlequinade. The first English Harlequin was named Rich, though he performed under the stage name of Lun.

In the unpatented theaters the spoken word was forbidden, so he, too, performed in dumb-show. About that time a French clown named Dedpini was sent to prison for exclaiming "Roast Beef!" on the stage of the Royalty theater.

It was David Garrick who first made Harlequin speak, and Joe Grimaldi who was responsible for the introduction of the clown as we know him today.

Fairy stories were first introduced as brief "openings" to the harlequinade, but after a while they became so popular that they ousted the harlequinade altogether.

Manchuria's Currency Confusion

Manchuria has suffered more from currency confusion than almost any other country. Up to a few years ago, the paper money and coins that were circulated there were issued not only by mints, banks and foreign governments, but also by arsenals, money changers, chambers of commerce, grain mills, distilleries, produce exchanges, retail stores and even private individuals.—Collier's Weekly.

Hide Furnace, Save Space

It is a simple matter to segregate the coal furnace in such a way that, while it still functions as capable as ever, it is hidden from sight, and the remaining part of the basement is ready to be cleaned and painted for recreation purposes. A room can be built around it. In this way it will keep its dust to itself.

Ever-Normal Granary Plan Fills Farm Need

The ever-normal granary plan proposed by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace represents a combination of methods long advocated by famers to provide short-time agricultural credit on farm-stored crops, to curb speculative profit, and to build up adequate crop reserves, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Washington, D. C., asserts.

Legislation permitting the perfection of this plan is contained in one of the amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act now being considered by Congress. A statement by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration about this plan and the amendment follows:

"In high production years the surplus over domestic and export demands would be pledged to the Government as security for the loans," the statement says. "Under seal on farms it would be definitely removed from the market, and would not therefore, become a price-depressing factor. Moreover, waste of the product and the expense of moving it would be avoided if the product were so stored.

"In years of crop shortage, the farmer could pay off his loan and take the resulting profit by selling on the higher market. But if the crop again were large and the price so low that the Government should become owner of the stored collateral, the Government could hold it on the farms and turn it back to producers as compensation for a reduction in acreage in the following year.

This payment in kind for adjustment is provided for in an AA amendment now before Congress. If the farmer wished, he could be paid with corn for adjustment in corn acreage, with cotton for the cotton acreage adjustment, and with wheat for wheat adjustment. On the other hand, if he preferred cash, he could still obtain it. Payments partly in cash and partly in kind could also be made.

Under the ever-normal granary plan only producers cooperating in the adjustment program would be eligible for commodity loans. Thus the tendency toward overproduction in time of higher prices would be curbed. One phase of the ever-normal granary plan was illustrated by the 1933 corn loans, under which farmers in the Corn Belt stored 270,000,000 bushels in sealed cribs, and were advanced $120,493,000 against this collateral," the AAA's statement reads. "They finally sold it on a favorable market, paying off the loans, and gaining, through the increase in corn value, $82,900,000 above such costs as interest and insurance. The corn thus carried over provided valuable feed for the next year, when the crop was short."

Let Our Motto Be

GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

ADULTS

Heart disease among young adults, that is, people between the ages of twenty and forty-five, caused almost 9,000 deaths in Illinois during the last five years. Of each 100 people who died from heart disease, 11 are from the young adult age group. Heart disease among the younger half of this age group is due chiefly to bacteria infections and is only a continuation of the same causes of death that affect the heart during adolescence. After thirty years of age the heart diseases belong more and more to the chronic variety and are usually heart failures due to the exhaustion of a previously damaged heart.

Anyone running a distance finds that his speed decreases because he is tired. He automatically slows up and rests. If he starts running again before having had a complete rest, he finds that he cannot run the same distance as before. This is a crude comparison of just what the heart does when it is impaired or diseased.

Anyone with a disease of the heart cannot do the physical work of the individual with a normal heart.

Muscular work demands a strenuous pumping action on the part of the heart during the period of exertion. The patient with a chronic heart disease finds it difficult to rest his heart. It is in a continuous state of exhaustion. The whole problem of the prevention of death from heart disease is prevention of exhaustion of the heart muscle.

During adolescence and young adult life the exhaustion of the heart is usually due to an infection of the lining of the muscle wall of the heart itself. In other words, it is a local bacterial growth that causes a poisoning of the heart muscles and uses up the energy that should be devoted to resting and reserve force. Older individuals, those past forty and forty-five, who suffer from chronic heart disease, may not have any bacteria growing in the heart, but have damaged hearts due to previous history or past experiences of bacterial growths in the heart. If the heart muscle has been damaged and so has scar tissue, the heart will naturally have less pumping force and it will try to pump faster in order to carry the same load. This decreases its reserve power, and as the reserve power decreases, the heart goes still faster. Finally the beat becomes irregular. A person with such a heart is facing heart failure unless he can in some way rest the heart muscle.

You can probably recall that during your adolescent period of life, after running a race or doing some other strenuous exercise, you had to stop because you became short of breath, and you had a tight feeling in the chest or even slight pains on the left side of the chest. After a few minutes rest these symptoms passed off and you could again take part. This is a typical example of cardiac exhaustion, and it is the way some of the heart diseases of adult life began.

A beginning heart attack should be a red light. You should go to a physician right after the first attack to see just why your heart is exhausted. The average individual, however, doesn't do this, but continues working and may work for ten or fifteen years with increased frequency of the mild heart attacks. Then when he ultimately does go to a physician, his heart is so exhausted that only a prolonged rest in bed will offer any relief at all. If a person with beginning evidences of exhaustion of the heart muscle could take short periods of rest each day, just long enough to restore the tired muscles, he would find that the heart would function better and he might prevent a serious condition. An individual with an exhausted heart should not walk to work, or dig in the garden, or fire the furnace, for instance. Many of these little duties are just too much for the heart when it is in a state of exhaustion.

A person with heart disease who knows the limits his heart will stand, can live a happy and useful life by adjusting himself and his daily duties to his heart. Emphasis should also be placed upon the use of tobacco, alcohol and sometimes coffee, as irritants to the heart under certain conditions.

Sore throats, head colds, sinusitis, give off toxins that irritate the heart, make it go faster and increase its load. Certain weather conditions, particularly during the fall, winter and spring months, may irritate the heart muscles and cause frequent heart attacks.

The heart has wonderful power of adaptation. We can use this power to change our lives so that we can favor an exhausted heart. This will prevent heart failure.

ious, Miss Edberg states. After his "drowning" Aubrey is reincarnated as Rev. Ebenezer Brown, who delights the audience with his affected talk and actions and at the same time keeps his wife in a panic for fear he will be discovered as an imposter.

To further complicate matters the real George Maitland (Donald Hermanson) arrives and concludes that the whole "bunch" is crazy. He arrives just as the fake George leaves the room and the people, being absorbed in other matters, are under the impresion that he has been with them for quite some time, and talk to him of things he knows nothing of. As circumstances become more and more close, Louise, the wife of Aubrey, gets another "idea." The real George is take ninto their confidence and is offered half of the fortune if he will keep Aubrey's true identity a secret.

George Maitland is hard to convince and just as they have nearly won him over to their side Chesterman (Theo. Quale, Jr.), the executor of the will, announces that the fortune which they were squabbling over had dwindled to only a few pounds.

The play will be well worth seeing and a joyous evening of entertainment is promised by the director, Miss Edberg.

If Fire Goes Down Boy Caller Is Not Wanted

Much of the pleasure of a holiday in Holland is derived from the quaint customs and old tales which are met everywhere. There is a proverb here, "There are only two things a girl chooses herself—her potatoes and her lover."

It begins like everywhere else in the world, notes a correspondent in the Detroit News—a glance at a Kermis or a glimpse on the street, and the young man puts on his best suit, and goes to the home of the girl. He is quietly received by the parents, smiled at by the girl and her sisters, who probably nudge each other. Nothing is said about the reason for his coming, though every one guesses right. In the late evening the brothers and sisters, even the parents, go to bed and leave the two principals alone. No, he does not fall on his knees. They talk of everything but love.

If the girl lets the fire go down, the lad must take it as a sign that he is not wanted and he goes out into the night never to return. If she chooses him, she builds up the fire, and that becomes the end of a perfect day.

The French Foreign Legion

The French Foreign Legion accepts men of any nationality over eighteen years of age and under forty, who measure one meter and 55 centimeters (five feet), and whose physical fitness is proved by a certificate presented at the recruiting office.

Enlistment is for five years, after which the soldier may re-enlist for a period of one to five years. After 15 years of service he is pensioned in proportion to the pay he has received. The Foreign Legion is garrisoned in the French possessions of northern Africa (Algeria and Morocco), in Tonkin and in Asiatic Turkey. Recruits are enlisted on French territory, and foreigners anxious to join must travel there at their own expense.

Uses for Mercury

Mercury or quicksilver, so widely employed in thermometers, has a greater variety of uses than any other metal. It is utilized in a thousand different ways in the arts, chemistry and medicine. Mercuric salts, especially the chloride and iodide, writes Trevor Sanks, New York city, in Collier's Weekly, are the most powerful of all known antiseptics. Of the perchloride, one part in 2,000—the strength commonly employed in surgery—kills all known bacteria.

Funeral services for Chas. Olufson, Gatzke, will be held Friday, May 17th, from the home and Landstad church with the Rev. S. T. Anderson officiating.

J. Lager Succeeds B.Ommodt as Land O' Lakes Fieldman

John Lager, operator-manager of the Lancaster Cooperative creamery for the past twenty years, has been appointed district field manager of Land O' Lakes, succeeding Ben Ommodt, who has been promoted to a position with the head office at Minneapolis, it was reported this week.

The Lancaster creamery under Mr. Lager's management has been one of the leading cooperative creameries of the state and has handled all the sidelines, including eggs, poultry, turkeys, cheese ice cream, seeds, flour and feeds. giving Mr. Lager a broad experience in these sidelines which are yearly becoming more and more important as well as in the actual operation of the creamery and the manufacture of butter. The Lancaster creamery also operates a gas service station. The creamery under Mr. Lager's management was one of the first in the district to adopt the double entry system of book-keeping which is now used by 30 out of 32 creameries in the district. Mr. Lager has been among the leaders in the state in creamery efficiency contests. having won first in the district several times and one second place in the state competition. He maintained an average score of 99 per cent. in efficiency, during the year 1934.

As district fieldman, Mr. Lager will be charged with the duties of Land O' Lakes representative and contact man with the various creameries affiliated with the Land O' Lakes organization in this district and keeps check of all statistics on production, price, efficiency, score, costs, etc. His excellent record as a creamery operator and buttermaker and wide experience in all branches of creamery operation will assure the affiliated creameries of the best possible service, Mr. B. O. Norby, manager of the local Land O' Lakes plant, stated, in announcing Mr. Lager's appointment.

Origin of Coats of Arms Traced to Israel Tribes

The origin of coats of arms is lost in the mists of antiquity. The twelve tribes of Israel each had its distinguishing mark, and the classical heroes of Homer and Ovid had simple figures on their shields. The eagle on the ensign of the Roman legions was an apt token of their strength and soaring ambition. In like fashion, notes a writer in the New York Herald Tribune, the early nations adopted various animals as fitting symbols of some prevailing trait of national character. The Athenians used the owl, a symbol of wisdom. A bear, signifying strength, was the Goth's insignia. The Saxons chose the horse, for strength and speed, an emblem which has come down and is even now included in the arms of the king of England.

It was not until the time of the Crusaders that individuals began wearing distinguishing marks. The earlier Crusaders painted crosses on their shields to denote their mission. But later the various leaders found it advantageous to have in addition a distinguishing mark for their followers so that friend would know friend in the mixed hordes that left Europe for the Holy Land. Richard, the Lion-Hearted, adopted two lions as his personal badge. The number he later changed to the three that have remained on the royal arms of England to this day. The King of France chose the 'fleur-de-lys, a symbol which likewise can be traced not only in France but in other countries where members of the same family have ruled until recent times.

Mermaids Are Mythical Beings; Basis for Idea

Mermaids are mythical beings of the sea supposed to have the form of a woman above the waist and that of a fish below. According to mythology, mermaids had great personal charms with which they lured men to destruction in the deep. There is a slight physical basis for the myth. Some marine animals resemble human beings when seen at a distance in certain attitudes. In some northern countries seals have a way of lifting their heads from the water with a human, intelligent look in their faces, and they hug their young to their bosoms much as a human mother does.

When Henry Hudson was on a voyage between Spitzbergen and Nova Zembla in 1680, he reported that one morning in June two of his sailors saw a mermaid who came close to the side of the vessel, and gazed at them intently. Her face and breasts were those of a woman, but below she was a fish as big as a halibut and colored like a speckled halibut. If the two sailors were not telling a yarn it is probable that they saw a seal, an animal then little known to Europeans. A few years later Capt. Richard Whitborne reported seeing a mermaid in St. John's harbor on the coast of Newfoundland. Whitborne, like Hudson's sailors, was no doubt the victim of careless observation. Walruses seen dimly at a distance often appear like mermaids.—Indianapolis News.

Some People Made Famous Through Help of Fiction

Few people have had the experience of becoming world-famous as the original of an immortal character in fiction.

Many authors have chosen real people as the originals of characters which have become famous.

Quite a number of characters in fiction have achieved sufficient fame to have statues erected to them.

In Munich, Bavaria, Little Red Riding Hood and her wolf are immortalized in stone. Spain has a monument to the memory of Don Quixote and in Paris there is a statue to D'Artagnan, one of the Three Musketeers.

Thousands annually admire a fine bronze statue to Mark Twain's boy immortals, Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn. It stands on a national highway near the author's old home.

In the little village of Largo, Fifeshire, is a statue of Robinson Crusoe, bearded and clad in goatskins. —Pearson's Weekly.

English Salt

One million nine hundred and ten thousand tons of salt are made in England every year, and nearly all of it comes out of Cheshire and Worcestershire. Most of it is used in chemical factories, but a good deal as fertilizer. Three bushels per acre of salt increases the yield of wheat by four to twelve bushels per acre, and salt is an excellent fertilizer for pinks, carnations, and celery. Some plants, however, do not like it. Among these are the apple tree, the cherry, and the vine. In dressing land with salt you can have too much of a good thing, for sixteen bushels per acre will destroy all plant life, including weeds. Salt is one of the most widely distributed of all minerals. It is even thrown out by Vesuvius and other active volcanoes.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

McKinley Sunday School Man

The late President William McKinley attended a school managed by Presbyterian and Methodist clergymen. When but twenty-four he was chosen superintendent of the Sunday school. How deep-seated was his religious instinct was made manifest when, at Buffalo, September 6, 1901, he was mortally wounded by an assassin. "It is God's way," he said. "His will, not ours, be done." John Hay declared: "President McKinley showed the world how a Christian gentleman should live and how a Christian could die."

Grand Ribbon Decoration

A Grand Ribbon is simply a decoration of honor conferred upon a citizen of the United States by a foreign government or foreign ruler. The Department of States says that any decoration of this kind may not be received by any person holding an office of profit or trust under the United States as provided in a section of the Constitution. When such honor is conferred by a foreign government it is held by the Department of State for the recipient until such time as he may give up his position.

Old-Time Conveyance

Not many years ago on the plains of Argentina, the gauchos, or cowboys, used a unique method of conveying their wives to and from town. The lady would sit on a dried horsehide while the gentleman, mounted on his horse, would drag it along the ground by a long rope tied to his saddle. All she had to do was hang on tightly when going over the bumps and keep from choking on the dust stirred up by the horse.—Collier's Weekly.

Charming Welsh Town

Knighton is a charming little town on the Teme in the Welsh borderland of Shropshire. The surrounding hills have the dignity of mountains and provide many fine views. For the lover of antiquity, the naturalist and the angler, the district has many attractions. The great Caractacus waged many battles here and his earthworks still may be seen. There also is a ruin of a fortress at Hopton castle dating from the time of Edward the First.

Painted Desert an Area of Plateaus and Mesas

The painted desert is an area of plateaus and low mesas in north central Arizona. It extends from the top of the Marble canyon of the Colorado river southward along the east side of the valley of the Little Colorado for about 100 miles, varying in width from 15 to 20 miles. At the south, it ends near the Santa Fe railway, which crosses it between Holbrook and Winslow. The desert lies at an altitude of about 5,000 feet and has an exceedingly arid climate. In consequence, vegetation is so scant that areas of rock are bare or very nearly so. These rocks, mostly Triassic shales and sandstones, exhibit a great variety of colors, including red, pink, purple, chocolate, lavender, pale green and gray, whence the name "painted."

Situated on the margin of this desert, about 60 miles north of Winslow, are the seven villages of the Hopi Indians, the best known of which are Walpi and Oraibi. The pueblos are picturesquely built on cliffs which project from a high plateau of sandstone.

Where Columbus Met Isabella

It was in the hall of ambassadors, in the Alhambra, in Granada, Spain, that Columbus held his last audience with Queen Isabella before he set sail for the New World. Today, high up on the side of the Alpujarras mountains, the famous Alhambra of the Thirteenth century looks down upon a peaceful countryside.

SENTIMENTAL SUE

The captain of an Atlantic liner was being continually pestered by a woman passenger who kept asking him what were the possibilities of seeing a whale.

"Don't forget to let me know as soon as one appears," she reminded him for about the tenth time.

"But, madam," asked the harrassed skipper, "why are you so eager to see a whale?"

"It's the biggest desire in my life to see a whale blubber," she told him. "I think it must be so impressive to watch such an enormous creature crying."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Wet Wash

The class had been having a lesson on laundry work, and the teacher was questioning the girls. "What is the first thing to be done when the washing is finished?" she asked, but everyone was silent.

"Now, come along," she said, "surely you know what your mother does when she has finished washing?"

"Please, teacher," answered one of the girls, "she takes the handle off the wringer so as the lodger can't use it."

Roman Asparagus

THE feasts of ancient Rome are legendary. The old Roman epicures sometimes spent as much as half a million dollars on a single supper. But listen to what even these gourmets of long ago had to put up with, and you will be glad that you are living in the twentieth century with its modern industries, including that of canning.

According to A. Soyer, author of "The Pantropheon or History of Food and Its Preparation from the earliest ages of the world," published in 1853, "the cooks of Rome had a method which appears to have been subsequently too much neglected; they chose the finest heads of asparagus and dried them. When wanted for the table, they put them into hot water and boiled them a few minutes. Thanks to this simple process the plant swelled considerably, and passed as being very tender and fine flavored."

Your Modern Choice

Compare that with the delicious modern canned asparagus which would astonish a Roman epicure. There are two varieties of it—green, which is obtainable in No. 2 cans, and white, either the whole spear or the tips of which are canned. The whole spears are graded in the same way, except that there are no Giant or Colossal grades, and there is also a Tiny grade for tips. Stalks are mostly packed in No. 2½ square cans, holding all the way from eight to twelve spears in the Giant grade to from forty-five to sixty spears in the Small grade. Tips are packed in No. 1 square cans, holding all the way from twenty-one to thirty tips in the Mammoth grade to from eighty to a hundred in the Tiny grade.

Canned asparagus is served either hot or cold, and is delicious not only as a vegetable dish, but for salads.*

Some of our novelists don't seem to care a hang what they do with their characters' eyes. For instance:

"Her eyes roamed carelessly round the room."

"With her eyes she riveted him to the spot."

"He tore his eyes from her face and they fell on the letter at her feet."

"Their eyes met for a long, breathless moment, and swam together."

"Marjory would often take her eyes from the deck and cast them far out to sea."

He wrenched his eyes away from hers. It was a painful moment for both of them."—The Christian Science Monitor.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a logbirling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

"No, I know you won't. But I wish . . . Oh, how I wish you'd counsel with some one else, with Able or anyone. You're young, you're in danger. . . . And this matter you just mention: Can't you think of Dawn a little? If you love her can't you see that she has a right to believe that you will protect yourself?"

The man's voice had fallen to a broken whisper. He held out both hands in appeal and tears sprang into his eyes. This man, this mature, quiet gentleman, this stranger to the country, begging him with tears in eyes and voice to consider Dawn McManus struck Ben dumbfounded.

"Oh, it's only that you've shown yourself to be so decent," Martin said after a moment, emotions under better control. "I hate to see you putting yourself in danger."

"I won't stick my head into any noose," Ben replied. "Lord, it's late. We'll need clear heads to meet this situation. Better get into the old blankets."

But he did not sleep at once. He lay awake a long time, thinking of Red Bart Delaney and Brandon and wondering how he could prove their relationship. . . . And speculating on Martin's outbursts, the man's keen hatred of Brandon, whom he probably had never seen, his intense interest in Dawn McManus. . . . Something strange and unnatural was there, Elliott told himself. Still, he added, you could stake your last hope on a man like John Martin.

• • • • • • • •

Early the next forenoon the merchants and traders and loafers in main thoroughfare saw something to nip their attention.

Ben Elliott came driving into town at a spanking trot, his team of alert drivers coated with frost. This was nothing unusual. But when he brought them to a crunching halt before the bank building, over which Nicholas Brandon worked and lived, jumped out, threw blankets over their backs and tied them to a post, a few necks were craned.

Throughout the evening before Brandon had gorged himself on a sense of relief. At eight he had passed Bart Delaney on the street. None had been about to notice that although Brandon appeared only to overtake and pass the man that, in reality, they spoke briefly and cautiously.

"Well?"

"In his tracks . . . Two mile above th' mill."

Inside, Brandon seethed with a savage exultation. He crossed the street, drunk with the feeling of relief, mounted to his office and drank to his own success. . . . And drank again. For hours he sat at his desk, whisky bottle at his elbow and when he went down the hallway to his bedroom at the rear he carried the bottle with him.

His first move for the day, once in his office next day, was to draw the cork of a fresh flask and drink deeply. A growing warmth ran through him. That was better. It was not comfortable to wake up, thinking of a man lying lifeless on the snow . . . at your orders.

Soon, now, word would be coming into town from Hoot Owl, tragic, final word. He must be in shape to meet the news dispassionately. No one would know his part in the killing! none would guess. Still, it would not be easy to have people saying that Ben Elliott was dead. . . . Elliott is dead; Elliott is dead. . . . The words spun about in his mind, a savage chant, and Brandon wanted to be glad but could not. Elliott was gone, though. The Hoot Owl was at his mercy and Dawn . . . Dawn!

"Good Morning," He Said in a Hoarse Gasp.

And then he turned to the opening door. . . . Ben Elliott was standing there and smiling good-naturedly at him.

But dead men do not stand up. . . . Not men left dead on the snow. . . . Men whose life you have had taken do not smile. . . . Men stiff on the snow cannot smile. . . . This combination of truths coupled in Brandon's swirling mind and struck him cold. This could be no man, then; this was an apparition, this was—

And then whatever it was spoke.

"Good morning, Brandon!"

Elliott spoke naturally and easily, and closed the door behind him. Dead men do not speak; ghosts do not open and close doors—they pass through them.

And Nicholas Brandon, gathering his faculties, lurched to his feet, panting and clenching the edge of the desk.

"Good morning," he said in a hoarse gasp. "Good. . . ."

Ben Elliott laughed bitterly.

"What's the difficulty, Brandon? Didn't you expect to see me this morning?"

"Why . . . I . . . That is, I thought—"

Ben stepped close and dropped his voice nearly to a whisper.

"You thought I wouldn't be walking today? Was that it?"

"Not walking? I don't know what you're talking about." The older man's self-control was coming back rapidly, now that his fright had passed away.

"I just came in to get matters straight between us, Brandon. Several serious things have happened to the Hoot Owl but in spite of them the Hoot Owl is booming; now, I presume, I can look for things to happen to me. Before anything does—because I'm not rash enough to be cocksure that it won't—I want you to get me straight."

The last vestige of his smile was gone by then. He stood spread-legged, hands locked behind his back, eyes boring into Brandon's gaze.

"I'm not interested in—"

"But you'll listen! You'll listen or I'll choke you until you'll beg for the opportunity to listen, Brandon! You'll listen to me this morning and it'll be the first and last time.

"I know a great deal. I can prove but little. I know that you started in to run me out by sending Duval to clean up my camp. Next, you tried to cripple my operation by having a firebug touch off the mill."

"Don't go too far, young man!"

"I won't. The pits of h—l are the inside limits for you, Brandon!

"After that, you timed it nicely and blew up my trestle. You almost had us two or three times. But you flopped! The Hoot Owl is up on its knees, will be on its feet in a month if we keep going and it'll be sitting on the world by the time breakup hits us. All you've done to the job has only helped it.

"That's that! Next you try to get me, thinking, probably, that if you knock the skipper off the bridge the craft will founder for certain. You're wrong, there. You can't lick my men, because they're too many for you; you can't stop the Hoot Owl by getting me out of the picture. But if you want to keep on trying, it's your own funeral. I've only one thing to ask of you: try to play the white man, Brandon, and fight your own fights!"

His face was dark with rage, now, and he emphasized his last words by downward thrusts of clenched hands along his thighs.

Brandon smiled lightly.

"You're a queer young man," he remarked. "You dream in broad daylight and with your eyes open."

"A peculiarly detailed dream, Brandon! I've said all I have to say about the job and about myself but there is another matter left to be mentioned while I'm here. I won't even utter her name in your hearing, but any man who would pull a trick like you did and involve a girl . . . Brandon, a snake's belly is sky-high compared to you!"

And that touched the well-springs of rage that had been dammed back until the moment.

"You fool!" the man said heavily. The words came like the first break in a levee; slow, sluggish words. . . . And then, like the following toss of foam was the frothing rage in his scream. "You fool! I'll drive you out of this country! I'll hang your operation up for the crows to pick! I'll string the bones of this timber and your own bones across this country!"

He stopped, sobbing for breath, and his teeth clicked in an agony of passion.

"Dawn? Not mention her name? Well, I will. . . . She's mine, you fool, body and soul! She's been mine for years. . . . Because she smiled at you, because she played with you don't think she's interested, fool! She's—"

He swayed backward as Elliott lurched toward him, but their bodies did not lock.

White and trembling, Ben stayed his own rush.

"No! . . . Don't want to brawl over her," he choked. "But if you mention her name to me again I'm likely to lose my head and tear your hide off your carcass!"

His rage was so high, so holy, that the fear it inspired carried through Brandon's frenzy and the man stood silent, perhaps in awe.

Ben relaxed.

"Now," he said quietly, "I've just one thing to ask, Brandon. It's this: fight your own battles!"

He turned on his heel and slammed the door behind him.

Wisconsin Producers Back Progressive Measures

Madison, Wisc.—Sixteen hundred farmers, unemployed, housewives, union men, and Socialist party delegates jammed the State Capitol Assembly room last Wednesday for the public hearing on the Socialist proposals for putting Wisconsin's unemployed back to work. In addition to the Socialists, whose assemblymen had introduced the three bills "to do for Wisconsin what the new deal has failed to do for the nation," others were present to appear for the bills, including delegations of farmers from fifteen counties, the city of Milwaukee through its assistant city attorney, Milwaukee Federated Trades Council, Madison Federation of Labor, and the Wisconsin Workers' Committee on Unemployment. Speakers representing the rank and file of the Progressives took the floor for the bills, although it is expected that the LaFollette machine will kill them.

The seriousness with which responsible leaders of farmers and city workers pled for a constructive step forward so impressed the committee on state affairs that a favorable report is expected. George A. Nelson, one of the outstanding Farmers' Union leaders, warned that unless the legislature showed itself intelligent enough to accept the proposals "there may not be another legislature." Carl Minkley, veteran Milwaukee Socialist and former state assemblyman stressed the necessity of immediate action and told the committee "if you don't act favorably, the next time we come to Madison we'll bring baseball bats." Ovations indicated the delegates' acceptance of these warnings.

Andrew J. Bismiller, editor of the Wisconsin Leader, appearing for the state executive committee of the party, hailed the proposals as the first "frontal attack" on the profit system and demanded favorable action. Gene Schmidt, Dodge county farmer, Glenn Milton Peters, unemployed leader, Walter Polakowski, former state senator, Harry Willie for the Milwaukee unions and Alderman Sam Soref of Milwaukee were among the other speakers favoring the bills. Leo Krzycki, national chairman of the Socialist party, and former Milwaukee sheriff, also spoke for the plans. In addition to Krzycki, the national party organization was represented by Clarence Senior and Paul Porter.

Only two sources of opposition were found; the Wisconsin Taxpayers league and the Communist party. The Chamber of Commerce representative who was present to testify got cold feet when he saw the reception given by the crowded galleries to this "united front" in an attempt to defeat the bills. He left without testifying. The Communists opposed the bills, demanding instead that more adequate unemployment insurance be granted. Speakers for the bills welcomed the combined opposition as showing how fundamentally sound they were as opposed to the reformism of the capitalist and communist objectors.

Thunderous ovations greeted each explanation of what the three bills would do. They are: the Wisconsin Production Corporation bills, introduced by Edward Kiefer; a state marketing authority bill, by Arthur H. Koegel; and the Wisconsin Public Improvement corporation bill, by Herman B. Wegner, all Socialists.

The first would set up a corporation empowered to purchase factories, land mines, or "anything else needed to put men back to work," and to distribute the goods produced. The second would help the farmer market his crops without paying blood money to middlemen. The third would simplify and speed up public works in the state.

Never before in the history of the state has so large and enthusiastic a crowd appeared at a public hearing. After the galleries could hold no more, the delegates swept over the assembly floor and overflowed out into the halls and lobbies. They vowed that when the bill came out of committee they would be back with ten times their number. Wisconsin workers and farmers are on the march against the profit system.

WHEAT REFERENDUM VOTE TO BE TAKEN MAY 25TH

The referendum to be held May 25 on whether or not the wheat adjustment program should be continued after the end of the 1935 crop year will serve as a demonstration to the nation at large as to whether or not wheat farmers want the Agricultural Adjustment Act, M. L. Wilson, assistant secretary of Agriculture, told members of county wheat allotment committees and county agents at University Farm, St. Paul, last week.

County Agent R. M. Douglass and Alfred Longren, president, with members of the Pennington county wheat allotment committee, were among those present at this meeting. The Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Mr. Wilson asserted, is very much interested in the farmers' reaction to this question, because it realizes that the success of any future adjustment program will depend on the whole-hearted suport given it by the majority of wheat growers.

Bassoon Is Called "The Clown of the Orchestra"

The bassoon is an instrument of great antiquity. Its name suggests an instrument taking the bass part, and that is exactly what it does. In Italian its name is "fagotto," which means "stick" in English. Now it is easy to see how this instrument came by its name, for it really resembles a bundle of five sticks, which, when fitted together, form a wooden tube about eight feet long.

The tube is doubled back upon itself, the shorter joint extending about two-thirds of the length of the longer part, whereby the height of the instrument is reduced to about four feet. A curved brass tube which ends in a double reed mouthpiece is attached. The tones produced by the bassoon are often warm and mellow, but sometimes they are so comical as to have earned the name "the clown of the orchestra" for this instrument, notes a writer in the Washington Post.

Rapid passages on the bassoon sound best in its natural key of G or closely related keys. Trills are practicable, though not on every note. In general the tone-color of the bassoon is so striking that the composer need only write passages of straightforward character for it, without making it do technical tricks.

The bassoon has been a favorite with nearly all the great masters. Beethoven uses it largely in his symphonies, writing everywhere for it independent parts of great originality. Where Beethoven used the bassoon in rather grotesque fashion, Mendelssohn handled it more daintily. The latter composer gave the bassoon many bits of inimitable humor in his "Midsummer Night's Dream" music.

Some Games Are Too Old to Be Traced to Source

The origin of games is lost in antiquity and some which are still played are too old to be traced to their source. Herodotus tells us, says Tit-Bits Magazine, that most of them were invented by the Lydians as a palliative at a time of acute famine which lasted 18 years. The Lydians decided to play games one day and eat on the next. They claimed to be the inventors of many popular Greek games, including knuckle-bones, ball and dice.

During the excavation of the palace of Minos in Crete an ornate backgammon board was discovered. The Greeks played a game called azyx, which was adopted by the Romans and became the Twelve-Line game, and survives today as backgammon. Subsequently Roman officialdom frowned upon games involving dice because they led to heavy gambling.

Chess is reputed to be of Indian origin, and it must be the game which has been played longest without any alteration of rules, since castling was introduced in the Sixteenth century.

Coal Is the Remnant of Prehistoric Plant Life

Coal is what is left of prehistoric plant life that has been subjected to subterranean temperatures and pressures for millions of years, notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune. The geologists know that because there are scattered throughout coal the fossilized forms of leaves, ferns, and even tree trunks, to say nothing of assorted vermin of that far-off day. Furthermore, coal in all stages of evolution has been found. There is peat, which is nothing more than a brown, spongy, water-soaked mass of decayed vegetation. There is lignite, or brown coal, which is so soft that it can readily be crumbled by the fingers. There is bituminous or soft coal, which is black in color but still fairly easy to powder. And, as a last stage, there is anthracite, which is a hard, flinty material, the composition of which is almost pure carbon. These changes are undergone by wood in its evolution into anthracite. Coal steadily loses oxygen and hydrogen. This means that water, carbon dioxide, and probably some hydrogen-rich natural gas have been steadily baked and squeezed out of the coal, until its composition approaches that of pure carbon.

Color-Blindness Affects People in Various Ways

People who are color-blind were not very pleased when colored traffic signals were introduced and since beacons have been in general use their troubles have increased.

Inability to distinguish between colors is more common than most of us suppose. More men than women are victims of it.

There are people who are color-blind in only one eye. For instance, while their left eye may see red as red, their right sees it as black.

The story is told of a famous Quaker chemist who was color-blind and had only three normal color sensations.

A pink flower looked blue to him and when he cut his chin one day he saw green blood flowing from the wound.

Instances of colored vision are not uncommon. Some people always see as though they were looking through green or red glass.—Pearson's Weekly.

Heat Lizards

The idea regarding heat lizards, which are seen living in ovens and running around inside the oven when the oven door is open, is a myth which is due to a misunderstanding regarding the nature and habits of the salamander, plus an optical illusion. The salamander was formerly supposed to be impervious to fire and actually live in ovens. This idea was undoubtedly caused by the fact that these amphibians occasionally crawl into houses in the winter time in search of warmth and seek refuge in hearths. The misconception was no doubt further heightened by the brilliant orange or scarlet color of some species. As a matter of fact, neither the salamander nor any other animal is impervious to fire, and the so-called heat lizards are entirely an optical illusion.—Washington Star.

Once Richest Spot

Port Royal, the small town at the entrance to Kingston (Jamaica) harbor, was once a city of considerable size. It was the headquarters of the buccaneers and at that time "the richest spot in the universe," as well as the wickedest. It is now a military station with highly interesting historical associations. Nelson was in command there in 1779.

Grant's Tomb

The corner stone of Grant's tomb on Riverside drive in New York, was laid by President Harrison on April 27, 1892, the seventieth anniversary of Grant's birth. It was dedicated on the seventy-fifth anniversary. The cost was about $600,000, which was subscribed by 90,000 persons—none of it being paid by either the government or the city.

Official figures made public by the Los Angeles police department show that 61 per cent of all arrests for misdemeanors in 1934 were for intoxication.

The board of regents of the University of Minnesota has instructed the athletic director to take any necessary steps to check drinking and drunkenness at football games. This evil has developed to intolerable proportions since repeal.

"The drinking of liquor, and also of beer, even in quantities not ordinarily considered intoxicating lessens personal resistance to all kinds of desease, shortens life, and produces crime and accidents."—Resolution of the German Association of Neurologists and Psychiatrists.

Council Meeting

A communication from the mayor, F. A. Rinkel, stated that he had re-appointed Carl B. Larson as a member of the cemetery board; Mr. Larson's term expired this year. A letter from Wm. Douville, president of the WPA asking that the people be given an opportunity to vote on whether or not they want a Water and Light commisison was laid over until the next regular election. The League of Minnesota Municipalities sent an invitation to the council members to send a representative to the convention to be held in Mankato June 5th, 6th and 7th; no action was taken in choosing delegates.

An extension of electrical service to include about a dozen dwellings north of the Pennington County Fairgrounds was asked for in a petition signed by residents of that district. A motion was made to investigate the feasibility of the plan.

Building permits were granted to Chris Kirk, Gustafson & Sons, P. J. Bingheim (two) one for a dwelling and the other for a Phillips 66 gasoline station on the N.E. corner of third st. and Horace ave. Permits to remodel dwellings were granted to A. B. Stenberg, Fred Will, A. Haugen, C. E. Johnson and S. Benson.

Payment of the following bills was authorized: $1000 for two lots acquired by condemnation just south of the auditorium; $100 into the mayor's contingent fund; payment of $550 for the fire hose; $300 to the Memorial Day fund to be placed at the disposal of the City Band; and the payment of $538 to the Crane Co. for the water main which was laid on Dewey Avenue. The city council granted the Boy Scouts the privilege of erecting a cabin on Johnson street to be known as the Boy Scouts' Cabin. The plans submitted by the highway department for the parkway were approved by the council.

Bids were called for to buy fire-proof shutters for the north and west windows of the power house and for a three-inch concrete roofing slab to be installed on the oil shed near the power house. Alderman Griebstein cited the danger to the plant if the elevator near the plant should catch on fire as an argument in favor of the purchase of the shutters.

The fifteen lots which Andrew Ness has been using to pile the dismantled frames of automobiles on is to be taken out of the hands of Mr. Ness by O. L. Ihle. These lots have over $1129.25 in delinquent taxes against them which Mr. Ihle offered to take over for $150. He agreed at the same time to remove all the junk which has been piled there for a number of years.

After discussing the bond issue election the council appointed Ole Legold and Theo. Quale to act as spokesmen for that body at meetings.

LOCAL BOY PROMOTED TO SHELTERBELT ASSISTANT

Word has been received that Arnold Mickelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mickelson of this city, who received a government position some time ago as foreman on the shelterbelt, has been promoted to shelterbelt assistant.

Council Fails to Appear At W. P. A. Meet Mon.

more equipment be purchased, and the plan submitted by the council is to raise it by a bond issue.

W. E. Dahlquist, editor of the Times, was asked to state his opinion on the bond issue. He brought out the fact that the output of the plant has increased 100 per cent during the past ten years and that it is only a matter of time until the city would be facing a shortage of power. He said that the issue now is different than that of two years ago in that two years ago it was a mater of "stand-by" power and now it is a matter of "additional power." He also stated that regardless of what the city council did in this case it would be wrong to many people, "as is always the case with any purchase made by any council." The sewage disposal plant has no rightful place in this argument, Mr. Dahlquist said, as the city is obliged in this case to give the residents a reasonable service from the municipal plant, and the lack of a disposal plant would cause no particular hardship on the citizens of this community.

Mayor Rinkel quoted from a leter he had received from Wm. Carey, of the S.E.R.A., in which he stated that he had been informed by Secretary Ickes that applications for loans and grants for public works would be taken. Mayor Rinkel assured the audience that the council would take advantage of any grant or loan at lowest rates of interest that they could get. D. F. O'Neil, former state senator from this district, was present and asked permission to speak to the group on the bonds of the city. He stated that the credit of the city of Thief River Falls is considered very good and that the bonds of the city have gone up 12 points during the past year. The city should be able to borrow money at a low rate of interest, Mr. O'Neil said.

H. W. Kinghorn asked if the bond payment would have the first call on the earnings of the light plant, which was answered in the affirmative by Theo. Quale, city attorney; Mr. Kinhorn then stated that if a bond issue was the only way to finance the purchase of a diesel unit then a bond issue should be floated.

C. E. Hellquist, when asked to speak, commended Mr. Dahlquist on his admission that he was wrong two years ago when he opposed the purchase of additional power equipment; he took the same stand in regards to the bond issue as did Mr. Kinghorn. "It is an absurdity to float bonds up to $60,000 which would bear interest for the next fifteen years when the earnings of the plant for two years would pay for an engine costing that amount," Mr. Fred Forsberg said.

R. M. Aalbu, announced by the chairman as a representative of labor, stated that we seem to be faced with a peculiar proposition inasmuch as the council, while asking permisison to spend $60,000 of city money, had failed to show up to explain the proposed expenditure. He was not versed in propounding legal questions, he said, but he felt that the question should state what the council expects to buy with the money if they get it. Under the question as stated the public can not know whether they will buy an engine or use the funds to defray the cost of another "Viebahn." He pointed out that the bond issue would draw interest at the rate of 4½ per cent over a period of 15 years and contrasted this with the proposition which the council of two years ago proposed, which was a debt of $38,000 at 5 per cent after the federal grant had been applied to the proposed expenditure of $53,000. This $38,000 would have been paid off in five years, he said. "I am not a new convert to the idea of acquiring more power equipment," he said. "I am affiliated with the same political group as Mr. Hellquist and our group was severely defeated in the election eighteen months ago. We were soundly and roundly spanked because we had the temerity to suggest that the city of Thief River Falls was outgrowing its present power equipment and should provide more. I still think so, and if it must cost $60,000 we should still get it, but it seems to me that we should first attempt to get a federal grant to defray part of the cost. At any rate I believe that we should know what we are asked to vote on," Mr. Aalbu said.

ing for the office of library directors. In aldermanic contests the Farmer-Laborites were successful in almost every instance. Incumbent Farmer-Labor aldermen were far in the lead while incumbents of the conservative variety in several cases were trailing their F-L opponents. Even in the conservative wards candidates supported by the Farmer-Labor Association were successful in obtaining nomination and made a showing far out of comparison with any previous record in such contests.

Scandinavians Support Irish

As an illustration of how the working people went down the line for their candidates, disregarding nationality and religion, the outcome in the aldermanic contest in the twelfth ward is an apt one. Michael J. Foley, Farmer-Labor endorsee, distanced David Blomberg, conservative incumbent by a vote of 4,861 to 2,949. The ward is overwhelmingly Scandinavian, yet this fact did not prevent Foley, an Irishman, from getting the full labor vote. The same is true in the seventh ward where Owen Cunningham, another Irishman, led the field for the office of alderman by a vote of 3,147 to 2,021 for Wm. A. Hoppe, conservative incumbent.

That Latimer has all but a cinch to be elected mayor over Charles F. Keyes in the final election is conceded by every political prognosticator in Minneapolis. He is immune to the kind of attack that is only too frequently resorted to by reactionaries in political campaigns. Issues will therefore have to be discussed and such being the case Latimer will have all the advantage on his side.

Election June 10

The same can be said of other candidates endorsed by the Farmer-Labor Association for city-wide and aldermanic offices. It looks like all but a clean sweep in the election on June 10.

Though the Farmer-Labor victory was due in the main to the excellent organization that the party possesses in Minneapolis. It is also true that the party strength was greatly augmented by Governor Floyd B. Olson's veto of the infamous sales tax proposal. The workers and small business people have come to realize that the conservatives who talk glibly during the campaigns of their friendship for the common are in reality just servants of big business when the test comes.

Sentiment Changed in State

And as sentiment has changed in Minneapolis so it has changed and is changing among the people on the farms and in the smaller cities and villages of the state. I would suggest to Messrs. Rockne, McKenzie, Dunn, et al, to watch their step or Minnesota will witness an even greater overturn in the election in November, 1936, than the one which has just taken place in Minnesota's chief metropolis.

Morris Kaplan to Speak

The specific complaint against Mr. Kaplan was that he had sold sugar at less than code prices. In reply Mr. Kaplan stated among other things: "Permit us to state that if the government of the United States believes it to be conducive to public welfare to penalize this establishment for retailing foodstuffs below prevailling conventional prices, then it seems to us that the sooner the consuming public get busy and demand of Congress and the President of the United States, that any and every code which has bearing upon "holding up" commodity prices shall be stricken from the NRA program. It is decidedly indefensible from any angle one may look at it to expect the consumers as a class to pay tribute in the way of higher prices to any merchant just because there are some men in business who are trying to save themselves from extinction at the expense of the great mass of the common people."

"Had the complaint against us been that of an attempt to raise prices by pooling with other merchants for that purpose, there would be more reasonable justification for the government to step in and call a halt. . . ."

"In conclusion," Mr. Kaplan says, in closing his letter, "we would like very much to know from you just exactly what punishment would be meted out to us if we decided to make a test case of this matter and base our position upon constitutional grounds."

It is noteworthy that the NRA enforcement officer did not press the matter further.

"In bringing Mr. Kaplan here to address the people," the chairman of the Farmer-Labor club entertainment and program committee said, "We are presenting the first of what we hope will be a long list of prominent platform men representing all branches of progressive thought along the lines of Sociology, Economics and Political science. Mr. Kaplan is an exceptional orator and whether one agrees with him or not, he is well worth hearing. It is significant that the stalemate that the country has fallen into, was foretold by Mr. Kaplan speaking from a soapbox on a street corner in this city twenty years ago. He represents a school of thought which the American people may well give careful consideration before starting out on the next great national stampede."

The business session of the club will be called to order promptly at eight o'clock, A. G. Anderson, president of the organization, stated this week, in order that it may be out of the way and Mr. Kaplan's address be started at 8:30 o'clock. There is no admission charge and the public is heartily invited to attend the meeting. A special invitation is extended to the businessmen of the city, as Mr. Kaplan has a message that will particularly interest them, it was stated.

R. L. Falls Plans Crow Hunt for Sunday, May 19

A crow-hunt has been arranged for the Red Lake county crow hunters to be held next Sunday, May 19th, according to Walter Hinze, chairman of the crow hunters organization.

Two teams have been selected from the county, the west side team to be captained by Wm. Bristow and the east side team by Emil Malwitz; each team to have not more than 25 members.

The losing side in the contest is to fete the others with a dance and free lunch. Crows, hawks and owls and their eggs will be counted but it will be necessary to show the whole bird in order to receive credit for them, the rules state. "The first guy to get sore is to be put in jail for 24 hours," according to a motion made by Archie Marcott, which was carried unanimously.

Those interested in getting into the crow-hunt are urged to get in touch with either of the captains as soon as possible.

Oliver was careless about his personal effects. When mother saw clothing scattered about on chair and floor she inquired: "Who didn't hang up his clothes when he went to bed?"

A muffled voice from under the blankets murmured, "Adam."

Another Time Saving Treat

BROWN BETTY PUDDING is a new product in cans which has just been offered to housewives under a popular brand by a nationally known distributor. The pudding is a mixture of apples, bread, raisins and shortening seasoned with spices and sugar.

There are four individual puddings in each can, and they come out in flat circular form when the can is opened. The directions for using them are refreshingly simple. "Heat in cups in oven," they say, "—serve hot with hard sauce or whipped cream."

If you have ever made Brown Betty Pudding yourself, imagine the time and labor saved when all you have to do about it is to heat it a few minutes in the oven and serve it. Even the hard sauce or whipped cream are not necessary. The puddings come out moist and fresh, and one housewife found them very good served with a simple custard sauce.

A Modern Idyl

In these days when domestic help is so hard to get that prospective employers hesitate to ask that time-honored question: "What desserts can you make?" it will be a distinct help to housewives to have a tasty dessert on tap and immediately available, no matter what the vagaries of her cook.

The other standard question: "Can you make cream soups?" was solved long ago by the excellent cream soups that come in cans, but here is help for the other end of the meal which many hostesses will appreciate.

Is the time approaching when housewives will be able to lead that idyllic existence so often pictured in fiction stories when all you have to do is to lie down under a tree and let the breadfruit drop in your mouth?

Council Meeting

A communication from the mayor, F. A. Rinkel, stated that he had re-appointed Carl B. Larson as a member of the cemetery board; Mr. Larson's term expired this year. A letter from Wm. Douville, president of the WPA asking that the people be given an opportunity to vote on whether or not they want a Water and Light commisison was laid over until the next regular election. The League of Minnesota Municipalities sent an invitation to the council members to send a representative to the convention to be held in Mankato June 5th, 6th and 7th; no action was taken in choosing delegates.

An extension of electrical service to include about a dozen dwellings north of the Pennington County Fairgrounds was askfor in a petition signed by residents of that district. A motion was made to investigate the feasibility of the plan.

Building permits were granted to Chris Kirk, Gustafson & Sons, P. J. Bingheim (two) one for a dwelling and the other for a Phillips 66 gasoline station on the N.E. corner of third st. and Horace ave. Permits to remodel dwellings were granted to A. B. Stenberg, Fred Will, A. Haugen, C. E. Johnson and S. Benson.

Payment of the following bills was authorized: $1000 for two lots acquired by condemnation just south of the auditorium; $100 into the mayor's contingent fund; payment of $550 for the fire hose; $300 to the Memorial Day fund to be placed at the disposal of the City Band; and the payment of $538 to the Crane Co. for the water main which was laid on Dewey Avenue. The city council granted the Boy Scouts the privilege of erecting a cabin on Johnson street to be known as the Boy Scouts' Cabin. The plans submitted by the highway department for the parkway were approved by the council.

Bids were called for to buy fire-proof shutters for the north and west windows of the power house and for a three-inch concrete floating slab to be installed on the oil shed near the power house. Alderman Griebstein cited the danger to the plant if the elevator near the plant should catch on fire as an argument in favor of the purchase of the shutters.

The fifteen lots which Andrew Ness has been using to pile the dismantled frames of automobiles on is to be taken out of the hands of Mr. Ness by O. L. Ihle. These lots have over $1129.25 in delinquent taxes against them which Mr. Ihle offered to take over for $150. He agreed at the same time to remove all the junk which has been piled there for a number of years.

After discussing the bond issue election the council appointed Ole Legold and Theo. Quale to act as spokesmen for that body at meetings.

LOCAL BOY PROMOTED TO SHELTERBELT ASSISTANT

Word has been received that Arnold Mickelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mickelson of this city, who received a government position some time ago as foreman on the shelterbelt, has been promoted to shelterbelt assistant.

Council Fails to Appear At W. P. A. Meet Mon.

more equipment be purchased, and the plan submitted by the council is to raise it by a bond issue.

W. E. Dahlquist, editor of the Times, was asked to state his opinion on the bond issue. He brought out the fact that the output of the plant has increased 100 per cent during the past ten years and that it is only a matter of time until the city would be facing a shortage of power. He said that the issue now is different than that of two years ago in that two years ago it was a mater of "stand-by" power and now it is a matter of "additional power." He also stated that regardless of what the city council did in this case it would be wrong to many people, "as is always the case with any purchase made by any council." The sewage disposal plant has no rightful place in this argument, Mr. Dahlquist said, as the city is obliged in this case to give the residents a reasonable service from the municipal plant, and the lack of a disposal plant would cause no particular hardship on the citizens of this community.

Mayor Rinkel quoted from a leter he had received from Wm. Carey, of the S.E.R.A., in which he stated that he had been informed by Secretary Ickes that applications for loans and grants for public works would be taken. Mayor Rinkel assured the audience that the council would take advantage of any grant or loan at lowest rates of interest that they could get. D. F. O'Neil, former state senator from this district, was present and asked permission to speak to the group on the bonds of the city. He stated that the credit of the city of Thief River Falls is considered very good and that the bonds of the city have gone up 12 points during the past year. The city should be able to borrow money at a low rate of interest, Mr. O'Neil said.

H. W. Kinghorn asked if the bond payment would have the first call on the earnings of the light plant, which was answered in the affirmative by Theo. Quale, city attorney; Mr. Kinhorn then stated that if a bond issue was the only way to finance the purchase of a diesel unit then a bond issue should be floated.

C. E. Hellquist, when asked to speak, commended Mr. Dahlquist on his admission that he was wrong two years ago when he opposed the purchase of additional power equipment; he took the same stand in regards to the bond issue as did Mr. Kinghorn. "It is an absurdity to float bonds up to $60,000 which would bear interest for the next fifteen years when the earnings of the plant for two years would pay for an engine costing that amount," Mr. Fred Forsberg said.

R. M. Aalbu, announced by the chairman as a representative of labor, stated that we seem to be faced with a peculiar proposition inasmuch as the council, while asking permission to spend $60,000 of city money, had failed to show up to explain the proposed expenditure. He was not versed in propounding legal questions, he said, but he felt that the question should state what the council expects to buy with the money if they get it. Under the question as stated the public can not know whether they will buy an engine or use the funds to defray the cost of another "Viebahn." He pointed out that the bond issue would draw interest at the rate of 4½ per cent over a period of 15 years and contrasted this with the proposition under which the council of two years ago proposed, which was a debt of $38,000 at 5 per cent after the federal grant had been applied to the proposed expenditure of $53,000. This $38,000 would have been paid off in five years, he said. "I am not a new convert to the idea of acquiring more power equipment," he said. "I am affiliated with the same political group as Mr. Hellquist and our group was severely defeated in the election eighteen months ago. We were soundly and roundly spanked because we had the temerity to suggest that the city of Thief River Falls was outgrowing its present power equipment and should provide more. I still think so, and if it must cost $60,000 we should still get it, but it seems to me that we should first attempt to get a federal grant to defray part of the cost. At any rate I believe that we should know what we are asked to vote on," Mr. Aalbu said.

ing for the office of library directors. In aldermanic contests the Farmer-Laborites were successful in almost every instance. Incumbent Farmer-Labor aldermen were far in the lead while incumbents of the conservative variety in several cases were trailing their F-L opponents. Even in the conservative wards candidates supported by the Farmer-Labor Association were successful in obtaining nomination and made a showing far out of comparison with any previous record in such contests.

Scandinavians Support Irish

As an illustration of how the working people went down the line for their candidates, disregarding nationality and religion, the outcome in the aldermanic contest in the twelfth ward is an apt one. Michael J. Foley, Farmer-Labor endorsee, distanced David Blomberg, conservative incumbent by a vote of 4,861 to 2,949. The ward is overwhelmingly Scandinavian, yet this fact did not prevent Foley, an Irishman, from getting the full labor vote. The same is true in the seventh ward where Owen Cunningham, another Irishman, led the field for the office of alderman by a vote of 3,147 to 2,021 for Wm. A. Hoppe, conservative incumbent.

That Latimer has all but a cinch to be elected mayor over Charles F. Keyes in the final election is conceded by every political prognosticator in Mineapolis. He is immune to the kind of attack that is only too frequently resorted to by reactionaries in political campaigns. Issues wil ltherefore have to be discussed and such being the case Latimer will have all the advantage on his side.

Election June 10

The same can be said of other candidates endorsed by the Farmer-Labor Association for city-wide and aldermanic offices. It looks like all but a clean sweep in the election on June 10.

Though the Farmer-Labor victory was due in the main to the excellent organization that the party possesses in Minneapolis. It is also true that the party strength was greatly augmented by Governor Floyd B. Olson's veto of the infamous sales tax proposal. The workers and small business people have come to realize that the conservatives who talk glibly during the campaigns of their friendship for the common are in reality just servants of big business when the test comes.

Sentiment Changed in State

And as sentiment has changed in Minneapolis so it has changed and is changing among the people on the farms and in the smaller cities and villages of the state. I would suggest to Messrs. Rockne, McKenzie, Dunn, et al, to watch their step or Minnesota will witness an even greater overturn in the election in November, 1936, than the one which has just taken place in Minnesota's chief metropolis.

The specific complaint against Mr. Kaplan was that he had sold sugar at less than code prices. In reply Mr. Kaplan stated among other things: "Permit us to state that if the government of the United States believes it to be conducive to public welfare to penalize this establishment for retailing foodstuffs below prevailing conventional prices, then it seems to us that the sooner the consuming public get busy and demand of Congress and the President of the United States, that any and every code which has bearing upon "holding up" commodity prices shall be stricken from the NRA program. It is decidedly indefensible from any angle one may look at it to expect the consumers as a class to pay tribute in the way of higher prices to any merchant just because there are some men in business who are trying to save themselves from extinction at the expense of the great mass of the common people."

"Had the complaint against us been that of an attempt to raise prices by pooling with other merchants for that purpose, there would be more reasonable justification for the government to step in and call a halt. . . ."

"In conclusion," Mr. Kaplan says, in closing his letter, "we would like very much to know from you just exactly what punishment would be meted out to us if we decided to make a test case of this matter and base our position upon constitutional grounds."

It is noteworthy that the NRA enforcement officer did not press the matter further.

"In bringing Mr. Kaplan here to address the people," the chairman of the Farmer-Labor club entertainment and program committee said, "We are presenting the first of what we hope will be a long list of prominent platform men representing all branches of progressive thought along the lines of Sociology, Economics and Political science. Mr. Kaplan is an exceptional orator and whether one agrees with him or not, he is well worth hearing. It is significant that the stalemate that the country has fallen into, was foretold by Mr. Kaplan speaking from a soapbox on a street corner in this city twenty years ago. He represents a school of thought which the American people may well give careful consideration before starting out on the next great national stampede."

The business session of the club will be called to order promptly at eight o'clock, A. G. Anderson, president of the organization, stated this week, in order that it may be out of the way and Mr. Kaplan's address be started at 8:30 o'clock. There is no admission charge and the public is heartily invited to attend the meeting. A special invitation is extended to the businessmen of the city, as Mr. Kaplan has a message that will particularly interest them, it was stated.

R. L. Falls Plans Crow Hunt for Sunday, May 19

A crow-hunt has been arranged for the Red Lake county crow hunters to be held next Sunday, May 19th, according to Walter Hinze, chairman of the crow hunters organization.

Two teams have been selected from the county, the west side team to be captained by Wm. Bristow and the east side team by Emil Malwitz; each team to have not more than 25 members.

The losing side in the contest is to fete the others with a dance and free lunch. Crows, hawks and owls and their eggs will be counted but it will be necessary to show the whole bird in order to receive credit for them, the rules state. "The first guy to get sore is to be put in jail for 24 hours," according to a motion made by Archie Marcott, which was carried unanimously.

Those interested in getting into the crow-hunt are urged to get in touch with either of the captains as soon as possible.

Just Tossed Them Aside

Oliver was careless about his personal effects. When mother saw clothing scattered about on chair and floor she inquired: "Who didn't hang up his clothes when he went to bed?"

A muffled voice from under the blankets murmured, "Adam."

Another Time Saving Treat

BROWN BETTY PUDDING is a new product in cans which has just been offered to housewives under a popular brand by a nationally known distributor. The pudding is a mixture of apples, bread, raisins and shortening seasoned with spices and sugar.

There are four individual puddings in each can, and they come out in flat circular form when the can is opened. The directions for using them are refreshingly simple. "Heat in cups in oven," they say, "—serve hot with hard sauce or whipped cream."

If you have ever made Brown Betty Pudding yourself, imagine the time and labor saved when all you have to do about it is to heat it a few minutes in the oven and serve it. Even the hard sauce or whipped cream are not necessary. The puddings come out moist and fresh, and one housewife found them very good served with a simple custard sauce.

A Modern Idyl

In these days when domestic help is so hard to get that prospective employers hesitate to ask that time-honored question: "What desserts can you make?" it will be a distinct help to housewives to have a tasty dessert on tap and immediately available, no matter what the vagaries of her cook.

The other standard question: "Can you make cream soups?" was solved long ago by the excellent cream soups that come in cans, but here is help for the other end of the meal which many hostesses will appreciate.

Is the time approaching when housewives will be able to lead that idyllic existence so often pictured in fiction stories when all you have to do is to lie down under a tree and let the breadfruit drop in your mouth?*

Council Meeting

A communication from the mayor, F. A. Rinkel, stated that he had re-appointed Carl B. Larson as a member of the cemetery board; Mr. Larson's term expired this year. A letter from Wm. Douville, president of the WPA asking that the people be given an opportunity to vote on whether or not they want a Water and Light commisison was laid over until the next regular election. The League of Minnesota Municipalities sent an invitation to the council members to send a representative to the convention to be held in Mankato June 5th, 6th and 7th; no action was taken in choosing delegates.

An extension of electrical service to include about a dozen dwellings north of the Pennington County Fairgrounds was asked for in a petition signed by residents of that district. A motion was made to investigate the feasibility of the plan.

Building permits were granted to Chris Kirk, Gustafson & Sons, P. J. Bingheim (two) one for a dwelling and the other for a Phillips 66 gasoline station on the N.E. corner of third st. and Horace ave. Permits to remodel dwellings were granted to A. B. Stenberg, Fred Will, A. Haugen, C. E. Johnson and S. Benson.

Payment of the following bills was authorized: $1000 for two lots acquired by condemnation just south of the auditorium; $100 to the mayor's contingent fund; payment of $650 for the fire hose; $300 to the Memorial Day fund to be placed at the disposal of the City Band; and the payment of $538 to the Crane Co. for the water main which was laid on Dewey Avenue. The city council granted the Boy Scouts the privilege of erecting a cabin on Johnson street to be known as the Boy Scouts' Cabin. The plans submitted by the highway department for the parkway were approved by the council.

Bids were called for to buy fire-proof shutters for the north and west windows of the power house and for a three-inch concrete roofing slab to be installed on the oil shed near the power house. Alderman Griebstein cited the danger to the plant if the elevator near the plant should catch on fire as an argument in favor of the purchase of the shutters.

The fifteen lots which Andrew Ness has been using to pile the dismantled frames of automobiles on is to be taken out of the hands of Mr. Ness by O. L. Ihle. These lots have over $1129.25 in delinquent taxes against them which Mr. Ihle offered to take over for $150. He agreed at the same time to remove all the junk which has been piled there for a number of years.

After discussing the bond issue election the council appointed Ole Legold and Theo. Quale to act as spokesmen for that body at meetings.

LOCAL BOY PROMOTED TO SHELTERBELT ASSISTANT

Word has been received that Arnold Mickelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mickelson of this city, who received a government position some time ago as foreman on the shelterbelt, has been promoted to shelterbelt assistant.

Council Fails to Appear At W. P. A. Meet Mon.

more equipment be purchased, and the plan submitted by the council is to raise it by a bond issue.

W. E. Dahlquist, editor of the Times, was asked to state his opinion on the bond issue. He brought out the fact that the output of the plant has increased 100 per cent during the past ten years and that it is only a matter of time until the city would be facing a shortage of power. He said that the issue now is different than that of two years ago in that two years ago it was a mater of "stand-by" power and now it is a matter of "additional power." He also stated that regardless of what the city council did in this case it would be wrong to many people, "as is always the case with any purchase made by any council." The sewage disposal plant has no rightful place in this argument, Mr. Dahlquist said, as the city is obliged in this case to give the residents a reasonable service from the municipal plant, and the lack of a disposal plant would cause no particular hardship on the citizens of this community.

Mayor Rinkel quoted from a leter he had received from Wm. Carey, of the S.E.R.A., in which he stated that he had been informed by Secretary Ickes that applications for loans and grants for public works would be taken. Mayor Rinkel assured the audience that the council would take advantage of any grant or loan at lowest rates of interest that they could get. D. F. O'Neil, former state senator from this district, was present and asked permission to speak to the group on the bonds of the city. He stated that the credit of the city of Thief River Falls is considered very good and that the bonds of the city have gone up 12 points during the past year. The city should be able to borrow money at a low rate of interest, Mr. O'Neil said.

H. W. Kinghorn asked if the bond payment would have the first call on the earnings of the light plant, which was answered in the affirmative by Theo. Quale, city attorney; Mr. Kinhorn then stated that if a bond issue was the only way to finance the purchase of a diesel unit then a bond issue should be floated.

C. E. Hellquist, when asked to speak, commended Mr. Dahlquist on his admission that he was wrong two years ago when he opposed the purchase of additional power equipment; he took the same stand in regards to the bond issue as did Mr. Kinghorn. "It is an absurdity to float bonds up to $60,000 which would bear interest for the next fifteen years when the earnings of the plant for the next fifteen years would pay for an engine costing that amount," Mr. Fred Forsberg said.

R. M. Aalbu, announced by the chairman as a representative of labor, stated that we seem to be faced with a peculiar proposition inasmuch as the council, while asking permission to spend $60,000 of city money, had failed to show up to explain the proposed expenditure. He was not versed in propounding legal questions, he said, but he felt that the question should state what the council expects to buy with the money if they get it. Under the question as stated the public can not know whether they will buy an engine or use the funds to defray the cost of another "Viebahn." He pointed out that the bond issue would draw interest at the rate of 4½ per cent over a period of 15 years and contrasted this with the proposition which the council of two years ago proposed, which was a debt of $38,000 at 5 per cent after the federal grant had been applied to the proposed expenditure of $53,000. This $38,000 would have been paid off in five years, he said. "I am not a new convert to the idea of acquiring more power equipment," he said. "I am affiliated with the same political group as Mr. Hellquist and our group was severely defeated in the election eighteen months ago. We were soundly and roundly spanked because we had the temerity to suggest that the city of Thief River Falls was outgrowing its present power equipment and should provide more. I still think so, and if it must cost $60,000 we should still get it but it seems to me that we should first attempt to get a federal grant to defray part of the cost. At any rate I believe that we should know what we are asked to vote on," Mr. Aalbu said.

Labor Wins in Mpls.

ing for the office of library directors. In aldermanic contests the Farmer-Laborites were sucecssful in almost every instance. Incumbent Farmer-Labor aldermen were far in the lead while incumbents of the conservative variety in several cases were trailing their F-L opponents. Even in the conservative wards candidates supported by the Farmer-Labor Association were successful in obtaining nomination and made a showing far out of comparison with any previous record in such contests.

Scandinavians Support Irish

As an illustration of how the working people went down the line for their candidates, disregarding nationality and religion, the outcome in the aldermanic contest in the twelfth ward is an apt one. Michael J. Foley, Farmer-Labor endorsee, distanced David Blomberg, conservative incumbent by a vote of 4,861 to 2,949. The ward is overwhelmingly Scandinavian, yet this fact did not prevent Foley, an Irishman, from getting the full labor vote. The same is true in the seventh ward where Owen Cunningham, another Irishman, led the field for the office of alderman by a vote of 3,147 to 2,021 for Wm. A. Hoppe, conservative incumbent.

That Latimer has all but a cinch to be elected mayor over Charles F. Keyes in the final election is conceded by every political prognosticator in Minneapolis. He is immune to the kind of attack that is only too frequently resorted to by reactionaries in political campaigns. Issues wil ltherefore have to be discussed and such being the case Latimer will have all the advantage on his side.

Election June 10

The same can be said of other candidates endorsed by the Farmer-Labor Association for city-wide and aldermanic offices. It looks like all but a clean sweep in the election on June 10.

Though the Farmer-Labor victory was due in the main to the excellent organization that the party possesses in Minneapolis, it is also true that the party strength was greatly augmented by Governor Floyd B. Olson's veto of the infamous sales tax proposal. The workers and small business people have come to realize that the conservatives who talk glibly during the campaigns of their friendship for the common are in reality just servants of big business when the test comes.

Sentiment Changed in State

And as sentiment has changed in Minneapolis so it has changed and is changing among the people on the farms and in the smaller cities and villages of the state. I would suggest to Messrs. Rockne, McKenzie, Dunn, et al, to watch their step or Minnesota will witness an even greater overturn in the election in November, 1936, than the one which has just taken place in Minnesota's chief metropolis.

The specific complaint against Mr. Kaplan was that he had sold sugar at less than code prices. In reply Mr. Kaplan wrote as follows: "Permit us to state that if the government of the United States believes it to be conducive to public welfare to penalize this establishment for retailing foodstuffs below prevailing conventional prices, then it seems to us that the sooner the consuming public get busy and demand of Congress and the President of the United States, that any and every code which has bearing upon 'holding up' commodity prices shall be stricken from the NRA program. It is decidedly indefensible from any angle one may look at it to expect the consumers as a class to pay tribute in the way of higher prices to any merchant just because there are some men in business who are trying to save themselves from extinction at the expense of the great mass of the common people."

"Had the complaint against us been that of an attempt to raise prices by pooling with other merchants for that purpose, there would be more reasonable justification for the government to step in and call a halt. . . ."

"In conclusion," Mr. Kaplan says, in closing his letter, "we would like very much to know from you just exactly what punishment would be meted out to us if we decided to make a test case of this matter and base our position upon constitutional grounds."

It is noteworthy that the NRA enforcement officer did not press the matter further.

"In bringing Mr. Kaplan here to address the people," the chairman of the Farmer-Labor club entertainment and program committee said, "We are presenting the first of what we hope will be a long list of prominent platform men representing all branches of progressive thought along the lines of Sociology, Economics and Political science. Mr. Kaplan is an exceptional orator and whether one agrees with him or not, he is well worth hearing. It is significant that the stalemate that the country has fallen into, was foretold by Mr. Kaplan speaking from a soapbox on a street corner in this city twenty years ago. He represents a school of thought which the American people may well give careful consideration before starting out on the next great national stampede."

The business session of the club will be called to order promptly at eight o'clock, A. G. Anderson, president of the organization, stated this week, in order that it may be out of the way and Mr. Kaplan's address be started at 8:30 o'clock. There is no admission charge and the public is heartily invited to attend the meeting. A special invitation is extended to the businessmen of the city, as Mr. Kaplan has a message that will particularly interest them, it was stated.

Just Tossed Them Aside

Oliver was careless about his personal effects. When mother saw clothing scattered about on chair and floor she inquired: "Who didn't hang up his clothes when he went to bed?"

A muffled voice from under the blankets murmured, "Adam."

Another Time Saving Treat

BROWN BETTY PUDDING is a new product in cans which has just been offered to housewives under a popular brand by a nationally known distributor. The pudding is a mixture of apples, bread, raisins and shortening seasoned with spices and sugar.

There are four individual puddings in each can, and they come out in flat circular form when the can is opened. The directions for using them are refreshingly simple. "Heat in cups in oven," they say, "—serve hot with hard sauce or whipped cream."

If you have ever made Brown Betty Pudding yourself, imagine the time and labor saved when all you have to do about it is to heat it a few minutes in the oven and serve it. Even the hard sauce or whipped cream are not necessary. The puddings come out moist and fresh, and one housewife found them very good served with a simple custard sauce.

A Modern Idyl

In these days when domestic help is so hard to get that prospective employers hesitate to ask that time-honored question: "What desserts can you make?" it will be a distinct help to housewives to have a tasty dessert on tap and immediately available, no matter what the vagaries of her cook.

The other standard question: "Can you make cream soups?" was solved long ago by the excellent cream soups that come in cans, but here is help for the other end of the meal which many hostesses will appreciate.

Is the time approaching when housewives will be able to lead that idyllic existence so often pictured in fiction stories when all you have to do is to lie down under a tree and let the breadfruit drop in your mouth?

MEMORIAL DAY PROCLAMATION

As Memorial Day approaches we should be mindful that peace has its heroes no less than war. War has long monopolized the historic scene. Marching men, flying flags and banners, bands playing martial music have too long absorbed attention and occupied the forefront of history.

In its one hundred and fifty-nine years of existence, this Country has had six major wars and has resorted to arms on ninety-four other occasions. Beneath each of these conflicts lie the graves of dauntless dead. If these heroes who knew weary marches, the tragedy of gory fields, of intolerable pain and anguish could speak, we believe their first concern would be to have war ended and peace made more secure in the world.

A generation whose existence is frustrated and made tragic in the aftermath of one of the largest and most deadly wars of history does not need to be told the dreadful cost of armed conflict which in the end brings universal defeat and leaves both victor and vanquished prostrate. It is high time that war be no longer idealized. It is time that war be shorn of its glamour and known for what it is—the worst enemy of mankind and of human welfare.

In the vision of the new history it is now seen that progress has rarely issued out of war. Armed conflict always takes its cruel toll, and generally results in retrogression and in degeneration. Human progress blossoms from the fields of peace and is nurtured best by the orderly processes of industry, trade, science and education.

The heroes of peace are many, although for the most part their services are unheralded and unsung. The so-called common men who go down into the deep mines, dig sewers, lay roads and sidewalks, or rivet steel beams together high in air, the so-called common men who man our factories, direct the engines and the dynamos, the men who till the fields, labor in our laboratories and seek to know the secrets of science, are heroes—every one. The women too, who maintain homes, rear families, work in shops, offices and factories, and take their places as intelligent, reliable citizens in the modern world, are heroines.

That the heroes of peace may be acclaimed as are the heroes of war, I, Floyd B. Olson, Governor of Minnesota, do hereby designate

THURSDAY, MAY 30, 1935, as MEMORIAL DAY

Upon this day let us remember and honor not only heroic soldiers and sailors, but heroic toilers, scientists, educators, inventors, poets, artists, writers, philanthropists and statesmen. Let us visit not only the memorials and final resting places of national heroes but of their mothers, fathers and friends. Upon this sacred day let us pay homage to the heroes of peace as well as to those of war. Above all, upon this day, let every citizen make his thoughts pilgrims to the shrine of peace, to the end that war may no more take its toll of human life, nor destroy civilization itself.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be hereto affixed this 20th day of May, 1935.

FLOYD B. OLSON,
Governor of Minnesota.

Attest: Mike Holm, Secretary of State.

SUBS CAMPAIGN ENTERS INTO ITS SECOND PERIOD

Shorter Second Period Spurs Candidates to Greater Efforts this Week

SUCCESSFUL 1st PERIOD ENDED ON WEDNESDAY

Vote Schedule Takes a Big Drop. Another Big Drop June Fifth

The Forum's "Good Will" Subscription Campaign enters the second of its four periods. There has been a big drop in the vote earning power of subscriptions and there will be another at the close of this period and likewise until the close of the campaign, at which time a subscription will earn less than one-third as many votes as it did during the first period.

The first period of the campaign was very successful with a great number of subscriptions added to our already large subscription list. The periods to follow promise to be even larger than the one just past.

The campaign is becoming a very interesting one with many of the candidates closely matched for one of the three grand prizes. Who will the winners be? You know as much about that as we do. But from now until the close of the campaign, June 22nd, it behooves every candidate to do their very best. Every worker will have to do all they can, some to hold the average they obtained during the first period and others to make up for time that was lost during the early part of the drive. Almost any one of the enrolled candidates may be the winner of the first prize. Those that are not on top of the list this week will have to enter the work with a new determination and persistence and by so doing they may better their position considerably before the next issue goes to press.

Those of you who have overloked the big drop in subscription votes and did not get your subscription votes cast for your favorite condidate before the close of the first period, send in your subscription today so that favorite candidate can get your credits before the next big drop in subscription credits on June 5th.

Subscriptions may be left at or mailed to the Campaign Dept., The Forum, and the worker for whom you designate the credits will receive full and proper credit..

The workers as a whole ask you to help them in this respect, and in getting your subscription in before the close of the second period.

RIVER CONGRESS FAVORS R. RIVER CONSER. PROJECT

Big Fork Little Fork Diver. Project is Declared Meritorious

A communication from the National Rivers and Harbors secretary to the Forum this week states that the Rivers and Harbors congres sat its recent convention, upon the recommendation of the Projects committee, voted unanimously to endorse the Red Lake River Water Conservation Project. According to the secretary this means that the committee believes that altho the project is not sufficiently advanced in status to warrant its present endorsement, it is meritorious and open for further consideration by the committee.

Group Votes Unanimously to Join Independent Union Of All Workers

The pending vote on the flotation of $60,000 in city bonds for the city water and light department took up the major part of the discussion at the meeting of the Workmen's Protective association on Monday evening. The issue was analyzed from the standpoint of the people who must foot the interest payments and the group went on record opposing the issuance of the bonds and thru a resolution set forth their objections and suggestions of a proposition to which they would be willing to give their wholehearted support.

The association voted to affiliate itself with the Independent Union of all Workers and passed a resolution requesting membership and a charter for a local union. Chairman W. J. Douville stated it is the intention of the Workmen to organize all workers in the city, including restaurant workers, garage workers, truck drivers and store clerks and other white collar workers.

The meeting was adjourned early and the group went to the auditorium where the Civic and Commerce association was conducting a mass meeting on the proposed bond issue. President Douville appointed R. A crowd of approximately 150 people gathered at the auditorium Monday evening to hear the discussion of the coming special election which will be held next Tuesday. The meeting was called by the Civic and Commerce Association of Thief River Falls.

Men who spoke in behalf of the bond issue were: Theo. Quale, E. M. Bennes, W. Mann, E. L. Hess and Paul Lundgren. Those voicing an opinion against the feasibility of the bond issue were R. M. Aalbu and P. A. Harris.

No additional light was given at the meeting on what the council intends to have the voters vote on other than whether or not they should be authorized to issue up to $60,000 in bonds at not more than 4½ per cent interest, to spend on the power plant.

Towards the end of the meeting the Workmens' Protective Association joined the meeting in a body, coming from their own meeting which was held in the court house the same evening.

Mr. Harris spoke in favor of the "conditional sales" contract and attempted to show how such a contract would cost the city less than a bond issue would. R. M. Aalbu was authorized to speak in behalf of the W.P.A. The views of the association are embodied in a resolution found in another column.

MEMORIAL DAY PROCLAMATION

As Memorial Day approaches we should be mindful that peace has its heroes no less than war. War has long monopolized the historic scene. Marching men, flying flags and banners, bands playing martial music have too long absorbed attention and occupied the forefront of history.

In its one hundred and fifty-nine years of existence, this Country has had six major wars and has resorted to arms on ninety-four other occasions. Beneath each of these conflicts lie the graves of dauntless dead. If these heroes who knew weary marches, the tragedy of gory fields, of intolerable pain and anguish could speak, we believe their first concern would be to have war ended and peace made more secure in the world.

A generation whose existence is frustrated and made tragic in the aftermath of one of the largest and most deadly wars of history does not need to be told the dreadful cost of armed conflict which in the end brings universal defeat and leaves both victor and vanquished prostrate. It is high time that war be no longer idealized. It is time that war be shorn of its glamour and known for what it is—the worst enemy of mankind and of human welfare.

In the vision of the new history it is now seen that progress has rarely issued out of war. Armed conflict always takes its cruel toll, and generally results in retrogression and in degeneration. Human progress blossoms from the fields of peace and is nurtured best by the orderly processes of industry, trade, science and education.

The heroes of peace are many, although for the most part their services are unheralded and unsung. The so-called common men who go down into the deep mines, dig sewers, lay roads and sidewalks, or rivet steel beams together high in air, the so-called common men who man our factories, direct the engines and the dynamos, the men who till the fields, labor in our laboratories and seek to know the secrets of science, are heroes—every one. The women too, who maintain homes, rear families, work in shops, offices and factories, and take their places as intelligent, reliable citizens in the modern world, are heroines.

That the heroes of peace may be acclaimed as are the heroes of war, I, Floyd B. Olson, Governor of Minnesota, do hereby designate

THURSDAY, MAY 30, 1935, as MEMORIAL DAY

Upon this day let us remember and honor not only heroic soldiers and sailors, but heroic toilers, scientists, educators, inventors, poets, artists, writers, philanthropists and statesmen. Let us visit not only the memorials and final resting places of national heroes but of their mothers, fathers and friends. Upon this sacred day let us pay homage to the heroes of peace as well as to those of war. Above all, upon this day, let every citizen make his thoughts pilgrims to the shrine of peace, to the end that war may no more take its toll of human life, nor destroy civilization itself.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be hereto affixed this 20th day of May, 1935.

FLOYD B. OLSON,
Governor of Minnesota.

SUBS CAMPAIGN ENTERS INTO ITS SECOND PERIOD

Shorter Second Period Spurs Candidates to Greater Efforts this Week

SUCCESSFUL 1st PERIOD ENDED ON WEDNESDAY

Vote Schedule Takes a Big Drop. Another Big Drop June Fifth

The Forum's "Good Will" Subscription Campaign enters the second of its four periods. There has been a big drop in the vote earning power of subscriptions and there will be another at the close of this period and likewise until the close of the campaign, at which time a subscription will earn less than one-third as many votes as it did during the first period.

The first period of the campaign was very successful with a great number of subscriptions added to our already large subscription list. The periods to follow promise to be even larger than the one just past.

The campaign is becoming a very interesting one with many of the candidates closely matched for one of the three grand prizes. Who will the winners be? You know as much about that as we do. But from now until the close of the campaign, June 22nd, it behooves every candidate to do their very best. Every worker will have to do all they can, some to hold the average they obtained during the first period and others to make up for time that was lost during the early part of the drive. Almost any one of the enrolled candidates may be the winner of the first prize. Those that are not on top of the list this week will have to enter the work with a new determination and persistence and by so doing they may better their position considerably before the next issue goes to press.

Those of you who have overloked the big drop in subscription votes and did not get your subscription votes cast for your favorite condidate before the close of the first period, send in your subscription today so that favorite candidate can get your credits before the next big drop in subscription credits on June 5th.

Subscriptions may be left at or mailed to the Campaign Dept., The Forum, and the worker for whom you designate the credits will receive full and proper credit.

The workers as a whole ask you to help them in this respect, and in getting your subscription in before the close of the second period.

Big Fork Little Fork Diver. Project is Declared Meritorious

A communication from the National Rivers and Harbors secretary to the Forum this week states that the Rivers and Harbors congres sat its recent convention, upon the recommendation of the Projects committee, voted unanimously to endorse the Red Lake River Water Conservation Project. The Thief River Falls Giants swamped the Park Rapids aggregation 8 to 1 in a slow opening game last Sunday in a game that was mostly outstanding by the quality displayed by the local bunch of stickers. Heiberg on the mound for the Giants worked under a blanket and only in one inning when he retired the side with ten straight pitches, none of which was even dented by the batters, did he extend himself at all. He works easy and has a fine delivery, oodles of speed, a good change of gait and his fast one is just too fast for the ordinary batter. It arrives a few seconds before the bat gets around.

Group Votes Unanimously to Join Independent Union Of All Workers

The pending vote on the flotation of $60,000 in city bonds for the city water and light department took up the major part of the discussion at the meeting of the Workmen's Protective association on Monday evening. The issue was analyzed from the standpoint of the people who must foot the interest payments and the group went on record opposing the issuance of the bonds and thru a resolution set forth their objections and suggestions of a proposition to which they would be willing to give their wholehearted support.

The association voted to affiliate itself with the Independent Union of all Workers and passed a resolution requesting membership and a charter for a local union. Chairman W. J. Douville stated it is the intention of the Workmen to organize all workers in the city, including restaurant workers, garage workers, truck drivers and store clerks and other white collar workers.

The meeting was adjourned early and the group went to the auditorium where the Civic and Commerce association was conducting a mass meeting on the proposed bond issue. President Douville appointed R. M. Aalbu to represent the Workmen as a spokesman to present their views on the bond issue, due to the fact that he was himself scheduled to go to work

Production Credit Assn. Cooperating in the Rural Better Housing Program

Washington, D. C., May 20.—Production Credit Associations in regions as far apart as South Carolina, California, and Wisconsin, are showing interest in the rural better housing program and are co-operating in the extension of modernization credit to farmers, the Federal Housing Administration announced today.

Credit is being extended according to the regulations of the regulations of the associations, it was stated, which differ in several respects from the similar financial service offered by commercial banks and other financial institutions approved by the Federal Housing Administration.

For instance, the production associations can extend credit for modernization only for improvements upon dwellings. This advance of cash can be for a period of not longer than 18 months, although there can be an understanding for renewal for a similar period at the expiration of the first 18 months. In addition to the insurance, collateral security such as a chattel mortgage usually is required.

Nearly 400 out of the 562 production credit associations have signed the contract of insurance with the Federal Housing Administration under which they can offer modernization credit.

In South Carolina, Ernest Graham, president of the Production Credit Corporation of Columbia, has issued a bulletin to all the Production Credit Associations in the four states of his district, calling attention to the desire of the corporation to have all associations co-operate to the fullest extent.

"We are confident," he states in this bulletin, "that you understand it is the desire of this corporation that all applications of this type —where there is a good moral risk, sufficient collateral and a definite liquidation plan—be accepted by the associations and submitted promptly to the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank. We therefore ask that applications for housing loans of the character thus mentioned be given the same consideration as are applications for production loans."

Production Credit Asosciations will make many farm building improvement loans in all parts of Wisconsin during the next few months if crop prospects and prices continue good, according to the Federal Housing Administration's farm representative in that territory. Most of the present farm building improvements being made in Wisconsin, the report states, are roofing and painting.

The first Production Credit Association to issue modernization credit, acocrding to the records of the Federal Housing Administration, was that of Fresno, Calif.

Labor's Resistance to Nazi Oppression Grows

Berlin (TIS)—Contrary to enthusiastic Nazi forecasts, May Day, 1935 in Germany has not been a success. For the first time in the history of Hitler's Third Reich the workers displayed a restlessness which was in marked contrast to last year's celebration in which 2,000,000 people participated in Berlin alone.

Discipline cracked everywhere; in Muenchen, Nazi stronghold, even going so far that the refusal of workers to participate forced the cancellation of all outdoor meetings. Underground opposition, especially in Berlin, was also instrumental in keeping so many workrs from these meetings that the threatened reprisals are doomed to failure.

As if to add to the growing disillusionment of the working masses, the assembled hundreds of thousands in Tempelhofer, Feld near Berlin were treated to speeches which were devoid of even the smallest olive branches of economic improvement held out to them in recent weeks. Except glittering generalities and fervent appeals to nationalism, Hitler said nothing that had not been said before, while the long promised declaration of wage increases, or "attainment of a just wage," failed to materialize. In fact, the expected announcements of this kind were cancelled at the last minute at the insistence of the German industrialists. The protests of the employers proved so effective that Hitler had to bow to them. If proof was needed who is in reality ruling Nazi Germany, it is here.

To appease the disappointment of the masess, the leader of the German Labor Front, Dr. Ley, announced that a commission for the study of wages would be set up, and that practical results might be obtainable by next May Day, 1936. The assembled workers, shivering under a snow storm, greeted the announcement with a stony silence.

In the mean time, further reports on the shop council elections tend to clarify the extent of the so-called victory. As has already been reported, the votes cast for the Nazi ticket do not exceed the 70 per cent mark, despite the tremendous pressure upon the workers and the successful combing out of all doubtful voters. Official figures report $6,500,000 valid workers' votes, which is far below the census figure of 1933, giving a total of 14,900,000 industrial and agricultural workers.

Taking the claim of only $2,600,-000 workers unemployed at its face value, and leaving out completely 2,000,000 agricultural workers, the vote of the remaining more than 3,000,000 industrial workers remains a mystery. The number of 70,060 factories and shops in which elections were held is also far below the actual number of German industrial establishments. The workers' vote cast throughout the Reich and mainly in Berlin where the Nazis are frankly disappointed, seems to confirm again the outcome of the Danzig elections which gave the Nazis approximately 60 per cent.

6,000 Racine Workers In Anti-Fascist Parade

Racine, Wisc.—No Fascism is wanted in this city.

That fact was made perfectly clear by 6,000 workers who demonstrated last Saturday against the Fascist threats made earlier in the week by Racine business men and industrialists who threatened to organize vigilantes and take over law enforcement in the city.

The strike is led by the Wisconsin Industrial Union, an independent organization with 8 branches in the city. Saturday this group marched 4,500 workers through the streets in a magnificent display of their solidarity and power. Following the parade the group assembled on the lake front to hear several speakers discuss the situation.

At the same time the parade was held 1,500 members of A. F. of L. unions jammed the city hall to assure Mayor Swoboda of their support of his policy in strikes. William Sommers, president of the Trades Council, told the mayor that more strikes were in the offing, thanks to the reactionary policies of Racine industrialists.

Following this meeting the A. F. of L. members marched as a body to the demonstration on the lake front.

There the crowd listened to speeches by Socialist Alderman Jack Harvey, Herb Katt, manager of the co-operative gas station; Harry Miller of Kenosha, Professor Maynard C. Krueger of the University of Chicago, who is a member of the national executive committee of the Socialist party; Mayor Swoboda, Andrew J. Biemiller, editor of the Wisconsin Leader, and Al Benson, state secretary of the Socialist party. Jack Duller, organizer for the Industrial union, was chairman.

Swoboda assured the throng that so long as picketing was peaceful there would be no interference by the police.

STATE AWAITS RULES ON U. S. ROAD FUNDS

The $10,000,000 of new federal grant funds allotted to Minnesota last week for highway construction and grade crossing elimination is expected to be available for the fiscal year beginning July 1, according to an announcement by the state highway department.

Regulations governing types of work, employment of labor, wages and other details are anticipated soon. When these regulations arrive, the department will immediately submit a program of construction to Washington authorities for their approval. After the program has been approved, the highway department will then ask the State Executive Council to authorize the sale of bonds to finance the state's expense in handling the program. This method of financing was provided by the recent session of the Legislature.

AAA Wheat vote Raises Questionon U S Acreage

If the wheat adjustment program should be discontinued at the end of the 1935 crop year, there is grave danger that United States wheat farmers will overplant to the extent of 8 to 10 million acres in 1936, says Alfred Longren, the chairman of the Pennington county wheat allotment committee.

The question of whether or not the program will be continued will be decided May 25 in a nation-wide wheat growers' referendum.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration has estimated the probable wheat suply and demand situation for 1936 as follows, Mr. Longren continues:

The average amount of wheat used annually in the United States for bread, livestock feeding and seed is about 625,000,000 bushels. With the average yield of 12½ bushels to the planted acre, it is estimated that this country's domestic needs can be supplied with 50 million seeded acres.

Present conditions indicate that an export of 75 to 100 million bushels is as much as can be hoped for and is more than our immediate prospects. This 75 to 100 million bushels can be raised, on the average, on about 6 to 8 million seeded acres.

Domestic needs and foreign outlets combined will probably absorb the normal production of 56 to 58 million acres.

In the base years of the wheat program, when the surplus was piling up, American farmers annually seeded about 66 million acres.

The difference between 66 million acres and 56 or 58 million acres is 8 to 10 million acres, which represents the acreage the farmers would be likely to overplant next year if the adjustment program should be abandoned.

THEORY AND PRACTICE

Cologne (TIS)—German students, who were for years trained by the Nazis to protest and agitate against their teachers and professors are now made to feel that the shoe is on the other foot. According to the organ of the Nazi Teachers Association, students in the Third Reich have no right to criticize their teachers or even less to agitate against them. Now that all teachers are Nazis, the paper says that "The teachers themselves know best what a good educator should be like."

Dragonflies Harm Hens, Mayflies Help Fish

May and June bring special insect problems to folks living on or near Minnesota's lakes, says Dr. Wm. A. Riley, chief of the University Farm division of entomology.

Poultry owners should keep their birds fenced off from lake shores during this season. Wingless dragonflies or "mosquito hawks" will be coming out on the water in great numbers to crawl up on weeds and cast off their old skins, and take on wings. Unless kept away, hens will eat great numbers of these insects. Then, all of a sudden, the birds may stop laying, or their eggs may be soft-shelled or otherwise malformed. Dragonflies commonly have tiny parasitic worms inside them. When a hen eats dragonflies these parasites crawl up into the hen's egg tube, or even into here ovaries, setting up a diseased condition.

About this time of year, also, Mayflies will be collecting around lights, flying into people's faces, and causing no end of annoyance. Folks who would like to see them exterminated should realize that mayflies are one of the principal foods of game fish, especially of the younger fish. Mayflies spend a year or more of their lives in the lakes before they get their wings. The few days' annoyance they cause to resorters is trivial compared with their value in maintaining the game fish on which our tourist and resort business so largely depends, says Dr. Riley.

California Labor Denied License for Radio Station

Small Stations Denied Right To Broadcast President's Fireside Talk

Causing a great stir among labor circles throughout the entire State of California, the application for a construction permit for a radio station for the Metro Broadcasting Co., the Voice of Labor, in East Los Angeles, with studios in the Central Labor Building in Los Angeles, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, was DENIED today by Examiner Ralph L. Walker of the Federal Communications Commission.

This will cause a great deal more excitement due to the fact that the Labor Unions in San Francisco and all over the state of California have endorsed the Metro Broadcasting Co.'s application. The Central Labor Committee has already arranged for call letters and installation of equipment, etc.

Not only have members of organized labor requested the issuance of this broadcasting permit, but practically every Judge in the southern state, together with business men, welfare organizations who are anxious to give public service to some 800,000 working people in and around the city are being ignored.

With the recent communications to the President asking that he open this station on his intended visit to the opening of the San Diego Exposition the end of the month, the Examiner has deprived the radio listening audience of hearing the President on the air.

Just before the President made his speech last Sunday night, one of the minor local stations in Los Angeles called for permission from a major station to rebroadcast the speech, knowing Washington was desirous of having everyone possible, listen to the message.

The National Broadcasting Co., who had the lines for this speech, had no objection to the rebroadcast, but permission must be obtained from the local outlet. The local station was contacted and said, "Absolutely NOT," claiming it was their program and no other station could get that from them in Los Angeles; therefore some 15 to 18 radio stations in Southern California were refused President Roosevelt's speech, and it was only heard by the larger of the national outlets and their subsidiaries.

Perhaps because the Metro Broadcasting Co. made a statement to the fact that for the opening days no commercial programs would be allowed, but the entire time would be devoted to the interest of public service and public benefit, that the recommendation was unfavorable. Perhaps the Examiner wanted many ads so the public would not be able to get marvelous programs and exceptional local talent such as the Voice of Labor would give to the listening audiences.

With the endorsement of a number of American Legion posts, the Federated Church Brotherhoods' endorsement, the Affiliated Teachers' Organization of Los Angeles, and practically every fraternal and charitable organization in Southern California, in view on this situation, the Examiner denied practically 800,000 or more laboring people a right for a radio outlet. At the same time this same Examiner issues a permit to pass and recommend applications for a radio station in Del Monte, California, to Richard Field Lewis and Allen Griffin, WHERE THE POPULATION IS ABOUT FIVE PEOPLE!

Wires are now being sent by all the prominent stations of Southern California to their Senators and to President Green of the American Federation of Labor, and it is believed that only with the cooperation and help of every citizen in southern California, in writing in and getting his friends to write in, that the Commissioners, who are honorable and just, will realize that California and the Voice of Labor need this station and will grant it, regardless of the recommendation by the Examiner.

In face of the fact that the two commisisoners who were recently in Los Angeles, the Hon. Col. Thad Brown, commissioners of the Federal Communications Commission, and the Hon. George Porter, assistant counsel of the Federal Communications Commission, both investigated East Los Angeles, and both felt that there was radio station service needed in that community.

What the German Public Is Not Allowed to Read

Hamburg (TIS)—New secret press instructions of the German Propaganda Ministry issued during the latter part of March contain the following spicy items:

"It is undesirable that German newspapers contain reports concerning the activities of German military instructors and engineers in the Abyssinion army. It is absolutely forbidden to report that the Siemens concern has dispatched 25 engineers to Abyssinia."

"The Darmstadter -- Deutsche Bank intends to close a number of branches in the province as well as in Berlin. No news of it must be printed."

"News that the labor service is used for the completion of certain works in the Wahner Heide, near Cologne, must not be published since these work enterprises are within the so-called militarized zone."

"Neither news nor rumors nor denials must be published concerning plans to reconstruct the German fortifications destroyed under the provisions of the Versailles treaty."

"It is not permitted to report the return of German battleships from the Pacific ocean, nor the anti-German demonstrations at San Francisco during the landing of German marines."

"Publication of reports that during the recent air action over Berlin and the darkening of the city districts intense illegal propaganda took place, especially in the workers' districts, is undesirable."

Farmers Not Bound By AAA Says R.M. Douglas

Farmers voting "yes" in the wheat referendum, May 25, will not be obliged to sign any new wheat adjustment contract which may be offered as a result of this referendum, says R. M. Douglass county agent.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration is taking this vote merely to find out whether or not the majority of farmers would support a program, if one were offered, and not to force the individual farmer to sign a contract, he asserts.

"This is the farmer's one and only opportunity to show whether or not he wants this program," Mr. Douglass continues. "If he fails to vote, and the program should be abandoned, he will have no one but himself to blame for his indifference. Failure to vote will be considered as an unfavorable vote in this referendum."

Details of the new contract have not been fully worked out, but the following provisions will probably be adopted:

1. The contract will run for four years, 1936 to 1939; inclusive, unless ended before that period as hereinafter provided; producers themselves may terminate the contract at the end of any one year by taking a referendum. Such a referendum will be held if 25 percent of the producers in any region ask for it. The contract may be terminated also by the Secretary of Agriculture if a revised plan satisfactory to the majority of contract signers is developed.
2. The required adjustment in any one year will not exceed 25 per cent of the base. The present program provides that as much as 20 per cent adjustment may be asked, but the greatest percentage yet asked for was 15 per cent in 1934.
3. Greater latitude in fixing the base acreage of individual growers will be given the county production control associations to permit adjustments in line with sound farming practices and to adapt the program to unusual farming systems.
4. The base acreage period will be the years 1930 to 1932, inclusive and the base production period, 1928 to 1932, inclusive, as under the first program. Each producer's allotment will remain 54 per cent of his base production.
5. Additional emphasis will be placed on the possibilities of shifting land in drouth and dust-storm areas to grass and soil binding crops.

New York City.—William W. Hanold, an honorably discharged U. S. bluejacket, answered an advertisement appearing in a New York paper in 1872. He obtained a position with H. W. Johns, asbestos pioneer, and now, 63 years later, he's still working for the Johns-Manville Corp., having set what is believed to be a record for continuous employment with one concern. Hanold, a New Yorker, refuses to retire on pension.

New York City.—The motor of an airplane stalled the other day 2000 feet above the skyscrapers of New York. The pilot, Michael Stupelli, realizing that he could not make a forced landing among sky-scrapers, stretched the glide of the plane to the limit in an effort to make a landing in a certain vacant lot in Manhattan. "They sure make wonderful planes these days, you can't hear the engine run," remarked a passenger. Stupelli made talk to keep the passengers from knowing what was actually happening. He talked of his wife, his children, anecdotes of his student days and many other things. He sailed out over the river, realizing that he could not make it to the vacant lot, he talked more to keep the passengers interest centered in himself. With the river 10 feet below the plane he shouted: 'Hang on! Hang on tight!" Stupelli pulled the nose up and pancaked it into the water. "All right," said Stupelli. "Let's crawl out onto the wings or we'll get our feet wet." The plane and passengers were towed ashore by a police launch.

Wildwood, N. J.—The rule of Mrs. Doris W. Bradway, woman mayor of Wildwood, is seriously threatened by the organization of a "gentlemen's auxiliary," led by Richard Gownley. War is being waged between the mayor's group and the Gownley group. The mayor's club of 309 women has held the balance of power in Wildwood. The mayor states, "Let the men form an auxiliary if they want to. We'll humor them. Men are such children, anyway."

"There is one point to which I ask brief attention. It is the effort to place capital on an equal footing with, if not above, labor in the structure of government; it is assumed that labor is available only in connection with capital, that nobody labors unless somebody else owning capital somehow, by the use of it, induces him to labor. Labor is prior to and independent of capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital and deserves much the higher consideration."—Abraham Lincoln.

STAYING OUT OF DEBT BY BORROWING FROM PETER TO PAY PAUL

In an editorial captioned "The Need is Recognized," our contemporary said last week: "The present council, appreciating the advantage of being able to pay cash, is seeking the authority of the voters . . ." etc. Allow us to suggest that if the present council is able to pay cash for another diesel unit they also have the authority to buy it without consulting the voters, most of whom will say God Speed and Amen to the proposition. Is it not the very fact that they can not pay cash that brings them to the voters for permission to bond the city? Is it not a fact that they wish to borrow from Peter to pay Paul?

We are forced to buy on time regardless of whether we owe the engine company or bond holders. The question to decide is how to finance the purchase at the lowest possible cost to the city. It is on this basis that we object to the proposition proposed by the council.

Our contemporary also refers to the bid submitted by Fairbanks-Morse and company two years ago and attempts to prove that we would be paying a premium of $3,174 for the privilege of financing our indebtedness at 6 per cent. We make no defense of the graft indulged in by financiers and for that matter the whole proposition of two years ago is water that has gone over the dam. But, since the contract of that time has been brought into the discussion, a comparision of cost is interesting.

A bond issue of $60,000 at 4½ per cent interest over a period of 12 years, as the council proposes, would entail an interest charge of about $22,000.00 or a total cost to the people before the bonds are paid off of over $82,000.00.

We object to long-time financing of the purchase because of the heavy interest charge which it piles up and added to this we must remember that it is only four years since we added the McIntosh-Seymour unit and within a space of two years it became loaded to the peak of its capacity. Basing our assumption on the past increase in power consumption, it is quite likely that within another five years the plant even with the addition of a 1000 H. P. unit at this time, will again be crowded to capacity. Under the council's proposal, the contemplated addition will then still remain unpaid. Are we then to issue still more bonds for further expansion and continue pyramiding the city's debt? Or, do the proponents of the bond issue assume that with the addition of another unit at this time the saturation point will have been reached and no further addition to the power facilities will be required for a period of twelve or fifteen years of more?

We have before us the tabulation of bids and the transcript of payments contemplated in the proposed deal with the Fairbanks-Morse company, (filed two years ago with malice aforethought) and find on the tabulation under the column "time prices" opposite Fairbanks-Morse $56,984.00 In the column "Cash Price" we find $53,990.00. From this it would seem that the penalty for financing our indebtedness at 6 per cent was not $3,174.00 as our contemporary states, but $2,994.00. On a transcript of the proposed principal and interest payments we find that they were as follows: 1934, $10,402; 1935, $9,964; 1936, $3,718; 1937, $19,942; 1938, $24,085. Or a total cost of the unit and the pump for the water works of $68,111.00, which includes interest and the "penalty" for time payment. Contrast this with the $82,000.00 total cost under the present council's proposal and the difference is about $14,000. Will the Times still maintain that a bond is sue as proposed is the cheaper? And let us not forget that the $15,000.00 grant from the government would have brought this difference to around $30,000.00. We submit, that the citizens of Thief River Falls can not afford to make a donation of $30, 000.00 to anyone, not even to bondholders.

We are voting "No" and urge all citizens to do likewise.

"ONLY TWO-BY-FOURS GET SORE"

It is evident that stepping on people's toes is not a pastime indulged in by editors of the Farmer-Labor persuasion alone. The Sherburne Advance-Standard, which we took to task a couple of weeks ago for quoting from a source of which we do not approve, carried a front page editorial last week entitled "Only Two-by-Fours Get Sore," dealing with the "flarebacks" that an editor can get, if he takes a stand for what he believes is right.

The editorial, which was one of the best we have had the pleasure of reading, incidentally mentions our criticism. While quoting from a source so rottenly scurrilous as the Mid-West American aroused our ire we can not long quarrel with a man whom we know to be sincere, no matter how far apart our political convictions may be.

The Standard's editorial sums up with a quotation from a Fairfield, Ill., newspaper, which follows:

"Good, honest men seldom get angry with an editor. They generally know that most editors care very little about money except just enough to keep a decent home. They know that editors are mostly of that particular type of damfool known as idealists, who want to see everybody treated fairly.

"They trample on people's toes sometime—not to hear them squeal—but because they have an honest conviction that those people are wrong. They seldom let personal feelings prompt an attack. The longer they stay with it, the more the editor's feelings are submerged and the public spirit arises.

"The true journalist doesn't care much if he ruins a good customer, if he feels that he has done something for the public. The common man is always his friend. Editors hate uppity people who try to make a big show of themselves and snub ordinary people. They see life as it is, and as they would have it.

"They get cussed more than a dozen other people and criticism they have at every turn; but they get accustomed to it.

"As a rule they smoke, drink moderately, cuss mildly, like a fight, love good neighbors even if they are mill hands, hate sham and hypocrisy, have the fundamental principles of religion, defend honest men, despise indolence and pity ignorance.

"There's always some half-wit politician sore at them but by the grace of the Good Lord, it seldom hurts them. Good men understand and believe in them. Only the two-by-fours ever get sore at them."

GLASS HOUSES
(Freeborn Patriot)

Incensed at the discharge of old-guard employes of the state insurance department, reactionary daily newspapers are referring to the housecleaning as "wholesale butchery."

The daily press abhors the fact that 12 out of 36 men in the insurance department have been discharged and replaced by Farmer-Laborites.

And in the next breath the GOP press condones the discharge of 47 Farmer-Labor employes in the veterans' bureau, leaving only 23 out of the 70 in the bureau now. The Farmer-Laborites were replaced by Republicans.

Neither does the daily press see anything wrong with the discharge of the Farmer-Laborites without notice. The reactionaries, however, were given two week's notice before their discharge from the insurance department.

It all depends upon which foot the shoe is placed.

As long as the game of American politics is played, the spoils system will be used, be it ruthless or meritorious. Whenever a Republican gains control of a state office an open season is declared upon all employes of other political faiths. In short, there is a good, old-fashioned housecleaning.

It ill becmes the GOP press, therefore, to condemn Farmer-Laborites for engaging in the same practice.

SALES TAX AND PROPERTY TAX
(Minnesota Leader)

The highest general property tax levy in history has just been clamped upon the State of Iowa. This in addition to its sales tax. Get that. Not only are the people of Iowa paying a sales tax but in ADDITION general property this year will pay a tax GREATER than in any other year.

Now, then, let's see. Last week's Leader told of practically all relief stations being closed in Illinois, a contributing reason being that the state's sales tax had failed to provide funds with which to match federal appropriations. At this writing more than a million people of Illinois are absolutely destitute—due to the sales tax. And North Dakota reported that because of its sales tax merchants along the border were losing considerable business to Minnesota merchants who do not have to add a sales tax to what they sell. (Incidentally North Dakota merchants are praising Governor Olson of Minnesota for his veto.)

Now comes Iowa with deadly proof that a sales tax does not relieve the general property tax levy of that state. But do you remember how newspapers, politicians and tax relief asociations solemnly declared that a sales tax in Minesota would immediately take the burden off real estate? And in face of the facts, carefully suppressed by most newspapers, many of those same newspapers, politicians and associations will continue to spread the falsehood.

Thanks to a strong, well-organized Farmer-Labor movement a statesman is Governor of Minnesota. And because he is a Farmer-Labor statesman, Floyd B. Olson vetoed the sales tax.

SECURITY SALARIES
(Union Advocate)

Just a few weeks ago Mr. Roosevelt was arguing lustily that $50 a month was ample for the poor, and that this magnificent sum was a security wage. The President went so far as to threaten to discard the $4,800,000 work relief bill in the event congress refused to specify a $50 per month wage for those employed on federal projects. A majority of congress favored the prevailing wage scale. The President won, and thereby declared the Democratic party as the low-wage party of America.

Contrasted with the security wage standard of the President, one might take a look at the recent report of the Securities and Exchange commission, one of Mr. Roosevelt's numerous bueaus, and see what big business regards as a security salary for its favored sons.

This federal report reveals that there are scores of corporation officials with salaries and bonuses high over $65,000 per year and hundreds whose annual pay checks range from $20,000 to $250,000.

During the past five years of depression and planned poverty, G. G. Crawford, former president of the Jones & Laughlin Steel corporation, drew an annual salary of $100,000 and an annual bonus of $150,000. Other executives who received over $100,000 per year during 1934 were E. R. Crawford, president of the McKeesport Tin Plate company, who garnered in $173,-750; F. B. Davis, U. S. Rubber company, $125,000; W. B. Warner, McCall corporation, $135,000, and E. G. Seubert, Standard Oil Company,

And it is a safe bet that every one of these corporation officials firmly believe that any ordinary Labor-skate ought to be able to get along on fifty dollars a month—and maybe less.

RURAL CREDITS BILL NOT BENEFICIAL
(Northern Minnesota Leader)

The law passed by the last Legislature for the repurchasing of lands by former owners from the rural credit department and for scaling down of top-heavy motgages, is of small value to the majority of the people.

Farmers have called attention to that the Conservator is given all the say, with very little for the borrower or the re-purchaser to protest his equity.

Had the Melbye-Erickson bill, that was amended so that it contained the favorable points of the Friberg-Dixon bill, been passed by the senate, it would have meant a great deal to the farmers. When this bill reached the Senate, the Tungseth bill, which is the one that was passed, was substituted. The Tungseth bill can be found on page 30, column 6 of the law supplements distributed with this week's Leader.

Around the corridors of the Capitol it was freely stated that the Tungseth bill had the backing of the Conservator of Rural Credits, Theo. Arens. Attention was called to that he distributed many of these bills and at one time was seen with an armful of them by the writer.

Mr. Friberg is to be congratulated for his tireless work in attempting to have the interest charge on rural credit mortgages reduced to three per cent. Such a bill would have meant a great deal to the farmers of Minnesota.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

RELIEF WORKERS EASY PREY FOR BOOZE MEN

Dole money is easy money for the brewers and distillers!

Throughout the nation millions of dollars of government relief funds are being squandered for booze.

Thousands of men and women on county rolls are finding their way into drunk courts in every part of the country.

State liquor stores in Iowa, Pennsylvania and other states report record-breaking business on the days that relief workers get their checks.

Welfare agencies are greatly concerned over the problem of relief workers spending their checks for liquor instead of buying groceries for their families.

A Chicago newspaper exposes the mulcting of relief workers by tinhorn gamblers.

In Los Angeles, Judge Oda Falconer, one of the judges who sits in sunrise drunk court, estimates that fully one-third of the drunks who appear before her are on relief rolls. In Los Angelels a drive has been opened against these offenders with jail sentences of 30 to 120 days meted out to them.

Views and Reviews
By
Ben C. Hagglund

John Strachey, brilliant author and lecturer, has come in for a lot of publicity through no fault of his own,—and his notoriety is so powerful that even the remarriage of his wife becomes front-page news! Certain it is, that Strachey possesses, right now, not only the winning arguments, but the wit and elegance with which to express them, as all who attempted to cross words with him found out to their chagrin.

A pamphlet has just come to my attention, which was based on a lecture delivered by Strachey in New York City. In this tract he reveals his power of expression and suggestion to a very great degree. Inasmuch as his ideas seem to me to be sound and wholesome, I shall attempt to pas sthem on to you in the following review:

—O—

WHY FASCISM LEADS TO WAR, by John Strachey. Published by the American League Against War and Fascism, 112 E. 19th St., New York City. 5 cents.

In this 20-page pamphlet, Strachey shows clearly that Fascism and War are inseparable links in the chain of events, and that to prevent War we must prevent Fascism. A quotation from the book Mein Kampi, by Adolf Hitler, proves his point:

"Not until the Germans have realized that they must engage in an actual and final conflict with France with the most comprehensive intentions, will it be posisble to bring the fruitless struggle to a conclusion; that is, if Germany really sees in the extermination of France a means of providing her people with the necessary room for expansion. . .

"We want arms again. Yes, to arouse this cry in the German people the treatry of Versailles can be used. In the boundlessness of its suppresison, in the shamelessness of its demands . . . lies the great propaganda weapon for the resurrection of the slumbering animal spirits of a nation."

"Mussolini's statements," Strachey says, "are of exactly the same tenor as those of Hitler. He tells us that peace is a degenerate, an impossible ideal; that War alone brings out all that is great and good in human nature, that Italy is cramped and confined within what he calls 'our adorable but narrow peninsula'; that, in other words, it is impossible for the Italian nation to live without vast foreign conquests." Mussolini's proposed conquest of Abyssinia seems to prove this point.

"Fascism," Strachey continues, "is obviously taking the world to War just because it doesn't change that system. Fascism leads to War precisely because Fascism is unable to alter, is unable to relieve, or to solve in any degree, the world-wide crisis of capitalism." That is, the whole purpose of Fascism seems to be to preserve the existing order; and this actually intensifies the need for the only "cure" capitalism knows for its periods of depression. Strachey says, "It is inevitable that the Fascist attempt will be made, but it is not inevitable that this attempt will succeed. Far from it. If the great majority of the people of the remaining capitalist democracies open their eyes to what is happening, it is unquestionably possible for them to make it impossible for the leading capitalist groups to establish the Fascist forms of government. Therefore I believe that the struggle against the great symptom of Fascism, War preparations and War psychology, is perhaps the most important single political issue which faces us all today . . .

"Let us suppose," he says further, "that it is perfectly possible, as most liberals sincerely believe, for the capitalist system to continue, either modified or unmodified, and yet to preserve liberty, freedom of speech and thought, the right of association, and the peace of the world . . . what objection can they possibly have to our insisting that none of these rights shall be withdrawn; that freedom of speech and opinion shall be maintained to the full, and above all that peace shall be preserved; that the masses of every country shall be so strongly organized against War that it will be literally impossible for any capitalist government to go to War?

"We say to our liberal friends, let us hope that they are right. Let us hope that it is possible to maintain, and to enlarge, our democratic rights, to preserve the peace of the world, and to establish it on a firm footing, without going through the very grave and very formidable struggle which we know to be involved in the overthrow of the capitalist system. But at any rate, let our liberal friends, who are not convinced of the necessity of destroying capitalism, join with us on this common basis of maintaining what we have; of maintaining those liberties, those democratic rights and privileges which we now possess . . . There is the utmost need for the formation of the very broadest unity in this fight against Fascism and against War . . . And I have not the slightest doubt that we have only to achieve that unity in order to triumph."

—O—

Strachey's analysis of capitalist breakdown is sometimes devastating, and reveals what a keen insight and a ready wit can do to a world that is alternately comic and tragic. He cites the case of Holland, where reclamation of the Zuider Zee, creating a huge acreage of rich farm land, caused a wheat surplus. The Dutch government was forced to take over and market the wheat. It was finally sold to Denmark at a ruinously low figure. Danish farmers stuffed their hogs with the cheap feed, producing a lot of cheap pork, until the Danish government, in turn, was forced to take it over. As a last resort (pork markets being forced down), it was necessary to make fertilizer of the pork and sell it back to Holland, where it was used on the reclaimed land in the Zuider Zee.

—O—

As an almost irrelevant footnote, I might add that the following editorial, which appeared in the Hearst Newspapers about five months ago, is valuable historical data: "John Strachey, English author and lecturer, arrived in this country on Tuesday. He had hardly stepped ashore from the steamship Aquitania when he said of President Roosevelt and the latter's program, 'He is politically clever, but the inevitable results will be disastrous.' This man should be ordered to leave the country at once, with deportation, as the law provides, as the instant alternative!"—As you know, this was tried, with what results.

Insurance Company Makes An Astounding Revelation

By W. G. Calderwood

The Northwestern National Life Insurance Company of Mineapolis reports that since repeal there has been an increase of 149 per cent in the number of applicants for life insurance below the age of 30, who are rejected on account of drinking habits. This is in sharp and surprising contrast with the almost negligible increase of 3 per cent of rejection for this cause among applicants from 30 to 45.

These facts would seem to support the conclusion that during prohibition the youngsters did not acquire alcoholic addiction, and, therefore, those who had attained the age of 26 to 29 before repeal had not, generally speaking, an alcoholic history such as to cause their rejection for insurance protection, while those who were still under 25 when intoxicants were made legal by the repeal of prohibition were allured into alcoholic excesses through the ubiquity of drink, the sweep of social "smartness," and the lure of the fascination and charm of liquor advertisements which almost monopolized every advertising media as soon as liquor advertising was made legal.

The records of the insurance company also discloses the fact that the number of persons who report the use of liquors in either permissible or excesisve quantities has increased 74 per cent since repeal. And again in the group below 30 the applicants score an average of 138 per cent as against the general increase of 74 per cent. These figures also support the conclusion that repeal has been particilurly dealy in its effect upon youth.

Then there is the vicious fiction that beverages containing not more than 3.2 per cent alcohol, by weight, are innocent of toxic effects if drunk in moderation. With such beverages sold in grocery stores, cafes, hotels, candy shops, and where not, and with the state statutes often describing it as non-intoxicating, it is not strange that youth swallows the hoax. Thus the alcohol addiction is established before the young drinker knows it, and often when he has never been drunk in his life.

This is a ten strike for old Bill Booze. But it is a dud for the insurance company, and is a tragedy for the drinker and his family.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

We need a new organism and manifestation of Christianity.

With all the power of the once Russian Orthodox church, representative in Russia, of Christ, what have we today? Stalin and Sovietism.

With all the pomp and power of Roman Catholicism representative of Christ in Italy, what, today? Mussolini and Fascism. With all the influence of Lutheranism in Germany, what in Germany today? Hitler and Nazism.

With religion a crazy quilt, because of its multiplied divisions in English speaking nations, how much impress has Christianity made in Great Britain and the United States?

How much of Christianity is there in religion, in government, in business, in community environment?

One great need in society today is an organism that will welcome all who accept Jesus Christ as the hope of the world and stand ready and willing to work in a unit and in unity for Christianity, decency and justice, yet reserving the right of private thinking.

WOULD WAR BRING PROSPERITY?

Condensed From
The Country Home
John T. Flynn, Author

If war were to be declared tomorrow, we are told, a country that has been unhappy and discouraged would imemdiately leap to strenuous life with everybody at work. Every textile mill, shoe factory, steel mill, shipyard and farm would be mobilized to produce uniforms, equipment and supplies. And so, recently everywhere—in little towns, in Pullman cars, in city offices—you hear the observation that a good war would get us out of all our troubles pretty quickly. For instance, just read the following:

War Propaganda

"Mililons of men continuously out of jobs. That's as bad as war. Ask some of the men that went to France. They'll tell you. They were happier when they sat in the mud there than they are now rotting in idleness. Who wants war? Nobody. But we're likely to get it, and it might not be as bad as it seems. Wars always end depressions.

That paragraph appeared in a syndicated article which was printed in two-score American newspapers. Or read this one in a Sabbath-day address: 'The one thing that will produce two-dollar wheat is war."

All this means that in times like these vast numbers of men lose their hatred of war. Men who are charged with the government of their nations try one device after another for bringing back prosperity and see them all fail. They grow weary and muddled. Then almost without knowing it, they begin to say to themselves that there things worse than war. Any number of observers have noted this mood of tolerance for war in the world today. It is a state of mind that is full of danger. And alas, it is a state of mind that is founded on a terrible mistake. A war will not bring us out of this slump.

Then and Now

But why is it that war, which made us prosperous in 1915 until its end, will not do the same thing for us now? The answer is simple. When every nation in Europe sprang to arms in 1914, immediately something happened in this country. For two years or more business had been sinking down. Then suddenly every ship that arrived from Europe brought representatives of every nation to buy anything that we had on the shelf: Wool and cotton textiles, guns and ammunition, chemicals, corn, wheat and meat. The "help wanted" sign went out on every factory and store. Wages went up. Business rose magically.

But here is the point we must remember. These warring nations came to this country to buy with cash in their hands. In those days they were richer in money than we. After a year their resources began to lag a little. But they were still able to borrow billions from their own people, and they continued to spend a large part of them here.

When we got into the war we began to grow even more prosperous. Millions of young men went into the army. We had to call the women from their homes to work in the factories, to run street cars and elevators. Then we began to borrow billions for our own war expenses. We loaned more billions to Europe, and the greater part of that was spent here. But almost all the money that was spent by the European nations and ourselves was borrowed money. It was created by selling bonds. Now the war is over. The prosperity is over and gone. But the bonds are still here. Practically 10 billion dollars is due us on these old war debts. And, besides, the nations of the world owe us an additional 17 billion in private debts.

Europe Has No Cash

Now, then, suppose Europe were to go to war again tomorrow, what would happen in this country? Would these warring nations come to us to buy again WITH CASH IN THEIR HANDS? Of course not. All of these countries are very near the edge of bankruptcy. The vast loans made from their own citizens during the last war are still unpaid, save in Germany and Russia, where they were wiped out by inflation. The vast sums they borrowed from us are still due.

What is more, Europe has practically announced her intention of never paying. Is it then likely that she can come to our shores again and borrow for a new war? The European nations have not the cash; their credit is wrecked. All this being so, a European war now would turn out to be a very unprofitable piece of business to us. It would be a terrible disappointment to our munitions makers, our farmers, and our manufacturers. It could completely destroy the little international trade left.

If we were to attempt to pile another such mountain of debt on top of the last one, the troubled world would sink into one vast bog of universal bankruptcy. Another war would collapse because of our inability to carry it on, and what started as war would end up in world revolution. It would be for the world the supreme disaster. So let no one build any hope of rescue from hard times by war.

MORALE OF GERMAN YOUTH SLIPPING, NAZIS CONFIRM

Hanover (TIS)—Moral laxity of the German Youth becomes more and more evident according to the reports of the administrative heads of the province of Hanover. A frantic appeal has been issued to teachers, parents and pastors to check those signs of decay which are said to be most pronounced in the rural districts.

Orders issued in other parts of the country are especially aimed against joint hiking tours of boys and girls "so as to prevent an improper approach of the sexes." The Hitler Youth and the League of Zazi Girls are also strictly forbidden to camp near each other.

Slick One!

"Do you know your wife is telling around that you can't keep her in clothes?"

"That's nothing. I bought her a home and can't keep her in that either."—Boston Transcript.

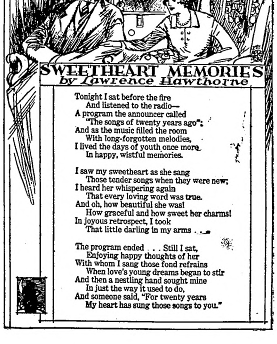
So What!

She: "I'm afraid to go into that dark room."

He: "But dearest, I'm with you."

She: "That's the trouble."

She was only the optician's daughter—Two glasses and she made a spectacle of herself.



SWEETHEART MEMORIES
by Lawrence Hawthorne

Tonight I sat before the fire
And listened to the radio—
A program the announcer called
"The songs of twenty years ago";
And as the music filled the room
With long-forgotten melodies,
I lived the days of youth once more
In happy, wistful memories.

I saw my sweetheart as she sang
Those tender songs when they were new;
I heard her whispering again
That every loving word was true.
And oh, how beautiful she was!
How graceful and how sweet her charms!
In joyous retrospect, I took
That little darling in my arms . . .

The program ended . . . Still I sat,
Enjoying happy thoughts of her
With whom I sang those fond refrains
When love's young dreams began to stir
And then a nestling hand sought mine
In just the way it used to do,
And someone said, "For twenty years
My heart has sung those songs to you."

Let Our Motto Be
GOOD HEALTH
BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

:EGARDING RHEUMATISM

ou will find rheumatic persons ing that they can tell when a storm or cold weather is coming because they can feel it in their bones or in their joints; and you will hear other persons laughing at the idea that weather can affect rheumatism.

But the rheumatic persons are right. Weath- does affect them.

'or this reason students of pre- tive medicine are beginning consider man and his environ- .t as one organic whole and are dying some of our diseases from s standpoint. We have almost iausted the field of bacteriology ing to find germs as the cause disease. Recent work tends to ›w that the skin is an important tor in rheumatism.

:he skin is not just a covering ntle or protective cloak of the ly. It is a vast organ concerned th the sense of feel and touch. It retes sweat and oily substances. also excretes certain things from body.

We are finding that the protective tion of the skin can be extended guarding us against invasion by rms around us. The action of sunht and ultra-violet light on the n is well known to the layman.

We know that the skin can be inged by the temperature of the , by the humidity of the air, and o by changes in barometric ssure. The skin can be thought as a big receptor organ that reves from the outside world mesges of all kinds and transmits se to the internal organs, ough blood and nerve channels.

he capillary blood channels in skin are thought by many au- orities to be involved in rheu- atism. It must not be forgotten t man's skin is an important or- n in maintaining body tempera- e. It can eliminate heat in the mmer time, which is really a re- geration function.

The patient suffering from rheu- tism does not have a prop- control of the blood supply of skin and the secretion of sweat. ere is a tendency toward spas- dic contraction of the capillaries d at times these capillaries be- ne engorged with blood. In oth- words, there is an instability in blood vessels, controlling sys- n.

We just mentioned that the skin an important organ in controll- body temperature. The rheu- tic individual undergoes wide ctuations in skin temperature. ere is oftentimes a subnormal perature of the skin. This in- ences the metabolism of the body that we lose the heat-regulatory ction of the skin that is so im- tant for our well-being. When temperature of the cells within body changes there is a change the chemical products of these ls, and many authorities now nk that this explains in part the elopment of pain in the muscles d joints.

This is a new conception of rheu- tism and helps explain some ases of the disease better than older bacteriological theory that is difficult to substantiate in ny instances. The abnormal nsitiveness to changes in weath- that are experienced by all rheu- tics is due to the fact that these ople do not have the proper skin nction. The circulation of the in is changed as a result of the terations in temperature, humid- and barometric pressure in ch a manner that internal dis- rbances take place leading to the velopment of pain in certain eas of the body.

It is well known that rheumatic ins can develop as a result of hot mperature environments as well cold. Over-exertion and fatigue llowed by chilling of the body are so common factors. Much has en said of cold damp air causing eumatism. So long as the skin nction is normal, muscle or joint ins will not develop because of posure to damp and chilly con- tions.

The proper treatment for rheuma- m is to aid the skin by artificial eans to re-establish a good circula- ry system. This is the reason that hot water bottle placed on the in close to the area of pain will ten stop the discomfort. The prop- treatment is an organized medical an of various types of physical erapy, such as light treatment, at treatments, massage, baths, all which aid the skin to re-establish proper circulation.

We all live under the same eather conditions. Due to a lack control of his skin, the rheumatic nnot adjust himself. The rest us adjust ourselves perfectly d are no way incapacitated by ch weather changes. The rheu- atic speaks very truly when he ys he can feel weather changes.

Two colored boys were having an argument about ghosts. One of them claimed to have seen a ghost as he passed the cemetery the night before.

"What was dishere gos' doin' when you las' seen him?" asked the doubtful one.

"Jes fallin' behin', mistah; fallin' behin' rapid."—Associated Magazine.

Air Cells Make Soap Float

Any soap can be made to float by manufacturing it by a process that presses air ducts into the bar. These ducts also speed up curing, permitting the soap to dry out from the outside. So small are the ducts that they retain air, preventing water from entering. This results in floating. The old method was to beat air into the soap before it was shaped into bars. This made the soap porous, since it was filled with minute air cells.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Kept French Revolution Alive

The French revolution so affected France that for years its memory was kept alive in many tangible ways. Women's dresses were trimmed with miniature chains, pinioning braces and leg irons. They shingled their hair as the executioners had cut the hair of the women victims so it would not impede the blade. And even the children had little guillotines with which they behended the toy figures of aristocrats.—Collier's Weekly.

Snowy Owl Great Hunter

Unlike most other owls, the snowy owl hunts both day and night. It is keen of sight and unusually wary. Living as it does, in an open country, it is wary of approach. It is usually seen perched on a hummock, fence post, haystack, or even deserted building, and cannot be confused with any other bird. When it comes in great numbers it is likely to take a heavy toll of both song and game birds, as well as fish.

Because of the cord weather that has been prevalent through out the northern part of the state fish have not yet completed their spawning and are therefore not biting very good, is the reason advanced by many local anglers for their failure at getting the limit prescribed by law.

Where Quality and Price Mean Everything

Let Our Motto Be

GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

:EGARDING RHEUMATISM

ou will find rheumatic persons ing that they can tell when a storm or cold weather is coming because they can feel it in their bones or in their joints; and you will hear other persons laughing at the idea that weather can affect rheumatism.

But the rheumatic persons are right. Weath- does affect them.

'or this reason students of pre- :tive medicine are beginning consider man and his environ- at as one organic whole and are dying some of our diseases from s standpoint. We have almost nausted the field of bacteriology ing to find germs as the cause disease. Recent work tends to ow that the skin is an important :tor in rheumatism.

The skin is not just a covering :ntle or protective cloak of the dy. It is a vast organ concerned th the sense of feel and touch. It :retes sweat and oily substances. also excretes certain things from : body.

We are finding that the protective tion of the skin can be extended guarding us against invasion by rms around us. The action of sunht and ultra-violet light on the n is well known to the layman.

We know that the skin can be inged by the temperature of the , by the humidity of the air, and o by changes in barometric :ssure. The skin can be thought as a big receptor organ that reves from the outside world mes- ges of all kinds and transmits :se to the internal organs, ough blood and nerve channels.

The capillary blood channels in skin are thought by many auorities to be involved in rheuatism. It must not be forgotten it man's skin is an important ora in maintaining body temperare. It can eliminate heat in the mmer time, which is really a regeration function.

The patient suffering from rheuatism does not have a propcontrol of the blood supply of skin and the secretion of sweat. ere is a tendency toward spasdic contraction of the capillaries d at times these capillaries bene engorged with blood. In othwords, there is an instability in blood vessels, controlling sysn.

We just mentioned that the skin an important organ in controll- body temperature. The rheuitic individual undergoes wide ctuations in skin temperature. ere is oftentimes a subnormal nperature of the skin. This inences the metabolism of the body that we lose the heat-regulatory action of the skin that is so imtant for our well-being. When temperature of the cells within body changes there is a change the chemical products of these ls, and many authorities now nk that this explains in part the velopment of pain in the muscles d joints.

This is a new conception of rheuatism and helps explain some ases of the disease better than older bacteriological theory that is difficult to substantiate in iny instances. The abnormal nsitiveness to changes in weath- that are experienced by all rheuatics is due to the fact that these ople do not have the proper skin nction. The circulation of the in is changed as a result of the terations in temperature, humid- and barometric pressure in ch a manner that internal disrbances take place leading to the velopment of pain in certain eas of the body.

It is well known that rheumatic ins can develop as a result of hot mperature environments as well cold. Over-exertion and fatigue llowed by chilling of the body are so common factors. Much has en said of cold damp air causing eumatism. So long as the skin nction is normal, muscle or joint ins will not develop because of posure to damp and chilly contions.

The proper treatment for rheumasm is to aid the skin by artificial eans to re-establish a good circulary system. This is the reason that hot water bottle placed on the in close to the area of pain will ten stop the discomfort. The prop- treatment is an organized medical an of various types of physical erapy, such as light treatment, at treatments, massage, baths, all which aid the skin to re-establish s proper circulation.

We all live under the same eather conditions. Due to a lack control of his skin, the rheumatic nnot adjust himself. The rest us adjust ourselves perfectly d are no way incapacitated by ch weather changes. The rheuatic speaks very truly when he ys he can feel weather changes.

North German Lloyd Charged with Part In Nazi Outrages

Prague (TIS)—In discussing the recent kidnapping of the German refugee Berthold Jakob from Swiss soil by Nazis, and other Nazi outrages abroad, the "Neuer Vorwarts," mouthpiece of the German Social-Democratic Party executive and leading underground organ in Germany, accuses the North German Lloyd offices at London of participation in the Nazi crimes committed abroad. The paper states that the North German Lloyd paid money to Dr. Wesemann, who lured Jakob near the German frontier and arranged his kidnapping. A captain Manz employed by the North German Lloyd was also, according to the paper, in command of the kidnapping gang who took Jakob over the border.

"Thus," the paper concludes, "a part of an all-embracing organization becomes visible. The large steamship companies with their semi-official position, their close connection to the government and military authorities, are the traditional agents of this system and of espionage in war and peace. The assistants of espionage sit in the offices of the steamship company and of the great transportation enterprises."

CLINCHER

A miserly man was approached by a friend who did his best to persuade him to dress more in accordance with his station in life. "I'm surprised," said the friend, "that you should allow yourself to become shabby."

"But I'm not shabby," said the miser.

"Oh, but you are," said his friend. "Remember your father. He was always neatly dressed. His clothes were always well tailored and of the best material."

"Why!" shouted the other, triumphantly, "these clothes I'm wearing were father's!"—Tit-Bits Magazine.

"There may not be any definite measure as to the average consumption of liquids per day by individuals, but it is fair to say that whatever that figure will be in total, the brewing industry wants a larger share of it than it now has."—The Brewers' Journal.

North German Lloyd Charged with Part In Nazi Outrages

Prague (TIS)—In discussing the recent kidnapping of the German refugee Berthold Jakob from Swiss soil by Nazis, and other Nazi outrages abroad, the "Neuer Vorwarts," mouthpiece of the German Social-Democratic Party executive and leading underground organ in Germany, accuses the North German Lloyd offices at London of participation in the Nazi crimes committed abroad. The paper states that the North German Lloyd paid money to Dr. Wesemann, who lured Jakob near the German frontier and arranged his kidnapping. A captain Manz employed by the North German Lloyd was also, according to the paper, in command of the kidnapping gang who took Jakob over the border.

"Thus," the paper concludes, "a part of an all-embracing organization becomes visible. The large steamship companies with their semi-official position, their close connection to the government and military authorities, are the traditional agents of this system and of espionage in war and peace. The assistants of espionage sit in the offices of the steamship company and of the great transportation enterprises."

CLINCHER

A miserly man was approached by a friend who did his best to persuade him to dress more in accordance with his station in life. "I'm surprised," said the friend, "that you should allow yourself to become shabby."

"But I'm not shabby," said the miser.

"Oh, but you are," said his friend. "Remember your father. He was always neatly dressed. His clothes were always well tailored and of the best material."

"Why!" shouted the other, triumphantly, "these clothes I'm wearing were father's!"—Tit-Bits Magazine.

"There may not be any definite measure as to the average consumption of liquids per day by individuals, but it is fair to say that whatever that figure will be in total, the brewing industry wants a larger share of it than it now has."—The Brewers' Journal.

Have You An Inferiority Complex?

Do you hav- an inferiority complex? Many people have, they say— "I can't do this, I havn't a chance—John Doe is better than I am, He has the campaign sewed up." If you go on selling yourself these excuses for your lack of determination—Then You Can't Win.

If you apply this to life as a whole, aren't the results the same? You are beat if you think you are.Don't go on holding a "tin cup" waiting for someone to drop something into it. You are as good as the next fellow; go out and prove it to yourself and others.

Are You "Chaining" Opportunity Out?

Have you locked your door to Opportunity Are you timidly opening the door of success? If so, you better take the "chain" off the door, and really open it. Here's how. Every worker has an equal chance to win one of these fine prizes. Go into the work with a DETERMINATION, determined to get one of the fine prizes. Be PERSISTENT in your efforts; people have little faith in your ability to win, and consequently will not be anxious to help you if you aren't. If you don't let yourself display these qualities, then you have locked opportunity out.

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

CHAPTER VI.—Elliott is still in something of a daze over the meeting when Brandon strikes again—with dynamite—destroying the railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract.

CHAPTER VII.—By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare.

CHAPTER VIII.—Brandon, seriously alarmed over the successive failures of his plans for stopping the Hoot Owl's logging operations, compels a woman (known only as "Lydia") who is in his power, and against her will, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl he is befriending.

CHAPTER IX.—"Lydia," at a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn McManus, makes public her charges against him. Overwhelmed by the venom of the accusation, Elliott can only make what he himself realizes is a feeble denial of the charge. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for his explanation. Days later, while walking in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead or badly wounded.

CHAPTER X—Elliott's fall has been a ruse to make his enemy believe his attempt at assassination has been successful. A little sleuthing by an emissary of Ben's proves the would-be killer to be Red Bart Delaney, notorious Canadian desperado.

CHAPTER XI

BEN began unblanketing his team with the haste of high temper but before he had finished Able Armitage hailed him from across the street and came hurrying through the rutted snow.

The old justice's face was marked by an expression of concern and he came close before he spoke.

"I hear Red Bart Delaney's in town."

Ben nodded grimly.

"Came to see me yesterday."

"No!"

"Yeah. Took a long look at me . . . over the sights of a rifle."

"Ben! Why, son!"

Elliott laughed mirthlessly and told what had happened in the Hoot Owl chopping the day before.

"So he's gotten down to the hiring of a killer!" Able looked anxiously into Ben's face. "Son . . . It can't go on. Timber or no timber; success or failure for the Hoot Owl, you've got to think of yourself!

"Benny, your way of doing things scares me! Why, this can't go on. It mustn't! It's your own affair, for sure, when he tried to shoot you down, but maybe, perhaps, possibly, I'm going to beg you to be careful. So long as Delaney's in the country you've got to keep low. Get back to camp; stay there; let us pick some man I can trust to follow Bart and Brandon night and day so you'll not be caught!"

"No." Ben shook his head resolutely. "I'll go on about my business as I should. I've never run yet and don't like to start any fast footwork now."

"But it's your life that's at stake, Ben! Don't be silly. That's what recklessness is: downright silly! That's not like you. Why, not taking precautions in this thing is like monkeying with a high tension wire."

"No good, Able. I couldn't hold up my head if I hid out after the play I've made."

So Able was forced to give up after a time and shuffled up the street, drawing off his mitten again and rubbing his face briskly with his palm.

He had only reached his office and was unlocking the door when Aunt Em, walking grimly as if with a definite purpose, approached.

"Good morning—" he began.

"Forget the palaver, Able Armitage!" the woman said sharply. "You're in trouble. So are we all, maybe. That's why I came to see you. Is it true what they say that this Red Bart Delaney has showed up here in Tincup?"

"As true as disease or death or anything else unpleasant."

"That's what I'd heard! Do I have to guess why he's come?"

Able untied his scarf and shook his head sadly.

"No, Em. Your first guess will be right. And he took a shot at Benny yesterday!"

"And missed, I'd judge from the look of him just now. But if he's still here there'll be a next time; and he won't miss then. Did you do your duty and send the boy to some safe place?"

Able sighed and told her of his talk with Ben.

"So you couldn't make him listen to reason!" she muttered. "Well, if you can't, I can't. And, us failing, there's only one other who would have a ghost of a show."

"Dawn?"

She nodded. "Dawn could. But she won't. . . . She won't go to him no. She wouldn't even listen to me talk about him, she's in such a state. She's up to her ears in love with Ben Elliott or I've got three legs! And then to have that scandalous woman do what she did and upset it all!"

She sat down heavily in a chair and drew a great breath.

"I don't have to ask you or any other man about Ben Elliott, Able! I know the clean and decent folks when I see 'em. I'd bet my reputation as a Christian woman on that boy! That piece of play acting at the dance was some of Nick Brandon's work, you can bet your last red cent! Why, Able, that man's worse than ever I thought; My, oh my!

"Well, what I'm gettin' at is this: The boy's in danger of bein' murdered every minute of day and night unless he takes your advice. There's no one left to try to talk him into being careful but Dawn. And how am I going to get her to see her duty when she goes into a cryin' fit every time his name's mentioned? Yes, sir. Every time she hears his name."

"She doesn't yet see that the affair was a put-up job, then?"

"See? She can't see anything, Able Armitage! Put yourself in her place. Suppose you were a young girl who's had the things to bear that she has all her life; and suppose you fell in love for the first time; and suppose that young man was accused of such nastiness right in public with everybody listening and gawping? Would you stop to figure that the reason he seemed guilty was natural? That the thing was so far fetched from the truth and such a shock that he was all kerflummoxed? I should say you wouldn't! You'd do just what she's doin'; make yourself all sick with chills and fever by cryin'."

She twitched at the skirts of her cloak irritably and glared at the old justice as though he were a sworn enemy instead of a friend.

"What ails her is shock. She ain't got over the shock yet and every time his name or anything else about him is mentioned it sets her off again. She'll get over it, give her time. But then she'll be so humiliated to think she didn't use her reason that she won't be herself for another spell. And she should be herself now! There ain't any time to lose. She should patch up her misunderstanding with him right today—right this hour—and use her influence to persuade him to keep low. But how it's to be done I'd like to know. For Lord's sake, Able, ain't you got a single suggestion?"

The justice had been stuffing light wood into his stove during this. Now he touched a match to the tinder, opened the drafts and stood with his hands behind him, rusty overcoat unbuttoned and drooping, deep in thought.

"It's difficult to get anyone in her state to use reason. Maybe the shock of knowing that Ben's life is in danger would be a counter irritant to this other shock. Maybe not. If the affair of last week could be cleared up, if Dawn could be shown that this Lydia woman was only carrying out a plan . . . But I wonder . . ."

Aunt Em stiffened in her chair. She looked hard at Able and her eyes narrowed a trifle.

"You see," he resumed, "if the girl—"

"Hold on, Able Armitage!" she cut in, holding up a hand in warning. "Hold on, now! I've got to think. . . . Got to think, I tell you! And I can't think while you carry on your gabble! You leave me alone, now. . . . Keep your tongue still. . . . They say a woman's tongue is hung in the middle and loose at both ends . . . But . . . Yum . . ." As she pressed one hand over her eyes her words dwindled to unintelligible mumblings.

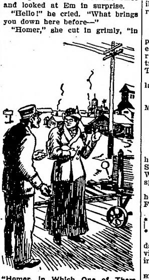
"I've got it!" she cried excitedly after a moment. "I've got it, now! You stay right here, Able! You stay until I come back. If it works, it works. . . . If it don't, it'll be time to talk some more!"

She moved resolutely to the door, left the office and strode down the street. On past the bank, the post office, the pool room. . . . On beyond all the stores, on down to the depot.

There, on the platform she stood a long interval staring across the tracks to that short row of houses on Section Thirty-Seven. The station agent came out of the office and looked at Em in surprise.

"Hello!" he cried. "What brings you down here before—"

"Homer," she cut in grimly, "in which one of them nasty places does this Lydia woman live?"



"Homer, In Which One of Them Nasty Places Does This Lydia Woman Live?"

"Why-why . . . Why, how should I know?" he evaded as a red flush crept up from his collar. "In the one at this end, I think. I'm not sure, of course. . . . I think she does, though. . . . She . . ."

But he no longer had a listener. Resolutely, slowly with something like defiant majesty, the woman crossed the tracks, with never another word to her informant and never a look to right or left. Her head was up, her mouth set, and her long nose wrinkled as if at a disgusting odor. A woman up by the stores shaded her eyes and peered at the moving figure and stared and stopped. Aunt Em Coburn, headed for Thirty-Seven! Why, it couldn't be!

But Aunt Em mounted the steps. She rapped at length and vigorously on the scarred panel of the door. She went within, leaving a dozen long-distance watchers to wonder.

It was long before she emerged and then . . . Ah, then Tincup had a sight to see, a subject for speculation! For by Aunt Em's side moved the woman Lydia, collar of her fur coat high about her face as if to hide the traces of tears which hastily applied powder could not eradicate.

Tears from those hard eyes? Nothing less! For women know women and before Aunt Em had talked to this outcast five minutes she had discovered the weakness in her shame, the clean spot left in her heart. And how Emma Coburn could talk! She talked that clean spot to a growing, glowing, glorious thing. She talked Lydia out of her house, across the tracks; talked her into that slow, unashamed, almost flagrant march up the main street; talked her out of all but one look of misgiving at the windows of Nicholas Brandon's offices. . . . And around the corner and in beneath the hemlocks which whispered above the snug white house. They entered, where Dawn McManus had hidden since the woman's words sent her flying from the dance hall to the sanctuary of Aunt Em's understanding arms.

BITUMINOUS REPAIR PROGRAM STARTS ON STATE TRUNK ROADS

State highway maintenance crews will carry out a special improvement program on the 3,000 miles of bituminous treated gravel trunk roads the next two weeks, says a department bulletin.

First attention will be given to patching holes and repairing short rough stretches on otherwise good roads. Where extensive retreatments are required over a considerable mileage, the work will be done in large measure by contract.

Don't expect too much of any code. Think how long it's taking to put over the extremely simple one Moses presented.

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

CHAPTER VI.—Elliott is still in something of a daze over the meeting when Brandon strikes again—with dynamite—destroying the railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract.

CHAPTER VII.—By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare.

CHAPTER VIII.—Brandon, seriously alarmed over the successive failures of his plans for stopping the Hoot Owl's logging operations, compels a woman (known only as "Lydia") who is in his power, and against her will, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl she is befriending.

CHAPTER IX.—"Lydia," at a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn McManus, makes public her charges against him. Overwhelmed by the venom of the accusation, Elliott can only make what he himself realizes is a feeble denial of the charge. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for his explanation. Days later, while walking in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead or badly wounded.

CHAPTER X.—Elliott's fall has been a ruse to make his enemy believe his attempt at assassination has been successful. A little sleuthing by an emissary of Ben's proves the would-be killer to be Red Bart Delaney, notorious Canadian desperado.

CHAPTER XI

BEN began unblanketing his team with the haste of high temper but before he had finished Able Armitage hailed him from across the street and came hurrying through the rutted snow.

The old justice's face was marked by an expression of concern and he came close before he spoke.

"I hear Red Bart Delaney's in town."

Ben nodded grimly.

"Came to see me yesterday."

"No!"

"Yeah. Took a long look at me . . . over the sights of a rifle."

"Ben! Why, son!"

Elliott laughed mirthlessly and told what had happened in the Hoot Owl chopping the day before.

"So he's gotten down to the hiring of a killer!" Able looked anxiously into Ben's face. "Son . . . It can't go on. Timber or no timber; success or failure for the Hoot Owl, you've got to think of yourself!

"Benny, your way of doing things scares me! Why, this can't go on. It mustn't! It's your own affair, for sure, when he tried to shoot you down, but maybe, perhaps, possibly, I'm going to beg you to be careful. So long as Delaney's in the country you've got to keep low. Get back to camp; stay there; let us pick some man I can trust to follow Bart and Brandon night and day so you'll not be caught!"

"No." Ben shook his head resolutely. "I'll go on about my business as I should. I've never run yet and don't like to start any fast footwork now."

"But it's your life that's at stake, Ben! Don't be silly. That's what recklessness is: downright silly! That's not like you. Why, not taking precautions in this thing is like monkeying with a high tension wire."

"No good, Able. I couldn't hold up my head if I hid out after the play I've made."

So Able was forced to give up after a time and shuffled up the street, drawing off his mitten again and rubbing his face briskly with his palm.

He had only reached his office and was unlocking the door when Aunt Em, walking grimly as if with a definite purpose, approached.

"Good morning—" he began.

"Forget the palaver, Able Armitage!" the woman said sharply. "You're in trouble. So are we all, maybe. That's why I came to see you. Is it true what they say that this Red Bart Delaney has showed up here in Tincup?"

"As true as disease or death or anything else unpleasant."

"That's what I'd heard! Do I have to guess why he's come?"

Able untied his scarf and shook his head sadly.

"No, Em. Your first guess will be right. And he took a shot at Benny yesterday!"

"And missed, I'd judge from the look of him just now. But if he's still here there'll be a next time; and he won't miss then. Did you do your duty and send the boy to some safe place?"

Able sighed and told her of his talk with Ben.

"So you couldn't make him listen to reason!" she muttered. "Well, if you can't, I can't. And, us failing, there's only one other who would have a ghost of a show."

"Dawn?"

She nodded. "Dawn could. But she won't. . . . She won't go to him no. She wouldn't even listen to me talk about him, she's in such a state. She's up to her ears in love with Ben Elliott or I've got three legs! And then to have that scandalous woman do what she did and upset it all!"

She sat down heavily in a chair and drew a great breath.

"I don't have to ask you or any other man about Ben Elliott, Able! I know the clean and decent folks when I see 'em. I'd bet my reputation as a Christian woman on that boy! That piece of play acting at the dance was some of Nick Brandon's work, you can bet your last red cent! Why, Able, that man's worse than ever I thought; My, oh my!

"Well, what I'm gettin' at is this: The boy's in danger of bein' murdered every minute of day and night unless he takes your advice. There's no one left to try to talk him into being careful but Dawn. And how am I going to get her to see her duty when she goes into a cryin' fit every time his name's mentioned? Yes, sir. Every time she hears his name."

"She doesn't yet see that the affair was a put-up job, then?"

"See? She can't see anything, Able Armitage! Put yourself in her place. Suppose you were a young girl who's had the things to bear that she has all her life; and suppose you fell in love for the first time; and suppose that young man was accused of such nastiness right in public with everybody listening and gawping? Would you stop to figure that the reason he seemed guilty was natural? That the thing was so far fetched from the truth and such a shock that he was all kerflummoxed? I should say you wouldn't! You'd do just what she's doin'; make yourself all sick with chills and fever by cryin'."

She twitched at the skirts of her cloak irritably and glared at the old justice as though he were a sworn enemy instead of a friend.

"What ails her is shock. She ain't got over the shock yet and every time his name or anything else about him is mentioned it sets her off again. She'll get over it, give her time. But then she'll be so humiliated to think she didn't use her reason that she won't be herself for another spell. And she should be herself now! There ain't any time to lose. She should patch up her misunderstanding with him right today—right this hour—and use her influence to persuade him to keep low. But how it's to be done I'd like to know. For Lord's sake, Able, ain't you got a single suggestion?"

The justice had been stuffing light wood into his stove during this. Now he touched a match to the tinder, opened the drafts and stood with his hands behind him, rusty overcoat unbuttoned and drooping, deep in thought.

"It's difficult to get anyone in her state to use reason. Maybe the shock of knowing that Ben's life is in danger would be a counter irritant to this other shock. Maybe not. If the affair of last week could be cleared up, if Dawn could be shown that this Lydia woman was only carrying out a plan . . . But I wonder . . ."

Aunt Em stiffened in her chair. She looked hard at Able and her eyes narrowed a trifle.

"You see," he resumed, "if the girl—"

"Hold on, Able Armitage!" she cut in, holding up a hand in warning. "Hold on, now! I've got to think. . . . Got to think, I tell you! And I can't think while you carry on your gabble! You leave me alone, now. . . . Keep your tongue still. . . . They say a woman's tongue is hung in the middle and loose at both ends . . . But . . . Yum . . ." As she pressed one hand over her eyes her words dwindled to unintelligible mumblings.

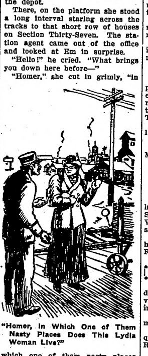
"I've got it!" she cried excitedly after a moment. "I've got it, now! You stay right here, Able! You stay until I come back. If it works, it works. . . . If it don't, it'll be time to talk some more!"

She moved resolutely to the door, left the office and strode down the street. On past the bank, the post office, the pool room. . . . On beyond all the stores, on down to the depot.

There, on the platform she stood a long interval staring across the tracks to that short row of houses on Section Thirty-Seven. The station agent came out of the office and looked at Em in surprise.

"Hello!" he cried. "What brings you down here before—"

"Homer," she cut in grimly, "in which one of them nasty places does this Lydia woman live?"



"Homer, In Which One of Them Nasty Places Does This Lydia Woman Live?"

"Why-why . . . Why, how should I know?" he evaded as a red flush crept up from his collar. "In the one at this end, I think. I'm not sure, of course. . . . I think she does, though. . . . She . . ."

But he no longer had a listener. Resolutely, slowly with something like defiant majesty, the woman crossed the tracks, with never another word to her informant and never a look to right or left. Her head was up, her mouth set, and her long nose wrinkled as if at a disgusting odor. A woman up by the stores shaded her eyes and peered at the moving figure and stared and stopped. Aunt Em Coburn, headed for Thirty-Seven! Why, it couldn't be!

But Aunt Em mounted the steps. She rapped at length and vigorously on the scarred panel of the door. She went within, leaving a dozen long-distance watchers to wonder.

It was long before she emerged and then . . . Ah, then Tincup had a sight to see, a subject for speculation! For by Aunt Em's side moved the woman Lydia, collar of her fur coat high about her face as if to hide the traces of tears which hastily applied powder could not eradicate.

Tears from those hard eyes? Nothing less! For women know women and before Aunt Em had talked to this outcast five minutes she had discovered the weakness in her shame, the clean spot left in her heart. And how Emma Coburn could talk! She talked that clean spot to a growing, glowing, glorious thing. She talked Lydia out of her house, across the tracks; talked her into that slow, unashamed, almost flagrant march up the main street; talked her out of all but one look of misgiving at the windows of Nicholas Brandon's offices. . . . And around the corner and in beneath the hemlocks which whispered above the snug white house. They entered, where Dawn McManus had hidden since the woman's words sent her flying from the dance hall to the sanctuary of Aunt Em's understanding arms.

BITUMINOUS REPAIR PROGRAM STARTS ON STATE TRUNK ROADS

State highway maintenance crews will carry out a special improvement program on the 3,000 miles of bituminous treated gravel trunk roads the next two weeks, says a department bulletin.

First attention will be given to patching holes and repairing short rough stretches on otherwise good roads. Where extensive retreatments are required over a considerable mileage, the work will be done in large measure by contract.

Don't expect too much of any code. Think how long it's taking to put over the extremely simple one Moses presented.

Representative J. O. Melby Quotes Figures on the Omnibus Tax Bill

The Forum is in receipt of a communication from Representative J. O. Melby, of Oklee asking publication of an article and stating in part that "our state senator had an article in the Red Lake Falls Gazette, and his article is so incorrect that I find it my duty to publish these figures which I have from the Sstate Tax Commission."

The article which deals with the Omnibus Tax Bill which was vetoed by Governor Floyd B. Olson, follows:

"The Omnibus bill, in its final form, could not have produced more than $20,000,000. Of this amount, sales taxes would have raised $16,000,000. The bill allocated the increase from the income tax to schools; ten per cent of the inheritance tax would have gone to counties. The money available for state purposes would not have been sufficient to do any more than retire the state property tax levy. It is doubtful that this would have been accomplished, but if it had been, little would be accomplished in the way of tax relief. The average tax levy this year is 78 mills. In Pennington county it is 84 mills, and in Red Lake county, 97 mills. In Clearwater county the average rate was 108 mills. With rates like these a reduction equal to the state rate which next year will be 15 mills, could be only a small reduction and from 83 to 86 per cent of the present property tax would still be paid. On the other hand the citizens in these counties would pay a larger amount in sales taxes than they would save in property taxes. A sales tax was levied on all the necessities of life except on groceries and on seed grain. The farmer would pay a tax on all his feed, his twine, his sacks, his machinery, any distillate or kerosene oil used in tractors, a tax on harness, fly nets and all the equipment he neds to run his farm, as well as on the clothing and household supplies of his family. Therefore, if farmer saved $25 on a $150 tax bill, he would be paying out nearly $40 in sales taxes. Clearwater county pays $21,083 in state taxes. If we continued to have as large a business after a sales tax was imposed as we had in 1933, that county would pay $23,223 in sales taxes. Pennington's state tax levy is $42,746. It would pay $55,795 in sales taxes under the Omnibus bill. Red Lake county would have come out slightly to the good, but the losses to Clearwater and Pennington counties outweigh the slight gain to Red Lake county.

Another thing the Omnibus bill would have done is to reduce business for Minnesota merchants. No sales tax could be levied on interstate commerce, so if Minnesota residents went across the border or bought from mail order houses they could escape the sales tax. Many of them would take advantage of this loophole and the Minnesota merchant would suffer.

Two thirds of all products sold in the country are bought by poor people—people whose income is not over $2,000 a year. Those people would have paid two-thirds of the sales tax.

The Omnibus bill would have eliminated the one mill tax, depriving Red Lake, Pennington and Clearwater counties of from $10,000 to $15,000, each, yearly. This amount would have been added to the county tax levy.

Another feature of the Omnibus bill is that, though it taxed the poor on everything they spent it relieved the taxes of the big corporations. This bill repeals corporate excess tax which would have relieved the Northern States Power Co. to the extent of $2,000,000 a year, and relieved the Minneapolis General Electric and the Minneapolis Gas Light Co. to the extent of another $2,000,000. The poor persons paying sales taxes would make up this loss.

The bill, too, would relieve the absentee land speculator. A farmer would pay more than his property tax reduction in sales taxes, but the insurance company owning land would get the benefit of any reduction without paying a sales tax. Twelve life insurance companies located in the East own one half of all farm mortgages in Minnesota. You can see something of the extent of absentee ownership from this.

The bill, then, would have increased the tax burden of the farmer and the average poor person, but would have decreased the burden for big corporations or absentee landowners."

"MILITARY ARREST" FOR SOCIALISTS WHO PROTEST WAR PARADE

PIQUA, O.—For following up a parade of local Spanish War veterans with anti-war signs, four local Socialists have been placed under "military arrest," charged with interfering with a military demonstration. First taken to the local armory, the four have now been transferred to the city jail.

The four Socialists arrested are Louis Moon, member of the party's state executive committee, Asa Scott, member of the executive committee of the Young People's Socialist League, and Ken and Sophie Whitaker.

The Commander charges that Moon struck at him, and that he, in turn, struck Moon. The commander is unhurt, Moon is reported by jail authorities to be suffering from a bruised nose.

The Miami Valley Socialist League has retained an attorney to defend the four Socialists arrested.

CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW

By Harold C. Hagen

Washington, D. C.—By the time you read this President Roosevelt, no doubt, will have vetoed the Patman veterans cash bonus payment measure and action taken both in the House and Senate to try to override his action. The House was sure to pass the bill and Congressman Buckler is on record again in payment of the adjusted compensation certificates, voting to pass the bonus measure over the veto. A close decision was expected in the Senate.

Farm Aid Bills Pass House

With little debate the House recently passed two bills in aid of farmers. One was a measure liberalizing loans of the Farm Credit Administration and the other was the $125,157,983 appropriation for the Agricultural Department. If the loan bill becomes a law interest on all loans by Federal land banks will be cut to 3½ per cent for the next fiscal year and 4 per cent for the two years following.

Now Is the Time to Send in Project Applications

Although the details of how the new works-relief program will be handled are somewhat vague and there is considerable confusion in Washington due to the transition from the old to the new, it has been learned that the state engineers of Public Works have been authorized to accept applications for projects.

Township,, County, Village, City and other civil officials and civic organizations should get their applications for projects in as soon as possible to Wiliam N. Carey, state PWA engineer, FederalBldg., St. Paul. The applications first received will be considered first. After attention and acceptance in St. Paul, the applications go to Washington for further consideration and final approval or rejection.

—O—

The Senate has passed the Wagner Labor disputes bill by a vote of 63 to 12. It now goes to the House where passage is predicted.

Favors U. S. Ownership of Federal Bank Stock

With President Roosevelt's seeming approval, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, last Friday advocated Government ownership of all stock in Federal reserve banks and centralizing the nation's credit facilities and control in a non-political independent Government agency.

Congressman Buckler has been advocating this action and a Government Central bank as well for many years and made speeches on the subject in the House May 3 and 8.

Farmers March for AAA

More than 5,000 farmers representing perhaps almost every state in the Union visited Washington last week in an aggressive display of support for the continuation of the AAA program and the adoption of the so-called AAA amendments to strengthen the Act. Rumors had circulated over the country that the AAA act might be repealed, but this was erroneous.

However, there is a spirited fight on over the AAA amendments which are due for consideration by the House soon. More than 100 farmers from Minesota were here and last Tuesday heard President Roosevelt speak from the South portico of the White House. The Gopher state farmers met up with the Minnesota congresisonal delegation later in the Senate building. Congressman Buckler captured the honors of the evening with a strong plea for legislation in behalf of the farmer.

Revised NRA Passes Senate

An extension of a much modified and changed NRA to April 1, 1936, was voted in the Senate last Wednesday. It concerns only firms doing interstate business. Roosevelt had asked for a two year extension.

Plummer Group Motors to Bemidji

A group of twenty-nine young people from Plummer under the uidance of Mr. Peter-Rolf Ohnstad drove to Bemidji on Saturday, May 18. At Wilton they visited the Ranger lookout station, which is situated on the peak of a hill approximately 1400 feet above sea level—the highest point in the entire Mississippi Valley.

In Bemidji they visited the ice-cream plant, saw the entire pasteurization process of milk, were shown through the box factory, the waste products of which are used to generate steam to operate the generators of the Interstate Power and Light company. While in the Interstate Power Plant they looked through peepholes in the walls of the furnaces and saw the high combustion chambers which were in operation. Here the smoke was burned and the heat of the waste gasses was used to obtain higher heat.

Then they went to the Interstate Power dam, which is located on the Mississippi River about thirteen miles east of Bemidji and saw the hydro-electric plant and state fish hatchery. The thrill of the day was supplied by the sight of literally thousands of big game fish in the river below the dam.

Returning to Bemidji by the North Shore Route they stopped at the State Park and saw the stand of virgin Norway Pine, and an artesian well. They then inspected the Fireplace of States, located in the tourists' information building in Bemidji.

After spending an hour downtown they continued to Diamond Point Park where boat rides on Lake Bemidji were enjoyed by all Following a delicious picnic dinner at the park they visited the zoo, where they found animals native to Minnesota.

The group returned to Plummer at 8:30 P. M., physically tired, but bringing with them a wealth of experience and knowledge that shall greatly enrich their lives.

The First Congress

The first national congress convened on March 4, 1789. The day was ushered in by the firing of cannon and the ringing of bells in New York, and this ceremony was repeated at noon and at sunset, but in Federal hall only eight senators and thirteen representatives made their appearance—not enough to form a quorum of either house. A whole week passed, and, no more senators arriving, those present sent out a circular letter to their colleagues urging them to hasten their coming. A second circular letter followed, a week later, but nearly a month had elapsed before either house could muster a quorum. The house was able to organize on March 30, but the senate not until April 6.

"Stiff taxation will produce about as much smuggling as moral prohibitions," says the Chicago Tribune. Nobody seemed to think of that when the campaign for repeal was on. We were told that the liquor makers would pay most of our taxes for us, and that repeal would kill the bootlegger and smuggler.

SEED CORN

Northern-grown seed corn that will mature in this territory.

This high-quality corn will check in at an approximate cost of 70c per acre, and will drill in at about $1.20 per acre.

This will give a far greater feeding value than fodder corn which forms no ears.

Fodder corn will plant only about 2 1-2 acres to the bushel, being a larger corn, and produces a feeding value far below corn with mature ears.

Our registered Minnesota No. 13 is grown in Clay county and will mature in this section in any normal year.

at 9:30.

The resolution embodying the Workmen's stand follows:

RESOLUTION

Adopted by the Workmen's Protective Association of Thief River Falls in meeting assembled Monday evening, May 20, 1935.

WHEREAS, The city council has called a special election for the purpose of voting on the bond issue to be used for improving the light and power facilities of the city, and

WHEREAS: The proposal would float a bond issue to be carried over a period of 12 years with a tremendous interest load, and

WHEREAS: There has been no plan made public specifying the size of unit to be bought nor other details for the information of the voters, and

WHEREAS: No application has been made for a federal grant to defray part of the cost.

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED: That we, the Workmen's Protective Association, oppose any long-time financial plan, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That in view of the confusion and lack of information given, we oppose the issuance of bonds as proposed and will vote "No," and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That we recognize the need for additional power facilities and will give our whole hearted support to any plan of finance which will dispose of the debt within not to exceed seven years, providing a federal grant is secured to help defray the cost, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That we sugest to the city council that it immediately by resolution request the Civic and Commerce association to appoint two members; the Workmen's Protective association to appoint two members; the local resident members of the Railroad Brotherhood to appoint two members; and the Postal Employees Union of this city appoint one member of a Citizens' Advisory Committee, this committee to immediately proceed to call expert testimony to decide on the size of the unit which should be installed at the electric plant at this time and its approximate cost, and make a report to the council and to the citizens without unnecessary delay, and that the council then forthwith make application for a federal grant for the purpose of defraying a part of this cost and submit to the voters immediately in a special election the following question:

"Shall the City of Thief River Falls issue its negotiable coupon Funding Bonds in the aggregate principal sum of not to exceed Sixty Thousand ($60,000) dollars maturing serially three to seven years from their date, and bearing interest at a rate of not to exceed four and one half (4½) per cent per annum, for the purpose of providing funds for the purchase of additional power equipment for the Municipal Light and Power Plant of said City when, and if a federal grant is obtained to defray part of the cost?"

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That a copy of this resolution be submitted to the council at its next meeting, to the Honorable Mayor F A Rinkel and published in the newspapers of the city for the information of the public.

(Signed) W. J. Douville, Chairman.

ATTEST: Palmer Peterson, Sec.

RED LAKE FALLS TO BE ENGAGED IN NEW INDUSTRY

Red Lake Falls residents are elated over a new industry which is to be started in that city soon. Reports state that this new industry will employ over a million workers. That sounds a little "fishy," almost as much so as some of the stories brought back by those who have been out to the lakes in quest of the "finny tribe," and yet this is no fish story, it is absolute truth. Mr. L. A. Coblentz, who is an apiarist, and is at the head of this plan, is at present busily engaged in erecting buildings for the workers. Mr. Coblentz says he will do his part if the dairymen of the community will do their part, to make Red Lake Falls a city of "Milk and Honey."

WHEAT GROWERS

thirty-five cent wheat was due to an estimated carry-over that year of 400 million bushels and due to the loss of our export trade, County Agent R. M. Douglass says. Farmers had increased their wheat acreages to approximately 66 million acres, although domestic consumption, with everyone well-fed, provided an outlet for an average production of only 50 million acres. Export demands practically vanished because of embargoes, tariffs, and trade agreements between foreign countries.

Now the burdensome wheat surplus is a thing of the past. Thinking farmers are determined to prevent, if possible, the rcurrence of overproduction and the ruinous prices of 1932.

Every wheat grower should see that he has voted on this question and the polls will be open from 1 to 9 p. m. on Saturday, May 25th. Mr. Douglass encourages every wheat grower to cast his vote.

for some faster company next Sunday, however. The Colored Gophers of St. Paul have been booked for this little tiff and the set-to ought to be a hot one. Manager Dekko says that the Gophers cleaned his boys 8 to 2 last year, but vows it will be different this session.

The House of David has been booked for a game in June and efforts are being made to get the Fargo-Moorhead Northern League team here in the near future. All of this gives promise of plenty of excitement for the followers of the National Pastime and it is hoped that some real crowds will turn out to greet the boys when they perform. The turn-out last Sunday was quite satisfactory, there being over two hundred cars packed around the grandstand at the fairgrounds. The box score—

CROOKSTON DEBATERS WIN STATE TITLE

Crookston high school debaters won the state championship of the Minnesota High School Debate League by defeating Stillwater in a state final contest at Crookston Tuesday night, May 14th.

By the 2 to 1 decision of three judges, Crookston became the only school in Minnesota to have won state titles in four different years. Only one other school, Caledonia, has been awarded three state titles.

A capacity audience heard the Crookston negative team dispute the advantages of federal grants to public education and the Stillwater affirmative trio defended the plan.

The Crookston team consisted of Mary Robbins, Paul Sharp and Francis Norman. Stillwater was erpresented by Phyllis Flowers, Norris Mikkelson and Jack Thoreen.

Liming Potato Dip Renders Acid Useless

Adding lime to the acid-mercury solution for treating potatoes, ruins the solution and renders the treatment useless, says Dr. J. G. Leach, University farm, plant pathologist, the man who invented the acid mercury treatment.

Some Red River Valley farmer started the practice of putting 2 pounds of lime in with 25 gallons of acid-mercury dip to make treated tubers white so he could tell them from untreated ones. To a Moorhead man who inquired about the practice, Dr. Leach wrote as follows:

"I do not know who is responsible for starting this practice, but it is a great mistake. Lime is an alkali which neutralizes acid. Two pounds of hydrated lime is about three times as much as would be required to neutralize all of the acid in 25 galons of the diluted acid-mercury solution. Growers who add lime to the solution are paying for acid and then destroying it by adding the lime. Not only do they destroy the acid, but by the addition of this extraneous matter, the efficiency of the mercury is decreased so that it is not as effective as the old 2-hour soak method. If the grower after adding the lime follows the recommendations for using the acid-mercury method and soaks the potatoes for only 5 minutes he will probably derive very little or no benefit from the treatment."

Ten Pound Trout Caught By Resident in Crow Lake

At least one man in this city felt satisfied with his luck while fishing during the week end, and that man is Tony Hornseth. He and two companions decided on a trip to Crow Lake, 81 miles north of Baudette, in the Province of Manitoba, which, according to Mr. Hornseth, was a wise decision. The three men caught 19 lake trout, none of them weighing less than seven pounds, and one of them, caught by Mr. Hornseth, weighed ten pounds. (A lake trout weighing ten pounds, if caught by a local man, is a big fish.)

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, The city council has called a special election for the purpose of voting on the bond issue to be used for improving the light and power facilities of tho city, and

WHEREAS: The proposal would float a bond issue to be carried over a period of 12 years with a tremendous interest load, and

"Shall the City of Thief River Falls issue its negotiable coupon Funding Bonds in the aggregate principal sum of not to exceed Sixty Thousand ($60,000) dollars maturing serially three to seven years from their date, and bearing interest at a rate of not to exceed four and one half (4½) per cent per annum, for the purpose of providing funds for the purchase of additional power equipment for the Municipal Light and Power Plant of said City when, and if a federal grant is obtained to defray part of the cost?"

RED LAKE FALLS TO BE ENGAGED IN NEW INDUSTRY

Red Lake Falls residents are elated over a new industry which is to be started in that city soon. Reports state that this new industry will employ over a million workers. That sounds a little "fishy," almost as much so as some of the stories brought back by those who have been out to the lakes in quest of the "finny tribe," and yet this is no fish story, it is absolute truth. Mr. L. A. Coblentz, who is an apiarist, and is at the head of this plan, is at present busily engaged in erecting buildings for the workers. Mr. Coblentz says he will be out of luck if the dairymen of the community will do their part, to make Red Lake Falls a city of "Milk and Honey."

thirty-five cent wheat was due to an estimated carry-over that year of 400 million bushels and due to the loss of our export trade, County Agent R. M. Douglass says. Farmers had increased their wheat acreages to approximately 66 million acres, although domestic consumption, with everyone well-fed, provided an outlet for an average production of only 50 million acres. Export demands practically vanished because of embargoes, tariffs, and trade agreements between foreign countries.

Now the burdensome wheat surplus is a thing of the past. Thinking farmers are determined to prevent, if possible, the rcurrence of overproduction and the ruinous prices of 1932.

Every wheat grower should see that he has voted on this question and the polls will be open from 1 to 9 p. m. on Saturday, May 25th. Mr. Douglass encourages every wheat grower to cast his vote.

for some faster company next Sunday, however. The Colored Gophers of St. Paul have been booked for this little tiff and the set-to ought to be a hot one. Manager Dekko says that the Gophers cleaned his boys 8 to 2 last year, but vows it will be different this session.

The House of David has been booked for a game in June and efforts are being made to get the Fargo-Moorhead Northern League team here in the near future. All of this gives promise of plenty of excitement for the followers of the National Pastime and it is hoped that some real crowds will turn out to greet the boys when they perform. The turn-out last Sunday was quite satisfactory, there being over two hundred cars packed around the grandstand at the fairgrounds. The box score—

CROOKSTON DEBATERS WIN STATE TITLE

Crookston high school debaters won the state championship of the Minnesota High School Debate League by defeating Stillwater in a state final contest at Crookston Tuesday night, May 14th.

By the 2 to 1 decision of three judges, Crookston became the only school in Minnesota to have won state titles in four different years. Only one other school, Caledonia, has been awarded three state titles.

A capacity audience heard the Crookston negative team dispute the advantages of federal grants to public education and the Stillwater affirmative trio defended the plan.

The Crookston team consisted of Mary Robbins, Paul Sharp and Francis Norman. Stillwater was erpresented by Phyllis Flowers, Norris Mikkelson and Jack Thoreen.

Liming Potato Dip Renders Acid Useless

Adding lime to the acid-mercury solution for treating potatoes, ruins the solution and renders the treatment useless, says Dr. J. G. Leach, University farm, plant pathologist, the man who invented the acid mercury treatment.

Some Red River Valley farmer started the practice of putting 2 pounds of lime in with 25 gallons of acid-mercury dip to make treated tubers white so he could tell them from untreated ones. To a Moorhead man who inquired about the practice, Dr. Leach wrote as follows:

"I do not know who is responsible for starting this practice, but it is a great mistake. Lime is an alkali which neutralizes acid. Two pounds of hydrated lime is about three times as much as would be required to neutralize all of the acid in 25 galons of the diluted acid-mercury solution. Growers who add lime to the solution are paying for acid and then destroying it by adding the lime. Not only do they destroy the acid, but by the addition of this extraneous matter, the efficiency of the mercury is decreased so that it is not as effective as the old 2-hour soak method. If the grower after adding the lime follows the recommendations for using the acid-mercury method and soaks the potatoes for only 5 minutes he will probably derive very little or no benefit from the treatment."

Ten Pound Trout Caught By Resident in Crow Lake

At least one man in this city felt satisfied with his luck while fishing during the week end, and that man is Tony Hornseth. He and two companions decided on a trip to Crow Lake, 81 miles north of Baudette, in the Province of Manitoba, which, according to Mr. Hornseth, was a wise decision. The three men caught 19 lake trout, none of them weighing less than seven pounds, and one of them, caught by Mr. Hornseth, weighed ten pounds. (A lake trout weighing ten pounds, if caught by a local man, is a big fish.)

THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM

VOLUME FOUR NUMBER 8 THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA THURSDAY, MAY 30, 1935

Bond Issue Carries in Listless Election, 575-343

Only Forty Per Cent of Normal Vote Turns Out in Tuesday Election

Climaxing more than three weeks of controversy over a proposed bond issue by the city council to purchase additional equipment for the Municipal Power plant the citizens of Thief River Falls decided that they couldn't be bothered with the question, inasmuch as only 918 people considered the question important enough to vote on. The ones who did vote voted 575 to 343 in favor of sustaining the wishes of the present city council.

The vote was slow all day, according to election clerks, with the heaviest vote coming in near six o'clock Tuesday evening. The majority was 232 votes in the record small vote of the city on any issue in recent years. As the situation now stands the city council is authorized to issue bonds up to $60,000 bearing interest of not more than 4½ per cent to be retired in twelve years and the first series to be called at the end of three years. The money obtained from the sale of these bonds is to be used on improvements for the Municipal Water and Light Department.

The vote by wards is as follows:

1st Ward—152 for, 82 against.
2nd Ward—165 for, 90 against.
3rd Ward—108 for, 44 against.
4th Ward—150 for, 127 against.

The vote in the city of Thief River Falls in the last general election for U. S. Senator was 2295 balots cast as compared with the present balloting the vote this election was just 40 per cent of that cast for Senator.

ENROLLED WORKERS

Time is rapidly slipping away, time that can never be regained by any of the "Good Will" workers in their quest for subscribers to the Forum. The campaign will close at 12 Noon Saturday, June 22. Les sthan a month for workers to secure subscriptions that may win for them. The race is a very close one, any worker on this list may win first prize. The race for votes is so very close that the eventual winner will no doubt be the one that works the harder from now until the close of the campaign. The worker who loses no time.

SECOND PERIOD OF CAMPAIGN TO CLOSE JUNE 5TH

Candidates Remain in Close Race for First Place Position

The second period of the Good Will Campaign will close promptly at 9:00 P. M. Wednesday, June 5th. Candidates must have all subscriptions in the office of the Campaign Dept. by that time in order to apply them on second period credits.

The first period was a tremendous success and it is anticipated that the second period will be also.

There are only a few short weeks left in the campaign and it behooves every candidate to do all he posisbly can during the time that is left. Subscribers that have neglected to do so during the first period and up to now of the second period, had best give their subscription to their favorite candidate as soon as possible.

When the announcement of a campaign of this kind is presented to the people and we say that the campaign wil llast eight weeks the average person thinks that this wil lbe a long time in which to do the work that we have to do. After the close of the first period, the candidates and the people as a whole realize that eight weeks is not very long after all. Considerably more than half of the campaign is already over. There are only a few short weeks left in the drive.

This campaign has turned out to be a very close race between many of the candidates. Almost any worker on the list can and may win the first, second, or the third grand prize. It all depends on what those workers do from now until the close of the campaign, less than a month from now.

Those on top of the list this week will have to work hard to keep up their average and those further down on the list will have to work hard to better their position.

Time is slipping away and unles seach candidate does his very best, so is the opportunity to win. Time in this campaign is something that can never be regained. On a definite date the campaign will close and then it will be too late for the workers to think of things that they should have done. It also will be too late for subscribers to send in their subscriptions for their favorite candidate. IF YOUR FAVORITE CANDIDATE HASN'T CALLED, MAIL YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TO THE CAMPAIGN DEPT. OF THE THIEF RIVER FALLS FORUM, and your candidate will receive full and proper credit.

'Lefty' Heiberg Gets Miserly Allows Only Three Hits Strikes Out 8

A large attendance of fans who keenly enjoyed the return of high class baseball to Thief River Falls featured the second game of the season played on the local diamond Sunday afternoon when the Giants met the St. Paul Colored Gophers.

Playing airtight ball behind Heiberg's irreproachable pitching, the Giants had the best of the argument by 6 to 1 at the end of the eighth inning when the gaue was called because of rain. Both teams played splendid baseball thru the first six innings with the Dekkomen having a tally to the good gained in the first inning when Langlie scored Gronningen with a long two base hit to left field. In the first half of the sixth the colored boys evened up the score when Thompson, first man up hit to right field and after stealing second was sent across the plate when Chink grounded to first.

The fatal seventh opened uneventful when the Gophers went out in one-two-three order, but brought the fans to the edge of the planking when Coleman, first man up for the Giants hit a long fly and followed it up by stealing second. Eig got on first when the pitcher threw wild to third on a fielder's choice, scoring Coleman and sending Eig to second. H. Thordal sacrificed, advancing two men; Gronningen hit to center Brevick grounded out to the pitch-

ATTENTIVE GROUP HEARS M. KAPLAN SPEAK FRIDAY EVE.

Explains Outcome of Recent Challenge to Mrs.Oleson Of N R A

Speaking before a crowd in Thief River Falls for the first time in twenty years Morris Kaplan, Bemidji merchant and Socialist advocate, told of his recent run-in with Anna Dickie Oleson, head of the NRA compliance board in Minnesota. A crowd of about 400 people attended the meeting which was sponsored by the Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor Ass'n club.

Mr. Kaplan stated that there was no real hope for real recovery until more people attend public meetings. He expressed his anticipation of some real recovery if more such meetings were held throughout the United States.

A number of local merchants had asked Mr. Kaplan the result of his "set-to" with the NRA and had asked him to explain the outcome of his defiance of the price-fixing code. He explained that he had received no answer to his challenge to presecute from Mrs. Oleson, but that he had been doing about $6,000 worth of relief supply business every month, which was taken away from him on some pretext or other. He stated that he was able to stay in business in spite of the fact that this business was taken away from him but that as far as he could see this was the only answer he was likely to get from the NRA head.

Morris Kaplan went on to explain how price-fixing of retail goods failed to benefit the masses

THREE NORTHERN COUNTIES ADOPT RULE FOR LABOR

Plan Intended to Prevent Influx of Transient Workers

Pennington county now ranks highest in public works activity of the eight counties in National Reemployment District No. 1, with approximately forty-five men employed on two projects, it was reported this week by Donald L. Snyder, district manager. This figure will be increased materially within the next week when actual construction begins on the post office.

Common labor jobs on county road construction in three counties of the Re-emplyment district, Polk, Red Lake and Norman, have been guaranteed to citizens of the respective counties by their county commissioners who have followed the example of the federal public works act which requires that workers, where qualified, must be hired from the political subdivision in which the project is located.

Mr. Snyder, in praising this plan, reports that it is being done by a large number of counties throughout the state and that it is only fair to other county labor that they be given the same protection. In addition, he states, it discourages an influx of labor and the resultant dependency on the county of stranded workers.

Mix Medicine With Brains Is Doc's Advice

St. Paul, Minn.—To obtain best results, cathartics ,like the artist's colors, need to be "mixed with brains." This is the opinion expressed by the Educational committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association, which urges upon everybody extreme caution in their use.

There are a number of types of cathartics, each of which has a different effect. Each has its own use and even though they are among the simplest of mendicaments, proper use of cathartics requires training and skill, the committee points out.

Cathartics have been used from time immemorial. In the past they held a much greater sway over the practice of medicine than they do today, however, but their use by the general public is still excessive. The committee states emphatically that cathartics may be harmful and under certain conditions they become dangerous.

Foremost among these should be listed abdominal pain. In the presence of abdominal pain cathartics should be forbidden. Such pain may mean inflammation and the prime necessity is rest. Cathartics interfere with rest, aggravate the pain and may cause dissemination of the infection thr t out the abdominal cavity as occurs only too often when physics are used in acute appendicitis. In the case of obstructions there are other measures much safer than cathartics.

The wide variety of laxatives and purgatives on the market including the indigestible oils, agar, castor oil, the saline purgatives or salts, calomel, and the natural group, cascara, senna, rhubarb and aloe, all have their place in medicine and all have a distinct use but they must be used properly. Promiscuous use of any one of them may be exceedingly dangerous.

Crops and Soils Day at N.W. School Mon. July 15

The Annual Crops and Soils day at the Northwest Experiment Station has been scheduled for Monday, July 15, according to R. S. Dunham, station agronomist. The inspection of field plots during the growing season has been an annual event for many years. Since 1924 the Red River Valley Crops and Soils association has made this day the occasion for their annual summer meeting. Farm clubs and other community groups interested in the experimental work in crops have also chosen Crops and Soils Day as an ideal time to visit the school and station, thus combining the inspection of the plots with a community picnic and outing.

Preliminary plans include a short speaking program, while most of the afternoon will be devoted to studying the several hundred experimental plots. Of special importance this year will be the work with pasture crops, the trial of farmers' lots of seed flax on wilt infected soil as begun last year, and deep tilling trials for potatoes and sugar beets.

Officers of the Crops and Soils association include: Herman Skyberg, Fisher, president; Melvin Flaskerud, Fosston, vice president; R. S. Dunham, Crookston, secretary; and S. M. Silverton, Crookston, treasurer, together with the following county directors: John Bergh, Hallock, Kittson county; Tom Reine, Roseau, Roseau county; Carl Hjelle, Newfolden, Marshall county; Chas. Lindquist, Wylie, Pennington; Geo. H. Orr, Red Lake Fals, Red Lake; J. A. Anderson, Gonvick, Clearwater; Alfred, Lindem, Fisher, West Polk; O. J. Ramse, McIntosh, East Polk; Wm. Frederickson, Perley, Norman; Henry T. Johnson, Audubon, Becker; Theo. Mellum, Ulen, Clay; Wm. Friederichs, Foxhome, Wilkin; Julian Halvorson, Ferugs Falls, West Otter Tail; and W. H. Frey, Perham, East Otter Tail county.

Assessors at Work Under New Exemption Laws

With the personal property assessment work in full swing in this country, assessors for the first time are working under the new law eliminating personal property taxes on household goods and farm machinery. The law was passed by the recent session of the legislature in accordance with a majority vote given at the general election last November to a constitutional provision to eliminate such taxes. The labors of assessors are lightened to that extent as they make their annual visits to Mr. John Taxpayer, the Minnesota Taxpayers' Association points out.

Under the provisions of this law, Section 1975, Mason's Minnesota Statutes, 1927, has been amended so that all household goods are now exempt from taxation. In the exemption also is all farm machinery of each farm used for agricultural or farming purposes, except tractors, silo cutters, silo fillers, threshing machines, combines, corn shellers and pea viners.

This new law will be tried out for the first time in this state. The law is intended to give some tax relief, although in many cases what a farmer may save here might conceivably be charged back against his real estate under a higher tax rate.

Colors Affect Fishes Growth

A well-known authority on fish, has recently discovered that trout minnows, grow faster in troughs painted white on the inside, than they do with the troughs painted any other color.

Tests made to determine reaction to colors, by paint laboratories, indicate that rats and guinea pigs have the following reactions:

After having been subjected to confinement in red pens for any great length of time, they become mentally deranged. In black pens they become dull and listless. In white pens, they become shy. In blue pens they get the "blues." They thrive best in pens painted green.

Slaughter of Meat Stock Smallest in Twenty Yrs.

Combined slaughter of cattle, calves, hogs, and sheep during April this year was the smallest for that month in over 20 years, says the Weekly Market Bulletin issued by the Central Co-Operative Association, of South St. Paul. Total number of meat animals slaughtered in the United States in April at 4,854,969 head was one million head less than a year ago, and nearly one and one-half million less than the April slaughter two years ago.

The big decrease was noted in hog slaughter, the total number of hogs going for slaughter during that month being 2,177,436 head, or the smallest since 1910 and 36 per cent below a year ago.

The United States slaughter of hogs during the first four months this year, was 9,791,621 head or five and one-half million less than slaughtered during the same four months last year.

Cattle slaughter, on the other hand, was large at 683,263 head in April, and 3,010,066 head during the first four months this year. The four-month total was among the largest totals on record, there being only four similar totals that were larger than this year in the last twenty years.

Sheep and lamb slaughter also has been heavy thus far this year. The January to April slaughter totaled 5,338,387 head or the third largest on record.

Silas Bryan Discusses Foreign Trade Treaties

Minnesota and the Dakotas have more than 350 manufacturing concerns engaged in export trade, and 4,000,00 men in the United States are directly or indirectly dependent upon foreign trade activity for their livelihood, according to Silas M. Bryan, Manager of the District Office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Reciprocal trade agreements which have been concluded with Cuba, Brazil, Belgium and Haiti, aimed at minimizing the handicaps which American exporters now suffer in the way of quotas, customs and restrictions, exchange regulations, tariffs, and general discrimination against American firms, have already shown their effect in increased exports, a substantial part of which is represented by cereals and pork products, in which this area is particularly interested, Mr. Bryan reported.

The agreement with Cuba was effectuated in September, 1934, and figures of the Foreign Trade Statistics division of the Department of Commerce show that United States exports moved from $12,142,000 during the last six months of 1933 to $23,955,000 in the same period in 1934. The agreement with Belgium became effective on May 1, and negotiations are well advanced with several other countries.

Rescue of Game Bird Eggs to Save Wild Life

An experiment tried out last year on a small scale proved so successful that most portions of southern Minnesota are included this year by the State Division of Game and Fish in game bird egg rescue work.

An auspicious start was made the first week with 19 state game wardens reporting the rescue of 1,191 eggs of various species of upland game birds.

Charles McFarlane, deputy divison director, is in direct charge of this new phase of wild life conservation designed to save hundreds of potential wild fowl that otherwise might possibly be destroyed in the usual farming operations.

Wardens cooperating and concentrating in this work are Lee Peyton, Ortonville—R. R. Whitney, Montevideo; Lyle Tweet, Redwood Falls; Hugo Wicklund, Marshall; D. P. Brady Windom; E. W. Bailey, Jackson; D. H. Duncan, Fairmont; E. S. Jonson, St. James; Ray Neumannn, New Ulm; Sam Warner, Hutchinson; J. A. Machtemes, Nicollet; Frank Freeman, Mankato; F. S. Clark, Winnebago; Andrew Larson, Aldon; Iver Stadheim, Albert Lea; George Huber Owatonna; George Morris, Faribault, Phil Nordeon, Red Wing, and Claer Dothmore, Slayton.

Mr. McFarlane has set a mark of more than 100,000 game bird eggs to be obtained during the spring nesting seasons through cooperation of farmers, newspaper editors, county agents, 4-H club leaders, rural mail carriers and others interested in wild life conservation.

A new incubator with a 60,000 egg capacity has been installed at the state-owned game farm near Madelia to take care of the eggs as they are sent in by wardens.

Annual 4-H Club Week At N. W. School June 17

Plans for the annual 4-H Club Week at the Northwest School, June 17 to 22, are rapidly taking form, according to District Club Leader H. A. Pflughoeft.

A district conference of adult and junior leaders from Northwestern Minnesota counties will be featured during the week. A. J. Kittleson, state club agent, will be in charge of the conference, while other members of the club staff and extension division will appear on the program. A large number of leaders are expected to attend this worthwhile program.

Regular class work, including field trips, laboratory work and demonstrations are planned to assist club members to do more effective work in their projects. A wide range of topics are offered, including clothing, foods, canning and room furnishing for the girls, and livestock, crops, and garden for the boys. The Northwest School faculty with the assistance of county agents, will be in charge of the instruction. Other instructors who will assist are C. L. McNelly, H. G. Zavoral, and Parker Anderson of the Extension division and Miss Mildred Schenke and Amy Wessel of the 4-H club office. Ruth Lohmann, with the Kerr glass company, will demonstrate canning.

The conservation of wild life, a new activity in 4-H club work, has created considerable interest in Minnesota. Special discussions and field trips are planned to help the young folks in this field of endeavor. Miss Gladys Haney of the Bemidji State Teachers college, will direct a special study of Bird Life. Miss Elma E. Schoals, also from the above college, will take up problems in putting on one-act plays.

In addition to a fine educational program, arrangements are under way for an enjoyable recreation and play program. Club members twelve years old or over may come.

Retail Credit Co. Reports on Repeal

By W. G. Calderwood

Perhaps no more thorough and disinterested appraisal of the results of repeal could be made than that recently reported by the Retail Credit Company of Atlanta, which has representatives in almost every town and hamlet and a local organization in practically every city of the nation. Its business is to secure information about individuals, chiefly about their ability and reliability as related to credit, and their acceptability as insurance risks. The company has no partisan interest nor economic, social or moral prejudice to color its findings. Its elaborate report, covering 24 pages with maps and a chart, is based on first-hand information, gathered by observers and investigators trained to gather and report facts.

The report shows that in 39 states and the District of Columbia drinking is increasing, and not one in which it is on the decline. There are nine states in which there is "no change" in the amount of drinking. As a temperance measure repeal has been a 100 per cent failure.

This is a sharp contrast with the results which folowed the enactment of national prohibition., under which commitments for drunkenness dropped 5.3 per cent as shown by census figures. Even the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, in a report made in 1928, estimated that there had been a decline of 22 per cent in the nation's consumption of alcohol in beverages. The Crusaders, which was the young men's wet organization, estimated that drinking had fallen off 60 per cent. The Federal government put the decrease at 68.8 per cent.

The Retail Credit report shows that in 31 states and the District of Columbia former bootleggers dominate the present retail outlet. It is hardly to be supposed that this class of dealers will be careful to obey the regulations under repeal. Indeed the detailed reports of the several states show that in most states there is flagrant violation of law; that drunkenness and drunken driving are more prevalent, and that there is a sharp bulge in drinking by women and youth and in the homes.

As a remedy for the evils of drinking and drunkenness the report seems to indicate that repeal has proved an unqualified fizzle.

Uncle Sam
Says

LET'S ALL GET BUSY—
FIX UP AND PAINT UP—

Nothing else can aid the Nation's business as much as new construction—repairing and modernizing old buildings.

Next to Agriculture, the construction industry, in normal times, is the largest employer of men. One tenth of all manufacturers are engaged in making building materials. One fifth of all freight cars are used in transporting these materials; one eleventh of all wholesalers are engaged in their distribution.

Now is the great opportunity for you to improve your property . . . modernize it . . . repair it, paint it. The work can now be financed wisely and well. Such property increases in value, as a consequence.

Agriculture, if not adequately represented in law-making bodies, will share the melancholy fate of all unrepresented groups in all ages and all nations.—Franciscus Columbus.

ENFORCING GOVERNMENT DECREES BY LILLIPUTIAN METHODS

By request of some of his auditors, Morris Kaplan referred to his recent controversy with the Minnesota NRA enforcement authorities in his address last Friday evening. He read the letter received from Mrs. Anne Dickie Oleson, state compliance director, and his reply and challenge to prosecute. These two letters have been published in the daily press, not only in this state, but in other states, and were incorporated in an article by Mark Sullivan, noted political prognosticator. They need no repetition here. Subsequent developments of the case, however, have not been made public until Mr. Kaplan related them to his audience here Friday evening. According to Mr. Kaplan, no further letters have been received by him from Mrs. Oleson in regard to the alleged violation of the code. Neither has there been any suit or other legal action to punish Mr. Kaplan for his infractions. It would seem that the NRA decided to drop the matter, and did drop it, promptly and unceremoniously, like a hot potato. But subsequently, Mr. Kaplan stated, all relief order business has on one pretext or another been withdrawn from his store.

What a sorry spectacle the government of the greatest country in the world is making of itself. Having called in its leading "brains," for consultation; having framed an elaborate set of codes embodying rules and regulations for the conduct of business; having set up a complicated machinery of government to force compliance and prosecute violators, the mighty Uncle Sam beats a hasty retreat when faced by one man who has courage, ability and means to defend his constitutional rights. Yet we are told that this same doughty compliance crowd has pounced down on small neighborhood grocers in several instances and collected fines ranging from a few dollars to a thousand or more for infractions of its rules.

The sight of his government resorting to a cowardly underhanded, penny-ante boycott to chastise a private citizen for disobeying its degrees must make every American citizen's ears burn with shame. Whether Mr. Kaplan is right or wrong in his opposition to the price-fixing powers usurped by the government under the codes, (and we are very decidedly convinced that he is right), the honorable thing for the government to do would have been to make an immediate test case before the Supreme Court and to suspend any and all efforts at compliance until that case had been decided, on its merits.

It is hard to believe that government (we refer to personnel and not to form) can degenerate to such an extent as that shown by the present administration. Could anyone conceive without being told that we are in fact descendants of those men who penned the Bill of Rights? Is this race that accepts unemployment and a niggardly relief with doglike apathy the same people who have thrilled to a recitation of the Declaration of Independence and Lincoln's Gettysburg address? It is high time that the American people awaken to its rapid degeneration, for government, after all, is no better, and no worse than the people who, by their votes, place it in power.

MORE POWER TO THE BROOM WIELDERS

The following editorial dealing with a much delayed and long awaited housecleaning at the state house appeared in last week's issue of the Minnesota Leader:

Housecleaning Time is Here

.. Spring has came! And with it a glorious,.. refreshing, vivifying cleansing from mildewed fungus and old-party barnacles attached to the Railroad and Warehouse Commission and the State Insurance department. Congratulations to Charles Munn, Knud Wefald and Frank Yetka. The only thing that could make the picture more satisfying would be for other departments to follow suit.

As usual, whenever their own policies come home to roost, Republicans yell and rant trying to cover up the fact that as soon as they gained control of the Division of Veterans' Relief all Farmer-Labor employees were kicked out. And their places filled with Republicans. That was alright, they said. But when Farmer-Labor officials displace Republicans, that is "politics."

Again, and with renewed emphasis we salute the Commissioners and urge others to stiffen their backbones and go and do likewise.

Inasmuch as the Leader is the official organ of the state Farmer-Labor association it is to be hoped that its O.K. of the action of the Railroad and Warehouse commissioners and the fact that it urges other department heads to "go thou and do likewise" will be the final impetus needed to send them about this housecleaning business. By this time it is generally agreed that it is far overdue.

In giving our blessing to the removal of old party hold-over state employees and all-party Olson administration appointees, we are not motivated by any desire to inflict a loss on anyone. We are of course glad to see some of those who have worked s unselfishly and diligently to advance the cause of the political party with which we affiliate ourselves, get an opportunity to earn a decent living in the employ of the state, but we also realize that it may work some hardship upon those who are removed. That is deplorable. We would like to see everyone have a job at a living wage. Even tho there were more jobs available in private and public service than there were men and women to fill them, we would want such a housecleaning in state offices. After all, we must remember that we are engaged in the task of rebuilding an economic order so that it will function to the advantage of the great majority of the people and that task is gigantic enough in itself even tho every worker in the employ of the state is in sympathy with this purpose. We can not afford to leave even the smallest tasks to those who because of their political and economic views would be tempted to retard the process.

WAGE LEVELS AND RECOVERY

Two items of interest appeared in last week's news dispatches. Interesting, because of their effect on the country's recovery from the depression. The first item informs us that the president has by decree set the wages for common labor under the projects to be instituted and paid out of the $4,800,000,000 public works appropriation, in some cases as low as nineteen dollars a month. This munificent salary, he assumes, will provide a gigantic buying power among the millions of unemployed workers and people now on relief so that they in turn will be able to prime the economic pump so that industry may again brush the cobwebs out of the gears, and with a magnificent burst of activity and a clanging of bells and whistles, send us happily on our way to the promised Land of Economic Plenty.

The realization of what a tremendous impetus the addition of a few million $19 a month workers on the nation's payroll will give to industry simply overwhelms us. Picture the avalanche of orders for overalls, silk shirts, pink pajamas, woolen overcoats and evening clothes that will swamp the clothing mills. Imagine the plight of the production managers of the automobile, radio, electric refrigerator and furniture factories when they are buried in orders. Surely they will hie themselves out to join the nineteen dollars a month class so that they may lead a carefree, luxurious life, unfettered by maddening production figures.

We are sure that Mr. Roosevelt, endowed as he is with such extraordinary sagacity and keen logic, will quite readily reconcile this order with his demand for a continuation of the NRA, the function of which is to lengthen the wages, shorten the hours, and fix minimum prices in industry. It is readily seen that unless prices are fixed correspondingly high, these nineteen dollar a month beneficiaries would be hard put to spend their weekly raid on the federal treasury.

Contrast this with the news contained in the other item referred to in the opening paragraph of this article: Henry Ford raises the minimum wages in his factories from $5 to $6 per day, and it is quite apparent that Mr. Ford is not a good patriotic citizen. He is not backing up the president like he should. This brings forcibly to mind too, that he was the black sheep without the corral in the early days of the NRA. We are tempted to believe that he is in league with Hoover and the Communists in a desperate attempt to upset our economic equilibrium. Only when we consider the efforts that the United States Chamber of Commerce and Mr. Roosevelt have expended in convincing the people that they are worth at least $19 a month? can we appreciate the damage done by Mr. Ford's action. that they are worth at least $19 a month, can we men will throw up their hands in the exasperation of futility. With Ford workers getting a minimum of six dollars a day they will realize that it will be impossible for them to go out and render a full measure of labor for all of nineteen dollars a month. If they then refuse to take the jobs, of course the whole recovery program is upset.

THE W. R. HEARST INVASION
(Minnesota Leader)

In return for a small classified advertisement in their columns, newspapers of Minnesota are being offered free subscriptions to the Hearst newspapers of Chicago. This is for the purpose of implanting Hearst propaganda in the minds of country editors and having it passed on to their readers

Of all public enemies W. R. Hearst is the most vicious. If he was not chiefly responsible for plunging the United States into war with Spain, at least he tried to be. He has taken the lead in every jingoistic, sword-rattling crusade for the last 40 years. As a corruptionist of men and government he has no equal. Because of his chain newspapers across the continent, his is the most evil influence in America.

Through cities of the East a strong anti-Hearst movement has sprung up and has cost those publications hundreds of thousands of subscription. Now it is being extended to newsstands, where a growing number of buyers tell the newsboy, "Anything but a Hearst newspaper." The movement is gaining adherents daily.

Now the wiley corrupter of men and morals seeks entrance to Minnesota through the columns of its country newspapers. But he can be stopped here as he has been slowed up in other sections of the country. Minnesotans can insist, and absolutely require, that their local publishers purge their columns of anything and everything Hearst-inspired by cancelling subscriptions to newspapers which reprint anything sent out by the jaundiced journalist. And by patronizing motion picture theaters which do not display the Hearst newsreel.

Black cholera, the sales tax and W. R. Hearst should be quarantined beyond the borders of this state.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR CUTTING (Labor)

Bronson Cutting was not "just another senator." His death has created a void in American public life which it will be difficult to fill.

Born to wealth and assured social position, he was, like Jefferson, "a natural democrat" in his personal relationship as well as in his public activities. He was that rare type of gentleman who treats a scrub-woman and a society leader with exactly the same courtesy.

There was not the slightest taint of the demagogue about him. He championed Progressive legislation because he believed in its justice and was convinced that its adoption was essential to the preservation of the American scheme of things.

A purer spirit, or one more worthy of admission, has never knocked at Heaven's gates.

WHY ENGLAND PROSPERS
(The Progressive, Madison, Wis.)

In the Hearst papers of Sunday, April, 28 (including the Chicago Herald and Examiner) appears an editorial which has the "blind giant" of government in the United States putting to himself the following question:

"How is it that England, proceeding along the old lines, announces a balanced budget and growing prosperity while I plunge deeper into debt with as many millions idle as I had when the trouble came upon me?"

Unfortunately, the Hearst editorial fails to answer this question. It it answered it truthfully, it would have to tell of the high taxes levied upon big incomes at rates many times those in force in the United States.

Hearst, advocate of the sales tax to take from the poor to spare the rich, is the arch foe in this country of income taxes and application of the just principle of ability to pay.

Yet the income tax is the fundamental reason for the favorable condition of national finances in Great Britain.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

CONDITION CALLED WORST IN HISTORY IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

A movement to reenact the Sheppard prohibition law in the National Capitol is under way this week, following charges made by the Federation of Social Service Societies which states that "conditions in Washington relating to alcoholic addiction are now worse than ever before in our entire history."

Roundly denouncing the present liquor situation at Washington, D. C., the federation demanded immediate action by congress to reenact the Sheppard law. Petitions will be in circulation soon, appealing to congress for "immediate relief of the present intolerable situation by restoring prohibition to the national capitol."

Police records of nearly 17 months of legalized liquor here prove, the resolution asserts, that "arrests for drunkenness and fatalities and injuries resulting from drunken driving, also crime and poverty due to intoxicating liquors, all have greatly increased since the repeal of the Sheppard law and the eighteenth amendment."

"Four hundred saloons were closed in the District of Columbia when prohibition was enacted," said the resolution, "but now over 1,800 liquor establishments exist which are flooding Washington with intoxicating liquor and promoting intensified campaigns of high-pressure advertising, utilizing every form of publicity in order to create, stimulate and popularize the drinking habit among all ages and classes of our residents."

General Butler Speaks Plainly

Chicago, Ill.—"I would like to see a general strike of the workers against war. In fact, I wish the American Federation of Labor would right now call a one-day protest strike against the naval maneuvers in the Pacific and against the criminal efforts of Hearst, big business-men and jingos to involve us in a war with Japan."

Who is speaking?

None other than Major-General Smedley D. Butler, retired commander of the U. S. Marines, only person ever to receive twice the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery under fire, and a veteran of more front line fighting than any living U. S. military officer. He was twice wounded.

"I spent thirty-five years with the biggest bill collecting agency in the world, the U. S. Marines, before I began to wake up," he said.

"I served in every rank, from private to general, and half that time was spent in fighting on foreign soil for the benefit of American bankers. But now I have sworn that I'll never fight again in a war outside our borders, nor let my three sons fight, even if I have to shoot the conscription officer that comes to take us."

Author of a recently published book, "War is a Racket," the General vigorously assailed "bankers, munitions makers, publishers of the Hearst stripe, and strutting peacocks in uniform who drag the working people to slaughter for their own wealth and glory."

General Butler's approval of a general strike against war was voiced in answer to a question by Ernest Erber, leader of the Chicago Young People's Socialist League.

"But let's don't wait until a general strike is necessary," he urged. "Fight war now, get out on the streets and parade. Don't let the war crowd have the show to themselves."

He praised the student strike against war on April 12, and warmly congratulated Al Hamilton, national chairman of the Student League for Industrial Democracy, who led the strike in the Chicago district. Only militant action by youth, the workers and the churches could stop approaching war, he declared.

The General asked for mass pressure to force a congressional hearing on the Ludlow bill. Introduced by Congressman Ludlow of Indiana, the bill would initiate a constitutional amendment depriving Congress of the power to declare war. War could be declared only by a popular referendum, requiring at least 60 days, and only those persons eligible for active service would be permitted to vote.

The basic cause of war, in the view of "Old Gimlet Eye of the Leathernecks," is the expansion of capital from highly industrialized countries to less developed regions.

"I was in that crowd that seized the Isthmus of Panama. We could have bought it but the Colombian legislators wanted personal shakedowns of $3,500 each before they'd sell their country's land. That's a bigger bribe than is paid legislators in Pennsylvania so Theodore Roosevelt said "We'll just take it.' I was one of those sent down to do the grabbing."

General Butler related the story that he had told the Dickstein Congressoinal investigating committee about how he had been asked to lead a fascist army in America, and how he had rejected the offer. He charged that the Dickstein committee had gotten cold feet and had refused to trace the Wall street connections of the fascist group.

"I hate fascism as much as I hate war," he said.

He feared that Father Coughlin represented dangerous fascist tendencies, though his program could not be accurately described as fascist.

Concerning Huey Long: "I agree that the national wealth must be redistributed. But Long, I think, is too much the opportunist. His program is very vague and doesn't go nearly far enough."

The General accused Roosevelt of being anti-labor.

"I made sixty speeches for Roosevelt in 1932, but I'm sorry I did. In Andy Mellon's aluminum town, New Kensington, Pa., I made four talks for Roosevelt. Today I'm ashamed to face those workers.

"I don't mind saying I am frankly and wholly on the side of labor. A lot of public officials have the idea that in a strike a pane of glass is worth more than a worker's life."

Last week General Butler, with Francis J. Gorman, first vice-president of the United Textile Workers, testified for the Connery bill to ban the National Guard in labor disputes.

The General is not a Socialist, at least not yet, he says. "I have believed that capitalism could be controlled to give the workers a fair break. But I confess my faith in capitalism is steadily growing weaker."

The Root of All Evil

"Money is the root of all evil." How often has St. Paul been misquoted. He said, "The DESIRE for money is the root of all evil." We would rather put it: "Ignorance is the root of all evil." But the two statements mean ultimately the same thing, for only the ignorant can desire wealth for itself. The wise know many deeper satisfactions.— Janet Newton, in RADEX BULLETIN.

Learning, Morality and Environment

American workers (which includes everyone doing useful work) have often been taken to task for allowing a system to exploit them in its manifold ways, and sap their mental, moral, and physical vitality. They have been stigmatized for not ending the system immediately.

It is plain that those who know what should be done are powerless to do it. This country is ruled by an unintelligent majority,—the acme of democracy. This is largely the result of capitalist environment, which begins its influence the minute we are born into it and continues its spell until we die. Capitalism moulds every phase of us—mental moral, physical. We are slaves of the system—the capitalist more so than the lowest worker—and the word "freedom" is a joke, and liberty just a dream.

"THE SLAVE"

In 1914 James Oppenheim wrote a book of verse entitled "Songs for The New Age," in which was included "The Slave," a poem which illustrates my point exactly:

"They set the slave free, striking off his chains . . .
Then he was as much of a slave as ever.
He was still chained to servility,
He was still manacled to indolence and sloth,
He was still bound by fear and superstition,
By ignorance, suspicion and savagery . . .
His slavery was not in the chains,
But in himself . . .
They can only set men free . . .
And there is no need of that:
Free men set themselves free."

This poem written of the negroes, could be applied with equal sense to white workers. Ignorance and superstition are the only real slaveholders,—they prevent action at the time when it is necessary. Any wholesale manumission that free men's bodies before their minds are free, is bound to suffer many setbacks and rude disillusionments.

And that is the whole explanation for the need of a cultural revolution at this time.

Demagogue vs. Teacher

Any man can get up nowadays on his hind legs, shout that the system is wrong, and tell people what to think about it. The sad part is, that many people accept such bounty "from above." A demagogue is not interested in teaching people how to think—if they did, he would not be able to get away with what he does. Generally speaking, a demagogue appeals to the prejudices of a people, and seeks to remedy existing ills, not by changing, but by patching, the system.

A true thinker, on the other hand, is generally hesitant about saying anything with absolute finality. That is the great failing of truth—it is so approximate, so indefinite. It cannot be measured and labeled and dealt out in cans like any other commodity. That is why the true thinker is only a teacher—he exhorts all who listen to him to think for themselves.

All too few of us are able to think, and to judge impartially. We leap to conclusions, we depend so much on prejudice, on "what we hear," and simply on our impressions of things. But even so, in the case of our economic system,—if we are able to think, and arrive at certain definite conclusions, we find that when we have thought it all out,—when we know that the system is wrong, know what is wrong about it, we may still not know what to do about it.

THE READER'S ROSTRUM

Dear Mr. Editor:

From time to time you have had clearly written editorials regarding the Rural Credit and in the last issue noted one copied from the Northern Minnesota Leader. All constructive suggestions and criticisms are valuable for after all our purpose in life should be in the line of progress and not static death or even retrogression. There is only one movement and that must be forward. Any static condition or retrograding motion means only one thing, stagnation and death.

In connection with his subject, as the proponent of the plan for the liquidation of the Rural Credit Bureau, I want to commend to the people the excellent work done by your representative, Mr. J. O. Melby. I found him true to the interests of the people of his district and of the State at all times. Wide awake to the issues in legislation, the technique of the legislature and he has a respectful hearing by committees and members of both houses. His approval of the purposes of a bill, carries a great deal of weight on the floor. You are to be congratulated on sending men of his type down there. He did excellent work on the Rural Credits bill as passed in the House and he will be willing to promote the bill again because he knows it is in the interest of the rural credit farmers as well as indirectly others in the maintenance of conservative values and the downward revision of interest charges. This bill should come up in the special session again but unless those concerned do their part you should not expect your legislators to do it all on their own motion.

BONUS IS LIVE ISSUE

Washington, D. C.—Although the Patman cash bonus payment bill was vetoed by President Roosevelt in a personal appearance before a joint session of Congress last Wednesday and the Senate sustained the veto by a margin of eight votes, bonus supporters are still working and have hopes that they can attach the measure as a rider to some other legislation. The House over-rode the veto by a vote of 322 to 98 with Cong. Buckler again voting with the majority to pay the bonus The vote in the Senate was 54 to 40, or eight votes short of the required two-thirds margin.

AAA Amendments To Be Considered This Week

The AAA amendments were scheduled for consideration in both the House and Senate this week with debate starting in the House Tuesday. Administration leaders predicted passage in both branches.

The House version of the amendments, much more sweeping than the Senate Bill, broadens the whole basis of the AAA. The "clarifying" amendments to be presented the lower chamber enter a new field by providing for the subsidizing of American agricultural exports, in line with principles of the old McNary-Haugen farm bill.

In addition to vesting licensing power over distributors and processors in the Secretary, the House Bill permits the flexible use of income from processing taxes. A definite authorization also is given the Secretary to use 30 per cent of the annual customs receipts—estimated at $100,000,000—to pay premiums on farm exports or to make good losses on such exportations.

Another Bonus March

Word has been received here and published in the newspapers that another bonus march "bigger and better than ever," their sponsors claim, has started from West Coast cities. No Women or children are coming with the veterans this time, they have declared. This may be an omen of serious consequences. The veterans and their friends and supporters are rather bitter over the President's veto of their adjusted pay. Washington officials have become apprehensive of the reported march and are said to be preparing for trouble.

of people and how it worked as a boomerang against the small business man and independent merchant.

The terms "evolution" and "revolution" wer explained by Mr. Kaplan when he stated that a socialized society was springing up within the capitalistic system under which we now exist. This, he said, was occurring without the knowledge of the people and was just a common evolutionary process. He likened the terms to the pre-natal stage of an off-spring which he said underwent natural changes, termed evolution, and the birth of the child as being the "revolution." Inasmuch as at birth a radical change takes place in the life of the off-spring, it is a revolution. The socialized idea of government which has been growing, or evolving, will soon be born, or revolved, into a form that the people will recognize, Mr. Kaplan said.

In closing Mr. Kaplan quoted Karl Marx, saying: "Workers unite, you have only your chains (ignorance) to lose. You have a world (intelligence) to gain."

The meeting was called to order by chairman A. G. Anderson who introduced R. M. Aalbu, chairman of the entertaining committee, who took charge of the meeting and introduced Mr. Kaplan.

of people and how it worked as a boomerang against the small business man and independent merchant.

The terms "evolution" and "revolution" wer explained by Mr. Kaplan when he stated that a socialized society was springing up within the capitalistic system under which we now exist. This, he said, was occurring without the knowledge of the people and was just a common evolutionary process. He likened the terms to the pre-natal stage of an off-spring which he said underwent natural changes, termed evolution, and the birth of the child as being the "revolution." Inasmuch as at birth a radical change takes place in the life of the off-spring, it is a revolution. The socialized idea of government which has been growing, or evolving, will soon be born, or revolved, into a form that the people will recognize, Mr. Kaplan said.

In closing Mr. Kaplan quoted Karl Marx, saying: "Workers unite, you have only your chains (ignorance) to lose. You have a world (intelligence) to gain."

The meeting was called to order by chairman A. G. Anderson who introduced R. M. Aalbu, chairman of the entertaining committee, who took charge of the meeting and introduced Mr. Kaplan.

LIFE'S LITTLE JESTS

THE POOR FARMER

A farmer was called up before the milk inspection board and a man in shell-rimmed glasses asked:

"What are you giving your cows now in the way of galactagogues?"

"Wall," replied the farmer, "their sustenance is wholly of vegetable origin, rich in chlorophyll and opulent in butyraceous qualities."

"H—l, watcher feed yer cows?" asked Shellrim.

"Hay an' cawn," replied the farmer.

Cause for Sorrow

"Is your poor husband gone?" asked the colored minister of an aged woman in his flock who had put on heavy mourning.

"Oh, no, suh, he ain't dead," she answered.

"Then why are you wearing black?"

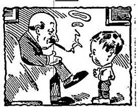
"Ca'se my old man, he's mah second, you know, keeps naggin' an' botherin' me so much Ah's gone into mournin' again foh mah fust husband."—Capper's Weekly.

Conscious Energy

"Haven't you been engaged in some unseemly bickering?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "I don't think the bickering will do any harm and it may be valuable in assuring constituents that although I am silent on really big subjects, I still possess conscious energy."

NO WOODSHEDS



"When I was a lad I was never naughty like you."

"What was the matter with you, pa? Delicate or somethin'?"

Circumstantial Evidence

"Every time you are naughty I seem to get another gray hair," said mother, sorrowfully to her small daughter.

"You sure must have been some child when you were little," replied daughter. "Just look at grandma."

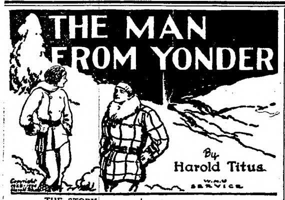
FORUM WANT ADS BRING RESULTS

THE MAN FROM YONDER



By Harold Titus

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

CHAPTER VI.—Elliott is still in something of a daze over the meeting when Brandon strikes again—with dynamite—destroying the railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract.

CHAPTER VII.—By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare.

CHAPTER VIII.—Brandon, seriously alarmed over the successive failures of his plans for stopping the Hoot Owl's logging operations, compels a woman (known only as "Lydia") who is in his power, and against her will, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl she is befriending.

CHAPTER IX.—"Lydia," at a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn McManus, makes public her charges against him. Overwhelmed by the venom of the accusation, Elliott can only make what he himself realizes is a feeble denial of the charge. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for his explanation. Days later, while walking in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead or badly wounded.

CHAPTER X—Elliott's fall has been a ruse to make his enemy believe his attempt at assassination has been successful. A little sleuthing by an emissary of Ben's proves the would-be killer to be Red Bart Delaney, notorious Canadian desperado.

All the way out to camp Dawn snuggled close again Able in his worn old buffalo coat. Now and again she trembled a bit; once she cried softly a few minutes. But much of the time she talked.

"To think it was the man I used to call Uncle who did that thing!" she cried. "Why haven't you told me, Able? Why haven't you warned me?"

"What he's done, what he's been, what he is, were no things for you, Dawn, girl. I've just tried . . . to stand between you and many unpleasant things. You've had your share as it was."

"I could have stood this one more," she replied, stoutly enough. "It hasn't been so bad these last few years, knowing that everybody thinks my father a murderer. I'd just gotten myself above that and now . . . and now . . ."

"What now?" Able asked gently.

She looked at him through tears.

"When a man loves a girl, that girl can't let herself love him, can she, when she's under a cloud herself? She can't bring a man's children into the world and have them whispered about as the grandchildren of a murderer?"

"Dawn! Dawn, girl, don't think that! Why, it's—"

"But it's so, Able! I don't wa-want to talk about it. All I can do for Ben now is to let him know how weak I was to doubt him and to use any influence I may have to protect him from this terrible danger. I will do that; I must do that because it is duty. But it must stop there. It can't go on, you see. Not while I have nothing more than just my faith in my father's good name."

Able, the wise man that he was, did not force the argument. He brought his team to a halt before the Hoot Owl office, gave the reins to Dawn and stepped out.

Martin, the bookkeeper, was the only occupant of the place.

"Where's Ben?" he asked.

The bearded man looked over his shoulder, recognized Able and then his gaze went past the man to the waiting cutter where Dawn sat.

"He's . . ." It seemed as though Martin's voice failed after that word. He half started from his chair and the pen, dropped from flexed fingers, rolled across the ledger sheet. He made a faint sound and in his eyes appeared an expression that startled Able.

"What's wrong, Martin?" he asked in alarm, stepping quickly into the room. "Sick?"

"No . . . all right now," the other said, as if with great effort. "Ben? In the mill, I think."

He picked up his pen, then, and bent over his work.

Able crossed the mill-yard looking for Ben and as he went Martin rose cautiously from his chair, moved quietly to be in line with the window and stared for a long interval at the girl huddled in the robes. His hands worked and his breath was uneven.

"Dawn is here to see you," Able said simply as he encountered Ben. "She had me bring her out so she could talk to you. She's waiting over by the office."

Elliott stood hesitant for an instant; then turned and walked swiftly along the pond. He gave no sign of recognition as he approached the cutter; made no salutation as he came near the girl who sat watching him so steadily. He only spoke her name, when he was at her side. She gave him a small, gloved hand and smiled wanly.

"I have come to say many things, Ben," she began in a strange, strained voice. "To beg forgiveness, to beg other things . . . perhaps to explain a little.

"A week ago tonight,"—struggling, now, to hold her voice steady—"I ran out of the dance hall and on home, thinking that that woman was honest. The time since then, until noon today, has been a nightmare.

"Lydia came to my house at noon. She explained everything. Aunt Em brought her. Lydia told me everything. . . . It was Mr. Brandon who thought out the plan and forced her to do it under threats of some sort. She didn't tell us what the threats were but left our house for the train and is gone from Tincup forever. . . . And I've come to tell you how miserable I feel to think that I was weak enough to act as Mr. Brandon seemed to be sure I would act. . . ."

Relief was singing through Elliott's relief and a great joy, lifting him above rage for Brandon.

"Oh, I'm glad!" he said earnestly. "I've . . . Why, it completely knocked me off my pins! Dawn, it's been terrible for you but . . . but this makes me so happy!"

"I'm happy because you are happy," she said, but something in her tone and expression dampened his enthusiasm, checked his soaring spirits. She was so calm, so steady, so restrained; her mood was not at all that of one who comes joyously to wipe out heartbreaking misunderstanding. "And I'll never forgive myself for . . . for falling into the trap that was set for me, Ben!"

"Why shouldn't you? Any girl would have felt as you did. . . . But it's explained, now. Let's forget it and begin where we left off and find peace and—"

The sharp shake of her head and the quick withdrawal of her hand cut him off.

"There are sterner things to think of, first; quite different things, Ben. That is why I came out here, to talk to you about Bart Delaney. Able has told me what happened yesterday. You don't take it seriously enough. Keep safe until you're certain that the danger is past."

"Hide and skulk while other men protect me? A man can't do that, Dawn! I'll be on my guard, of course. But I can't run away from anybody who is trying to strike from behind. What would these boys here on the job think of me if I did? If I do the safe thing and think of my own skin, some of our workers will tumble to the fact that I've no more courage than most of them, less than plenty. I can't let them down, you see, and still keep my standing in their eyes."

"It isn't worth it, Ben! It's my job, my property you're taking these risks for. It isn't fair to me!"

"I can argue that. I'm not anxious to be put out of the picture yet a while. I'll keep my eyes open. I've already made the move that should stop Delaney from trying me again. Able and the others have gotten you all in a flutter, Dawn. Don't worry. I'm coming to Tincup tonight and I'm going to appear to be thinking about nothing but the errands I have to do. Every second, I'll be on the watch for a crooked move from anybody. I promise you that. And when I've shown myself to people I'll come to see you and talk you into the same way of looking at this situation."

She shook her head.

"I'm asking two things of you. The first is to stay here; the other is not to come to see me. . . . Please!"

She put a hand on his with that plea, and he frowned.

"I can understand your being a little timid about having me around town but I can convince you that I'm right. It's Brandon or me, now, you see. If I run, he wins. . . . But this other: Dawn, don't you want me to see you?"

The girl's lips worked.

"No," she said, ever so faintly. "No. . . . Oh, please don't argue with me, Ben! Please don't come to see me. You don't understand. You may never understand. . . . But I'm begging you from the bottom of my heart not to come and see me again!"

"No, I don't understand. It's . . . why, its . . ." He laughed aloud at his own bewilderment and Able, in the near distance, mistook that laugh born of distress for one of relief and came toward them.

"Well, have you two got matters cleared up?" he asked.

Dawn nodded silently.

"Some things are cleared up," Elliott said. "But there are others. . . . Dawn, won't you explain?"

The girl turned her face to Able.

"I'm ready to go home now," she said weakly.

CHAPTER XII

TEAMS drove from the Hoot Owl toward town through the falling snow that evening. First went Ben Elliott, alone and sending his drivers at a spanking trot, wondering and at odds with himself.

Why was Dawn so obdurate in this matter of having him see her? Why that odd repression, as though she struggled to keep from saying the things that were bursting her heart?

His inability to answer those questions drove him into a dogged mood. He felt like blaming Brandon for this, as well as other troubles.

A half hour behind him came a team from camp, driven by Bird-Eye Blaine. A figure ahead stepped out of the ruts and awaited his approach.

"Town?" the man cried.

"Yup. . . . Hello, Martin; Whoa. . . ."

Blaine lifted the heavy robes for the bookkeeper and then clucked his team on.

"Misther Elliott gone in?" he asked. "He has, eh? . . . 'Nd Misther Red Bart Delaney still persecutin' th' country with his presince likely. Ah, th' b'y, th' b'y!"

Ben turned his team into an alley, hitched and blanketed them, and then made his way between buildings to the town's principal thoroughfare, which was lighted by glaring store fronts. He purchased some articles in a clothing store and did not see Dawn McManus enter, observe him, and then withdraw. When he went out again he did not notice that the girl followed him.

From place to place he went, Dawn behind him in the flying snow and when she had been following so for half an hour, her eyes alert for others who might be watching Elliott, another fell into the train ahead of her. She saw this man step from a store entrance and follow Ben. She hastened to be close and not until she was abreast of him did she recognize John Martin, whom she had seen but once before. He did not turn his head and she dropped back. She had no doubts of his loyalty, from what Ben had told her of his bookkeeper.

For the better part of an hour this double stalking continued while the snow fell thicker and then Elliott turned into a side street and made the next turn into the alley where he had left his team.

Two figures followed him, hastening a bit as he disappeared into the gloom. Martin followed Ben, as Dawn trailed both.

And then, as Elliott drew close and spoke gruffly to his horses, another shadowy figure appeared: it was only a blur in the shadows, crouched and stealthy. The figure swept forward; an arm drew back and upward; it struck and with a muffled grunt Ben Elliott turned, falling sideways and backward under the impact of a blow.

Another voice lifted then in a sharp cry as John Martin ran forward and the indistinct figure which was poised over Elliott, about to strike again, turned, hesitated, whirled and fled.

PENN. CO. AGRIC. ADVISORY CRED. COMM.MEET WED.

Debtor-Creditor Problem Discussed; Recommendations Made to Farmers

The Penington County Agricultural Advisory Credit Committee held their first regular monthly meeting in the County Agent's office at Thief River Falls on May 22, 1935 at 8:00 p. m. Similar committees were recently appointed by Governor Olson, at the request of the Farm Credit Administration in all counties of the state of Minnesota. The Pennington county committee is composed of Hans Anton, St. Hilaire, chairman; H. C. Woolson, Thief River Falls, vice-chairman; Leon J. Kalhire, Thief River Falls secretary; Alfred Lundgren, Thief River Falls, and Reynold Johnson also of Thief River Falls.

These County Agricultural Advisory Credit Committees are composed of public spirited citizens who voluntarily assist in analyzing and in making recommendations for an equitable settlement of difficult debtor-creditor problems among the farmers of their respective communities. No charge is made for the service. Debtors or creditors who submit their problems to such committees are assured of receiving the assistance of the committee and of having their affairs handled in a confidential manner.

The next regular meeting of the committee will be held in the county agent's office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on June 11th at 8:00 p. m.

Any farmer having a debtor-creditor problem which he would like to have the committee consider, may present it at this or any regular meeting. Or he may present it to any member of the committee in person or by letter.

Mr. P. M. Nellermoe, district supervisor of the State Agricultural Advisory Credit Committee attended the committee meeting of May 22 and gave suggestions for carrying on the work in the future.

400 MOTORISTS LOSE LICENSES TO DRIVE CARS

State Bureau Actively Enforcing Law, Highway Commissioner Warns

Thus far in 1935 the Drivers' License bureau has marked up more than 4,000 traffic convictions and approximately 3,000 accident reports against the records of Minnesota automobile drivers, says a bulletin from the state highway department.

The convictions resulted in more than 400 persons in all parts of the state being deprived of their license to drive. Where law violations were not serious enough to warrant revocation or suspension of the license, the cases were recorded on the individual cards kept by the license bureau for all drivers. Should the same drivers be involved in further law violations or accidents, their previous records will be available.

"The legislature kept the provisions of the drivers license law in force, commented N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner. "The drivers license division, with the co-operation of police and sheriffs' forces anl the highway patrol, will continue to administer and enforce this law to the best of its ability. Such safety measures as this must be kept in force if we are to halt the maiming and slaugter of citizens on the public highways.

"Everyone must have his drivers license when at the wheel of a car, and the license should be in good condition and should bear the owner's correct address."

LIGHTNING RACES THRU FARM HOME

Ely.—Nature was evidently in a playful mood last Thursday evening when lightning struck the farm home of John Bouska, 8 miles south of Ely. Entering the house via incoming electric wires the bolt, in the form of a red ball of fire, raced crazily through the entire house and crashed out of the roof. Following the electric wiring the bolt blew out all the light sockets, fuses and radio tubes. Insulators were cracked to bits as occupants of the house watched the ball of fire race from room to room. Reaching the attic, the bolt jumped to a huge rafter, reducing it to splinters before bursting a hole in the roof to escape.

Tumbles From Speeding Car On Spectacles Without Breaking

Fairmont.—Tumbling out of a car at 25 miles an hour and sliding on his head in such a way that his spectacles were scratched as though marked with sand paper, yet were not broken, Bill Graplar escaped what might have been a serious accident with only a few scratches. Bill and Ernest Rowe were returning home to Fairmont from bullhead fishing about 11 p. m. in Rowes car, from which the right front seat had been removed. Bill was sitting next to the driver on a box, and as they made a turn in the road the right front door flew open and with nothing in the way of a seat to grab except the box, Graplar was catapulted out, landing in the road on his head and wrists. Both lenses of his glasses were scratched as though they had been rubbed with sand paper, but neither lens broke. Fortunately the car was only going 20 to 25 miles an hour, and Graplar escaped with only a few scratches on his head and arms.

SQUIRREL GUILTY OF MILK BOTTLE THEFTS

Charges of petty larceny await a squirrel upon his capture as eye witnesses are ready to testify against the defendant. A well matured squirrel recently turned robber and came nearly getting the children of the community into trouble. For a few weeks caps were torn from milk bottles at the Elmer Peterson home and a half inch or so of the contents taken. Agravated by what they thought was a child's trick they spied only to catch a squirrel sink his teeth into the cap, tearing it off and help himself to a good meal.

HORSES LIP PIERCED BY A STRAY BULLET

Bertha.—A stray bullet from some sportsman's gun pierced the lip of a plow horse on the Eleanore Sahli farm two and a half miles south of Bertha. Ben Volkman was driving the team behind the plow, when one of the horses suddenly halted and became very nervous. Examination disclosed that the horse's lower lip near the jaw bone had a bullet wound in it big enough to thrust a finger through. Volkman stated that he heard no gunshot at the time and apparently the bullet had traveled a considerable distance. Evidently the hunter was in a patch of woods and had shot into the air at a crow. It is thought that the shot glanced into the field where Volkman was working.

HUNGRY BURGLARS TAKE PIE, LEAVE CASH

Canby.—J. E. Nelson, proprietor of a Canby restaurant, stood treat on a recent morning to a band of unknown, uninvited guests, as he found after they had made their stealthy departure. Some one pried open the front door of the cafe between midnight and one o'clock and took a lemon pie, a pumpkin pie, a quantity of rolls, candy, gum, peanuts and several cartons of cigarets, all amounting to about $25 worth. They did not molest the cash register, however. It was concluded that the bright light over the register kept them away.

PENN. CO. AGRIC. ADVISORY CRED. COMM.MEET WED.

Debtor-Creditor Problem Discussed; Recommendations Made to Farmers

The Penington County Agricultural Advisory Credit Committee held their first regular monthly meeting in the County Agent's office at Thief River Falls on May 22, 1935 at 8:00 p. m. Similar committees were recently appointed by Governor Olson, at the request of the Farm Credit Administration in all counties of the state of Minnesota. The Pennington county committee is composed of Hans Anton, St. Hilaire, chairman; H. C. Woolson, Thief River Falls, vice-chairman; Leon J. Kalhire, Thief River Falls secretary; Alfred Lundgren, Thief River Falls, and Reynold Johnson also of Thief River Falls.

These County Agricultural Advisory Credit Committees are composed of public spirited citizens who voluntarily assist in analyzing and in making recommendations for an equitable settlement of difficult debtor-creditor problems among the farmers of their respective communities. No charge is made for the service. Debtors or creditors who submit their problems to such committees are assured of receiving the assistance of the committees and of having their affairs handled in a confidential manner.

The next regular meeting of the committee will be held in the county agent's office at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, on June 11th at 8:00 p. m.

Any farmer having a debtor-creditor problem which he would like to have the committee consider, may present it at this or any regular meeting. Or he may present it to any member of the committee in person or by letter.

Mr. P. M. Nellermoe, district supervisor of the State Agricultural Advisory Credit Committee attended the committee meeting of May 22 and gave suggestions for carrying on the work in the future.

400 MOTORISTS LOSE LICENSES TO DRIVE CARS

State Bureau Actively Enforcing Law, Highway Commissioner Warns

Thus far in 1935 the Drivers' License bureau has marked up more than 4,000 traffic convictions and approximately 3,000 accident reports against the records of Minnesota automobile drivers, says a bulletin from the state highway department.

The convictions resulted in more than 400 persons in all parts of the state being deprived of their license to drive. Where law violations were not serious enough to warrant revocation or suspension of the license, the cases were recorded on the individual cards kept by the license bureau for all drivers. Should the same drivers be involved in further law violations or accidents, their previous records will be available.

"The legislature kept the provisions of the drivers license law in force, commented N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner. "The drivers license division, with the co-operation of police and sheriffs' forces anl the highway patrol, will continue to administer and enforce this law to the best of its ability. Such safety measures as this must be kept in force if we are to halt the maiming and slaugter of citizens on the public highways.

"Everyone must have his drivers license when at the wheel of a car, and the license should be in good condition and should bear the owner's correct address."

LIGHTNING RACES THRU FARM HOME

Ely.—Nature was evidently in a playful mood last Thursday evening when lightning struck the farm home of John Bouska, 8 miles south of Ely. Entering the house via incoming electric wires the bolt, in the form of a red ball of fire, raced crazily through the entire house and crashed out of the roof. Following the electric wiring the bolt blew out all the light sockets, fuses and radio tubes. Insulators were cracked to bits as occupants of the house watched the ball of fire race from room to room. Reaching the attic, the bolt jumped to a huge rafter, reducing it to splinters before bursting a hole in the roof to escape.

Tumbles From Speeding Car On Spectacles Without Breaking

Fairmont.—Tumbling out of a car at 25 miles an hour and sliding on his head in such a way that his spectacles were scratched as though marked with sand paper, yet were not broken, Bill Graplar escaped what might have been a serious accident with only a few scratches. Bill and Ernest Rowe were returning home to Fairmont from bullhead fishing about 11 p. m. in Rowes car, from which the right front seat had been removed. Bill was sitting next to the driver on a box, and as they made a turn in the road the right front door flew open and with nothing in the way of a seat to grab except the box, Graplar was catapulted out, landing in the road on his head and wrists. Both lenses of his glasses were scratched as though they had been rubbed with sand paper, but neither lens broke. Fortunately the car was only going 20 to 25 miles an hour, and Graplar escaped with only a few scratches on his head and arms.

SQUIRREL GUILTY OF MILK BOTTLE THEFTS

Charges of petty larceny await a squirrel upon his capture as eye witnesses are ready to testify against the defendant. A well matured squirrel recently turned robber and came nearly getting the children of the community into trouble. For a few weeks caps were torn from milk bottles at the Elmer Peterson home and a half inch or so of the contents taken. Agravated by what they thought was a child's trick they spied only to catch a squirrel sink his teeth into the cap, tearing it off and help himself to a good meal.

HORSES LIP PIERCED BY A STRAY BULLET

Bertha.—A stray bullet from some sportsman's gun pierced the lip of a plow horse on the Eleanore Sahli farm two and a half miles south of Bertha. Ben Volkman was driving the team behind the plow, when one of the horses suddenly halted and became very nervous. Examination disclosed that the horse's lower lip near the jaw bone had a bullet wound in it big enough to thrust a finger through. Volkman stated that he heard no gunshot at the time and apparently the bullet had traveled a considerable distance. Evidently the hunter was in a patch of woods and had shot into the air at a crow. It is thought that the shot glanced into the field where Volkman was working.

HUNGRY BURGLARS TAKE PIE, LEAVE CASH

Canby.—J. E. Nelson, proprietor of a Canby restaurant, stood treat on a recent morning to a band of unknown, uninvited guests, as he found after they had made their stealthy departure. Some one pried open the front door of the cafe between midnight and one o'clock and took a lemon pie, a pumpkin pie, a quantity of rolls, candy, gum, peanuts and several cartons of cigarets, all amounting to about $25 worth. They did not molest the cash register, however. It was concluded that the bright light over the register kept them away.

3 STATES REPRESENTED

Flood Control, Water Conservation, and Sewage Disposal Discussed

Representatives from Minnesota and North and South Dakota and rfom Manitoba, Canada, met in Fargo last Monday to discuss the water problems facing the people who live in the country drained by the Red River and its tributaries. More than 200 persons gathered in the Masonic Temple; the meeting was planned to be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms but because of the size of the crowd another meeting place had to be decided upon.

Governor Welford of N. D. welcomed the group and then turned the meeting over to Gov. Olson of Minnesota, who acted as chairman. A comprehensive program of water conservation, flood control, stream pollution control and other phases of the water problem was outlined and discussed. The program covered eight main topics: the geographic and physical features of the watershed, the need for conservation and regulation of waters; the water problems of the farms; water pollution and sewage disposal; experiences with former control measures, general problems and legal problems and possibilities.

The Meeting was planned by the Minnesota State Planning Board, the North Dakota planning Board and the Greater North Dakota association.

Arthur Douville to take West Point Examination

Arthur Douville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Douville, has sifinified his desire to take an examination to enter West Point Military Academy to fill one of the two appointments that are at Congressman R. T. Buckler's disposal. Seven candidates for admission to the naval and military academies were announced last week by Con. Buckler, and Arthur Douville was named as the principal for one of the two appointments to that institution. Designation of another candidate from this district will be made after further applications have been sent in.

The first naval examinations for Buckler's candidates from this district for the naval academy failed to produce a grade high enough to fill the requirements, and this examination will be the second given for these two appointments.

THIRD PERIOD OF CAMPAIGN STARTS THURS. MORNING

Winning One of the Grand Prizes Depends Upon Candidates'

The third period of the "Good Will Campaign gets under way today. Many of the workers were closely bunched at the close of the second period, so closely that any worker on the list may become the winner of the first prize. It behooves the workers to do all they can during the few remaining days of the campaign.

The winning of one of the fine prizes all depends upon the effort each individual worker is willing to give the campaign, the amount of determination and persistence that they are willing to display during the few remaining days of the drive. A candidate lacking these virtues cannot expect to beat a worker that is applying every ounce of their efforts toward subscription getting. Any person that will only half try cannot expect to reach the zenith of success in this or any other business venture. Many contestants are working with determination for one of these fine prizes. They merit the reward which they assuredly will win.

Several of the candidates report that they have received many promises for subscriptions at a later date. Subscribers and prospective subscribers are asked to co-operate with these workers, in giving them your subscription as soon as they can. By giving your favorite worker your subscription to the Forum now, you earn that candidate many more votes than your subscription will bring at a later date.

Ater the close of the third period there will be another large drop in the vote earning power of subscriptions.

A two-year renewal subscription will earn a candidate 18,000 votes if turned in before June 12th. If turned after that date, but before the close of the campaign, it will earn the candidate only 15,000 votes or a difference of 3,000 votes. A two-year new subscription turned in during the third period will earn a candidate 78,000 votes. If turned in after the close of the third period it will earn only 55,000 votes.

Because of this candidates are asking subscribers to co-operate with them and turn in their subscriptions to the Forum at the earliest possible date.

House of David Wins From Locals 9 to 5

The local baseball team continued its winning streak last Thursday afternoon by defeating the Minnesota Colored Giants, nine to two in a one-sided game. They repeated the feat Sunday and again defeated the same team 12 to 5 in a game played before a small crowd.

Last evening, Wednesday, a large crowd witnessed the first defeat of the local nine in the best game of the season so far, when the locals succumbed to a vicious attack by the be-whiskered gentlemen of the House of David. The game marked the first night game of baseball ever played in this city under the bright floodlights of the visiting team.

In spite of the very cold weather a large crowd gathered early in the evening and saw the House of David defeat the locals nine to five. The winning team barnstorms the country playing teams of the American Association and other first-class teams; and often winning from many of the best teams of the Association.

An automobile driven by an Indian woman was badly wrecked last Sunday afternoon about three miles this side of Oklee, Minnesota. The car which was occupied by two Indian women and a white man, was traveling a high rate of speed when it hit a soft spot in the road. The top of the automobile was sheared off by the wires connected to the pole and the occupants were hurled approximately sixty feet through the air. The accident was witnessed by J. O. Nesse, president of the association, stated yesterday, the list including Winnipeg, which was omitted from the initial announcement thru an oversight.

Chorus singing, and especially male choruses have been an institution among the Norwegian people for several generations. Henry Houglom, well-known soloist of Moorhead, is appearing here with the festival which is under the direction of Louis Waag, director in chief of the association. Dr. J. N. Nesse of this city is president of the Valley group.

Eight male choruses will appear here in the festival, including Fargo, Grand Forks, Devils Lake, Winnipeg, Petersburg, Hatton, Dahlen and Thief River Falls. A special concert orchestra composed of Grand Forks musicians, will participate in the accompaniment. It is expected that from 100 to 125 male voices will be heard in the massed concert.

Differences of Opinion Over Weights And Speeds Results in Epic Footrace

When Greek meets Greek it may create smoke and brimstone, but when men of brawn and Viking blood meet in mortal combat the results are not to be sneezed at either. If you by chance heard some rolls of what seemed like distant thunder last Tuesday, it was not old Thor knocking the corners off the Rocky Mountains, but the climax of a small argument which started when Bill Freylund intimated to Omar Williams that it must be tough to be so big and fat. Omar just didn't take kindly to the insinuations and informed Mr. Freylund that he would wager a pint of grap juice that he could show him a handsome pair of heels in a 100-yard dash.

The challenge was accepted and Frank Tunberg obligingly escorted the contestants to the fairgrounds and after pacing off 100 yards acted as judge and starter. When the earth had ceased trembling and the dust had settled, it was found that Omar Williams had won by a belt buckle. And that settled that. Frank Tunberg confiscated the grapejuice as a fee for acting as official in the contest.

Interviewed last evening, the caretaker of the fairgrounds stated that reports to the effect that the racetrack could not be put back in condition before the county fair opens, are entirely unfounded. The track was not injured, he said.

FASCIST AUSTRIAN TRADE UNION IS THREATENED WITH EXTINCTION

Vienna (TIS).—A new attempt of the Heimwehr led by the Mussolini disciple Prince Stahremberg, to destroy even the Austro-Fascist controlled "united trade union" is under way. During a recent conference of the Heimwehr leaders the chairman of the conference asked for the dissolution of the trade union which "has no right whatever to exist." This, despite the fact that the government controlled so-called trade union has recently completed a new wage agreement with the leading silk companies of Vienna providing a new 10 per cent cut of the workers' wages.

Minnesotans Careless About Mosquito Pests

St. Paul, Minnesota.—Minnesota summers need not be turned into a misery by mosquitos in the opinion of the Public Health Education Committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association expressed in its weekly bulletin today.

Most Mosquitos are bred near home, this bulletin states, and any neighborhood that wanted to combine forces, could eradicate the pests. That people fail to do so is mostly due to carelessness or to lack of knowledge of mosquito habits. Such steps would soon be taken if, in the North, mosquitos caused malaria and yellow fever as they do in the South. Even in this section they may be a menace to health.

Eradication would be worth attempting both from the standpoint of health and comfort in the opinion of the doctors. Certainly the delights of being able to stay in the open and enjoy a Minnesota summer instead of being driven to desperation and stuffy screen porches and houses would repay any effort.

Like other insect pests, mosquitoes breed by the millions. But they must have water in which to breed. The eggs are laid in water clean preferred, but sewage will do. Even a tin can containing a little water hid in the long grass of a vacant lot, or a little rainwater in a leaf-plugged eave will permit breeding of thousands of husky mosquitoes.

To prevent it, mosquitoes must be prevented from reaching water or the larvae must be destroyed. A light film of oil on the water will destroy larvae. Also there are tiny fish which eat the eggs and larvae, which are especially good for garden pools. Streams should be cleared of debris which offer them lodging. On a larger scale other methods are available. In one way or another a little effort is all that is necessary to eradicate the pests.

Chicago Juvenile Pro. Ass'n Bares Gehenna

By W. G. Calderwood

Jessie F. Binford, director of the Juvenile Protective Association of Chicago, in her report to the governing board of the Association, depicts shocking conditions of lawlessness and vice under repeal. "This report," Miss Binford states, "is not made as an argument for or against Prohibition, it is a statement of conditions"

Describing the [illegible], or modern saloons, she says, "The nudity of female performers serves to lure trade for the liquor resort. . . Smutty jests of entertainers, filthy songs, and skits of indecent dialogue and licentious gestures formerly found only in certain deteriorated areas appear now in all parts of the city. . . . Little children are pressed into service . . . . To say nothing of the violation of Child Labor statutes the hours and conditions are utterly unfit for small boys and girls. . . . .

"Experienced 'hostesses' do not hesitate to beg for tips. They make themselves sensually attractive . . . . indulge in loose talk, dance suggestively. . . Typically, one girl told how she had worked a whole night, dancing in three floor shows for 95c commissions, and on another night obtained twelve dollars in tips from a man who was so drunk he did not know what he was doing with his money . . . Youth, beauty, girlish freshness are real boons to the trade.

"Boys and girls under age were patrons . . . Children watched prostitutes openly offering themselves to men, and witnessed appalling scenes of intoxication and debauchery . . . They were impressed by the suggestive entertainment. . .

"The dance-hall girls were shockingly young—some in their middle teens. The character of the dancing in these places can only be described as revolting, an orgy of sexuality of the lowest order. . . . . they departed in automobiles with patrons after a night of heavy drinking and lustful dancing."

The only passage in the report that lightens the gloom of despair is the statement that the Association has been able to close a few of the worst of these gates of Gehenna.

KITTEN RIDES TRAIN TRUCKS 400 MILES SAFELY

Rochester.—Riding the trucks from Kansas City, a kitten was an additional Pullman passenger into Rochester. Its mate was taken off the train at Oelwein, Iowa, but the gray kitten rode the trucks into Rochester and was finally dislodged with a broom in the hands of Carroll D. Scott, car repairman of the Chicago Great Western. When stations employes were able to take but one kitten off the train at Oelwein, trainmen speculated as to whether the second would ride safely into Rochester. Dirty and scared, but safe, the kitten was placed in the basement of the station and quickly climbed rafters and rail employes have been unable to capture her. The kitten will be adopted by station employes.

COUNTY FAIR BOARDS OFFER EXHIBIT SPACE

Majority of County Fair Associations show gratifying readiness to give free space to local Public Safety Committees for safety exhibits. Secretaries of some associations not only report offering of space but also ask what Fair board can do to aid public safety efforts It clearly rests with local Public Safety Committees to get good publicity advantages out of county fair gatherings. Minnesota Public Safety Committee is planning to give as much help as possible.

State Legion Auxiliary To aid Crippled Children

Justice for the cripple will be the rallying cry of the Minnesota Department of the American Legion Auxiliary in an educational campaign contemplated to acquaint the state with the work of the Minnesota Association for Crippled Children.

This announcement was made by Mrs. M. E. Withrow, of International Falls, state president of the Legion Auxiliary, who pointed out that the service of the association fits in with the program of the auxiliary.

The campaign will be held the week of June 16th to 22nd. Other organizations throughout the state will be invited to participate in making that period Crippled Children's Week.

In discussing plans for the effort, Mrs. Withrow said: "The Minnesota Association for Crippled Children is the only statewide organization of its kind. It deserves the support of all citizens for the work that it is doing in reaching a class of handicapped people who are not taken care of by any other organization.

"It is the only organization," she continued, "Which attempts a complete program. Obviously it cannot carry the full program but works in cooperation with other agencies, both public and private. Although organized primarily for crippled children, it also takes in the older people as the problems cannot be separated.

"The specific work which the organization performs is to take care of urgent needs not now covered by other agencies. A survey shows the serious need for the expansion of this work."

The ten district presidents of the auxiliary will serve as district chairmen in carrying out the program. These chairmen are: Mrs. George Schmitz, Caledonia; Mrs. John Fordyce, New Ulm; Mrs. R. R. Barry, South St. Paul; Mrs. Theodore Kaldunski, St. Paul; Mrs. Frank Bush, Minneapolis; Mrs. Edwin Kyle, St. Cloud; Mrs. William P. Robertson, Litchfield; Mrs. G. A. Roland, Proctor; Mrs. L. Stickney, Crookston; Mrs. W. Hoeson, Osseo.

Police See Fan Dance Twice To Get Reliable Information

Minneapolis, Minn. — Detective Al Palmersten waited to see a second performance of a fan dance here in order that he might have reliable information as to how much clothes were worn by Ruby Bae, 20, a night club dancer. Palmersten then went out and rounded up several of his fellow officers to verify what he had seen. "That woman didn't have a nickel's worth of clothing on," said Palmersten. He should know after seeing the performance several times.

FLASH— (Apologies to Mrs. Winchell's son Walter).—A very recent news flash tells the editor of this column that Miss Ruby Bae was featured as a special attraction at a "Minneapolis Policemen's Stag." Her dance at this party was known as a big success, a "Wow."

It seems that it isn't so important what Miss Bae exposes as before what gathering she exposes it.

Loves Two Men; Marries Both

Memphis, Tenn. — Jesse Clyde Cavender was seriously in love with two men, so she married both of them. First she married Earl Longmire at Marion, Ark., and then a few hours later married Dennis Manning. This getting married twice in one day without going to the trouble to get a divorce, doesn't appeal to the authorities, however. Miss Cavender or Mrs. Longmire or whoever she is now, is held for juvenile court in Memphis.

Trout Bites a Dog; That's News

Sherburne, N. Y.—The other day the dog here at the fish farm, walked up to the trout pool to get himself a drink. The dog had no more than started to drink, than he yanked his muzzle out of the water with a yelp. Harry Rogers rushed up to see what the trouble was and found a big trout of about a pound and a half hanging onto the end of the dog's tongue. Rogers told the game warden, the warden told the conservation department and the department made it public to show how game N. Y. trout really are.

Too Tired to be "Held Up"

Chicago, Ill.—Phil Bender was too tired to be held up, so when a bandit entered the place, drew a gun and demanded money Bender told him to "go away. "I mean this, I'm sticking you up," retorted the bandit. "If you don't go away and leave me alone, I'm going to call a policeman," Bender threatened. "Oh, all right, but you're going to be sorry for this some day," the gunman grumbled and left. Bender leaned onto the counter again to finish his rest. It's going to be tough on gunmen if everyone gets too tired to be held up.

Gastonia, N. C.—150 feet of wire from a high tension line carrying 2,600 volts of electricity was stolen here, while the "juice" was on. Electric Co employees are still speculating as to how the feat was accomplished. To steal 150 feet of wire is not at all unusual, but to steal it while it was carrying such a tremendous voltage, is another matter.

N.W. Alumni Association Will Gather on June 29th

The Last Saturday in June has become an event at the Northwest School of Agriculture not only in the minds of recent graduates but also among alumni of earlier years. It is the date of the Alumni Summer reunion. An interesting circle of alumni, former students and friends have been returning each year, thus taking advantage of the opportunity to renew school friendships and to review school and campus experiences.

Preparations for the annual summer gathering have been under way for some time, with Registrar J. W. Minar in charge of preliminary arrangements. The annual baseball game between alumni and students will be one of the features of the afternoon program. This will be followed by the faculty-alumni kittenball game, which has also become an annual event. The alumni dance, which serves as a fitting climax to the day's activities, will attract alumni over a wide area.

The annual business meeting of the Alumni association and the meeting of the "A" club will also be held during the day.

The 1935 reunion will be the occasion for special reunions of the classes of 1910, 1915, 1920, 1925 and 1930. Many members of these classes are planning to attend. For the Class of 1935 this will be their first meeting; hence, a perfect attendance is desired.

I believe in the spirit of peace, and in sole and absolute reliance on truth and the application of it to the hearts and consciences of the people. I do not believe that the weapons of liberty ever have been, or can be, the weapons of despotism. I know that those of despotism are the sword, the revolver, the cannon, the bombshell;—and therefore, the weapons to which tyrants cling and upon which they depend are not the weapons for me, as a friend of liberty.

HONOR TO THE PIONEERS

The writer who conducts this column has felt keenly that he should pay some tribute, so justly due, to the early pioneers of newspaper editing and publishing in Thief River Falls. With the suspension of the Grygla Eagle the last venture of those pioneers passed into eternity. We appreciate that the publishers of the Eagle choose to turn its subscription list over to the Forum, believing that in so doing they felt they were turning it over to the paper which, tho young in years, more nearly represented the spirit of progress that has always typified the true pioneers than any other in the territory.

We have on several occasions attempted to write something to and for the honor of those pioneers and each time our puny efforts have been relegated to the wastebasket, because altho we came to Thief River Falls as an emigrant boy in 1902 and "circulated around,' in Minnesota all these years, we did not become a resident of the city until 1927 and our contacts with the newspaper business were entirely nil, up to 1932. We might talk thru our hat sometimes in discussing economics and politics, but we can not commit ourselves to such error in speaking of the pioneers.

It is therefore with some pleasure that we print herewith a letter which we have received from one of those early pioneers of the Fourth Estate in Thief River Falls. Being himself a pioneer, and a son of the pioneers, his letter carries more weight than any efforts of ours.

Dear Editor:

Having wielded the editorial pencil with more or less reckless abandon since the latter '90's I feel that my promotion (or demotion) to the classification of "typographer" hasn't robbed me of the ability to contribute an occasional literary gem.

Having been identified, parentally and actively, with the newspaper game in Thief River Falls since May, 1891, I feel that I am not intruding by submitting this contribution. All of which has been incited by the recent discontinuation of the Grygla Eagle, and the absorption of its subscription list by the Forum.

Personally I am a total stranger to the boys at the helm of the Forum. I conjecture at the number of their employees who may be former pals and co-workers. In my 34 years as a resident of Thief River Falls, I have seen many papers come and go. My first journalistic venture, the Times,—I presume it still alive. As its founder and publisher for two years, I was unable to receive a life-time subscription. Maybe the present editors, whose Dad and my Dad pioneered together in Marshall county in the early 90's, have some antagonistic attitude towards me. Maybe not!

Anyway and albeit, this communication has to do with the Grygla Eagle and Dad and Mother.

Years ago when Northern Minnesota was "Indian territory," H. E. Mussey and his bride entered Minnesota journalism through the Warren Sheaf. It was in Warren in 1886 that the writer entered the printing game. In 1891, the Musseys moved to Thief River Falls, where the head of the family purchased the Thief River Falls Press, merged in 1913 with the News and then in 1915 with the Times. The Times was started in 1911 by H. E. Mussey and the writer.

Harvey Mussey, believe it or not, put Thief River Falls on the map. His list of "firsts" is so long one hates to risk contradiction by relation. He agitated and secured the first drainage ditch. He started and was first chief of the fire department. He started erection of the first home east of the river. He was the first rural carrier on the first mail route out of the city, and there are many more "firsts" if one cared to mention them.

When the Musseys entered the Grygla territory, they did not "run out" on the other section. They just simply continued their pioneering and picked on Grygla, which was lucky for Grygla.

Up and down with their little community, fighting its bank failures and business adverses with a confidence that always paid real dividends, these "just folks" still retain the respect of everyone whome they call "intimate friends" or "just acquaintances."

And now they've called it quits as far as the Grygla Eagle is concerned. 'Tis true, they've not made the Eagle scream for a couple of years, but the Mussey blood was there. And now that the Eagle has folded its wings and called for "30," it seems only just that proper honor be paid those pioneers, who will always be remembered, not for their present status, but for what they have done in their 55 years as boosters for Northern Minnesota.

So:—

Down the lane of time they go, arm and arm together.
Those two old pals, who cannot know, that this is stormy weather.

They've always been the pals of old-Sweethearts faithful and true.
Always hunting the rainbow's gold—but always mindful of you.

And now they've called their life task done, and settled back for a rest,
God's Grace is the one big prize they've won. Say
Musseys' your poorest beats our best.

THE PROCESS OF EMANCIPATION

"They set the Slave free, striking off his chains . .
Then he was as much a slave as ever . . .
He was still bound by fear and superstition,
By ignorance, suspicion and savagery . . .
His slavery was not in the chains but in himself."
—James Oppenheim.

Now news comes from the south that a new machine has been introduced which will pick cotton better than can be done by hand, with no injury to the bushes, with less loss in grading than hand picked, and that can pick as much cotton in seven hours as the average fast cotton picker can pick in a season.

The advent of this machine bids fair to be cataclysmic. Its general use will replace some over three million cotton pickers who must then seek a livelihood in other fields or join the relief lines. Its effects on the New Deal's attempt to bolster up capitalism can only be surmised, but its effect on the economic order of the future is all too apparent.

The advent of the reaper was comparatively gradual. It was introduced at a time when there was a broad and open market for small grains. During a time of economic scarcity. It was absorbed slowly due to the fact that the farmers were the land owners who must by force of necessity eke out the purchase price with their own labor. The cotton picking machine comes at a time when there is already an overproduction of cotton. It comes at a time when the ownership of the cotton lands has passed into the hands of a comparatively few men who have the means to purchase the machines. Men who have not picked cotton, but have hired it picked by human labor recruited from the sharecroppers and the "poor white trash" and negro labor of the South. We are told that hand picked cotton at 5-6 cents per pound is unprofitable while the machine will make cotton at 5-6 cents a profitable crop. The result is inevitable.

And so the process of freeing human bodies from labor proceeds rapidly, and with the advent of the cotton picking machine over three million workers will be relieved of work and with it their bread and butter. Meager as that livelihood may have been, it kept body and soul together.

Doesn't this latest development of labor-saving machinery bring to the fore with a decided emphasis the fact that our education and our emancipation is lopsided? Is it not a fact that while we have freed men's bodies we have failed to free their minds?

The Twentieth Century has, with its development of labor-saving machinery, changed an economy of scarcity to an economy of abundance while we are still, in our political science and in our economic philosophy living in an era of scarcity. We still believe in and attempt to practice a capitalistic economy, which to survive must rely upon profit. and profit depends upon a scarcity. That fact has been so amply demonstrated during the past few years that it should not meet with denial from any intelligent person.

It seems quite apparent therefore that if we are to be truly free—if we are to see a race completely emancipated, we must teach and inaugurate a new social, political and economic philosophy which will make it possible for the human race to enjoy its new freedom. That means production for use and not for profit. That can only be attained with cooperation—and the collective ownership of things collectively used. There is no middle course and the New Deal philosophy of stabilized capitalism is a chimera. The invention of the new cotton picking machine hastens the destruction of a capitalism which the New Deal has attempted to save from itself.

THE SOVIET AIR CRASH
(Minnesota Leader)

The Maxim Gorky, world's largest land plane, is a tangled mass of ruins and 50 people are dead because one man, pilot of a small accompanying plane, would not accept discipline. Instructed not to "stunt" near the big plane he deliberately disobeyed orders and crashed into the other.

The Gorky was the most magnificent thing ever to take to the air. It was 109 feet in length and had a wing spread of 200 feet, 100 feet on each side. Its motors were capable of producing 7,000 horsepower when in flight. It carried a complete newspaper office including a rotary press, a radio broadcasting station, an automatic telephone station, a photographic laboratory, a motion picture projecting room, a cafe, sleeping quarters and a fully equipped bathroom. All that in addition to ordinary passenger accomodations.

The smaller machine was an ordinary pursuit plane which "looked like a gnat" as it approached the other. Its lone aviator, Baglin, had been carefully instructed by representatives of millions of Russian people not to attempt "trick" flying. But high above those who had elevated him he would have none of their discipline. So he "stunted." And paid for it with his life. Unfortunately half a hundred worthwhile humans crashed into eternity with him.

Men who will not accept discipline should NEVER be elevated, politically or otherwise. There is a lesson for the Farmer-Labor movement in the Soviet air crash. That lesson is to pay closer attention to the kind and caliber of men it puts in nomination for high places. No matter how humble the office the man selected for it is dangerous unless he will abide by the decision of the majority.

A "gnat" piloted by a self-inflated fool crashed to earth the largest land plane ever built. This should be taken into account when nominating men for even the most minor positions of authority aboard the ship of state.

BERGDOLL
(St. Paul Daily News)

It is getting a look at the newspapers of 1917 to read that the wife of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll is in this country trying to gain a pardon for her draft-dodging husband.

What a furor the Bergdoll affair created, at the time! We made ourselves feel that it was practically as important to put this man in jail as it was to defeat the kaiser.

We compared him with Benedict Arnold; we made him a sort of scapegoat for all our war passions, and he became, for a brief time, the chief villain of contemporary American life.

Yet all that happened a long time ago, and the passions of those days are dead, and what seemed very dreadful and shocking then no longer moves us very greatly.

Mrs. Bergdoll will probably fail in her mission, and her husband will stay in Germany, but does the ordinary citizen, today, care very much about what happens in the case?

We have other things to be indignant about, now, than the fact that an American of German ancestry managed to dodge the draft of 18 years ago.

The veto of the Patman bonus bill and the sustaining of that veto by the United States senate, in view of the economic situation with which this nation is confronted, is neither good economic reasoning nor good politics.

The natinal administration can't help finding that out before very long.—The Progressive, Madison, Wis.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

"There is not a single disease that alcohol cures. Since alcohol will cure no disease, it is not a medicine and has no place in medical practice. We have no place inside the body for alcohol; be it wine, beer, booze. It only befuddles the brain, and makes the heart and lungs overwork to get rid of it."—Dr. Howard A. Kelly, John Hopkins University.

"Beer is the most harmful of alcoholic drinks. Thousands become stupid and brutalized by beer. The moderate use of alcoholic drinks is useless and in a high degree harmful. The liquor traffic not only ruins other industries, but the bodies and souls of men."—Prof E. Von Bunge, in an address before the University of Basle, Switzerland.

THE ROBOTS ARE COMING

By Gilbert A. Brattland

You have read about a fictional mechanical man called a robot. The story goes that a master mind built mechanical men to do the labor of the world. Perfected, they eventually conspired, turned upon their creator and destroyed him. The dream of a writer of fiction, you say. Look about you and see if it is not rapidly becoming an accomplished fact.

Men on the labor market are bought and sold, not for what they are but for what they can do. Just like machinery. In dealing with human labor as merely a physical body to be employed, they have overlooked the human equation.

Physical man is not merely a physical body. He is also human, having emotions, thoughts, reasoning powers, and a soul. He is also possessed of all the human weaknesses. As such, he is an uncertain factor and becomes an expensive tool in a complex industrial plan. Industrial corporations in the present age want speed, efficiency, reliability and untiring production at low cost. They adopted the man-killing piece-work system and further intensified production with machinery.

The pace was speeded up to the limit. The piece work system gave them the key. Inventors then produced the machines. Lo and behold, robots became actual existing facts. One beauty about these mechanical men, devices, is that they will not belong to labor unions, they will not vote at elections, they will not read and they will do no individual or collective thinking. They will take orders explicitly and execute them. They will work 24 hours a day without complaint, unregulated by any labor law and ask no pay except mere maintenance.

Once in a while individual machines will become mechanically sick. There are many like them in reserve to do the work. More can be made as conditions require. There is no labor glut or labor shortage. No injunction, damage action or compensation suits started. What an industrial paradise.

We have all along known how highly specialized machinery has been displacing man labor, increasing steadily the ranks of the unemployed. Quantity production is the frenzied cry of super-industrialism and milions of robots will grind it out. The robot man of fiction is here. Not tomorrow or the day after, but now. Every day it is being more perfected. It is mastering more and more trades. It is doing more and more of man's labor. Shall it some day rise up in its perfection and destroy its creator?

"It's Crazy to Be Poor"

"It's Crazy to be poor"—so Mrs. Minnnie Shanks of Portland, Oregon, found out, according to the New Masses. Mrs. Shanks was an active workers in the lumber strike on the Coast—apparently she became too active, for a physician committed her to an insane asylum on the charge that she suffered from "delusion of persecution."

Now, delusion of persecution is a very real mental illness, not uncommon, and occurring in people of all walks of life; but in this particular instance, the physician later admitted that the woman was perfectly sane, and that he had sent her to the institution because she needed rest and regular food!

Even after admitting that she did need rest and regular food, the fact remains that this proceeding becomes a powerful weapon in the hands of the ruling class. A worker becomes too insistent in his demands, and presto! he suffers from a delusion of some kind, and is put away to cool off. Anyway you look at it, it's a crazy system; and the craziest belief is that some people must be poor.

Love of Country and Beauty Contests

"Our girls are more beautiful than yours," says one Town to another; and numerous beauty contests are held to prove the fact. It is the custom of Chambers of Commerce in our more enterprising cities to put on a bathing beauty contest every so often, and even nations as a whole indulge in such advertising stunts.

We have with us today Mademoiselle Elizabeth Pitz, a charming miss who won the title of "Miss France" in such a beauty contest. She got along swell until someone discovered that she had been born in the Saar. This so impaired her beauty in the eyes of the French people that she was forced to resign. To a Frenchman, German girls cannot be beautiful.

We haven't progressed very much from the time when each man's family was barricaded against all the rest. Love of country has artificially segregated people of the same race. Looking backward over the history of nations, one wonders how any progress was made at all; and after all, have we made any progress?

Kidnaping Still Goes On

The $200,000 Weyerhauser kidnaping proved one thing—that the most stringent means of treating the symptoms of a disease does not cure it. It was hoped that capital punishment of kidnapers would put a check on the new racket, but it appears not to have been abated in the least.

But I predict that the Weyerhauser kidnapers will be rounded up by Uncle Sam's G-men, and that they will be sorry, and that they will make way for bigger and better kidnapings.

Racketeers should know better: their tactics betray them. For when a capitalist robs the people, that's business; and when a capitalist robs a capitalist, that's high finance; but when a racketeer muscles in and robs a capitalist, that's a crime punishable by death. I'm not apologizing for any of them; but I ask you, what else could you expect under the circumstances?

Have You Seen Public Enemy No. 1?

Mr. Average Citizen has a hard time keeping up with the procession. With the nation's G-men in action, for instance, it is a chore to memorize the name of Public Enemy No. 1 from day to day—his name changes so often as one after another of our unfortunate small fry of racketeering is wiped off.

I don't know his name, but I think Public Enemy No. 1 is thinking up ways and means to feed the unemployed with the least cost; he's the gink who prods public-spirited men and women into yelling blue murder against the "reds" and finally, I think he's to blame for the existence of all racketeers and gunmen. If it wasn't for him, they could make a living by safer and less nerve-racking methods.

QUALITY PRODUCTION

By Chas. D. Egley, Manager
Farmers Union Livestock Commission, So. St. Paul, Minn

"Do you know, Mr. Dairy Farmer, that the total value of dairy products produced in the United States is five times larger than the total value of the United States grain crop?" says the dairy commissioner of one of our northwest states. And then after writing several more paragraphs to show the importance of this industry (with reference to same) he says:

"So you can readily see that it is to the advantage of the dariy farmer as much as to the creamery man to produce a higher grade of butter than we are today making in our state. In other words "quality" is boosted with at least the implication that that is the solution of the dairy problem.

From a standpoint of public health, I am for the production of a quality product, but from a standpoint of solving the farmers' economic problem, I say "BUNK." I think we should want to produce a high quality product—if not that it gives us a personal pleasure and pride to produce a high quality producet for others, then because we should want to produce that kind of food for our own families at least. Which reminds me of a story I heard, as follows:

"It is said of a certain farm lady that she brought some butter in to the local store, and after selling the butter to the storekeeper, asked to buy a pound of butter at the same store. The storekeeper looked at her rather funny, and said, "Wy do you buy butter, immediately after you have sold butter." "Well," the lady is reputed to have said, "A mouse died in the cream out of which I made this butter. What people don't know won't hurt them. Somebody else can eat that butter. I want to buy back another pound of different butter."

"And continuing the story it is said the storekeeper then went into the basement of his store, shaped this butter up a little different, brought it back up stairs and sold a pound of this same butter back to the lady who had brought the butter in. And so I say we should want to produce a high quality product. Who knows but what sometimes we might be eating our own product.

But from a standpoint of making money, I have seen the farmer robbed of high quality products as well as low quality products. Whether mice die in the cream, or whether they don't, the other fellow still sets the price on everything you buy and sell under our present social order, and he sees to it that the spread between the two is so wide you are lucky if you make both ends meet.

I have no objection to educational progress designed to improve the quality of our products, so long as there is nothing wrapped up in with this educational program to fool the farmers into believing that that is all that's necessary to solve their economic problems. What we need worse than improvement of quality or quantity is a system of distribution—a marketing system—where exploitation thru private profit is abolished.

Until that is done farmers and workers will not receive in pay the full value of the things they produce. If they do not get the full value of the things they produce they cannot buy back as much as they produce. And then these so-called surpluses accumulate, and we have to have suffering in the midst of plenty. That thing can only be corrected thru the building of a new social order where production and distribution is carried on for use, and not for profit. The co-operative system.

FARMER-LABOR PRESS SERVICE
By
H. G. Teigan

It makes some difference to the people who holds public office in the state of Minnesota.

No better illustration can be found than in the change made in the personnel of the state tax commission. The present commissionis now made up entirely of men appointed by Governor Floyd B. Olson. The members of the commission as now constituted are: George E. Walace of Minneapolis, Harry Boyle of Duluth, and George Gage of Olivia.

Billion on Tax Rolls

The state tax commission is putting on the tax rolls of the state more than one billion dollars in untaxed monies and credits. According to a recent issue of the Minnesota Leader, the tax dodging investigation authorized by the 1933 legislature has accomplished the following:

Placed on the tax rolls untaxed monies and credits $221,326.00.

In process of final assessment and collection, $983,000,000.

Total monies and credits, $1,204,326,000.

Property, $22,106,313.00.

Monies and credits are subject to a tax of 3 mills which will net $3,612,000. The untaxed property now being placed on the tax rolls will approximate, including penalties, $1,780,000. The grand total is nearly $5,400,000.

Legislature Balks

The legislature's refusal to appropriate any more money for the purpose of uncovering tax dodging by the "fat boys" ought to be sufficient testimony in itself as to the character of the lawmaking body of 1935. The thing that makes this betrayal all the more flagrant is that the majority in each of the two houses of the legislature talked much of wanting to pass legislation to "relieve real estate." What they apparently wanted was not to relieve the farmers and the home-owners of the state, but to obtain further relief for the big tax-dodgers who are already well in the clear in respect to the payment of taxes.

Administration Acts

Should all the back taxes of the corporate excess variety be collected it would run far into the millions. This can be seen by the fact that the Northern States Power Company, one of the most successful of the tax-dodgers, owes $,401,327 for the two years 1933 and 1934. The tax commission, a few days ago. issued an order requiring county auditor Al. P. Erickson, of Hennepin county, to enter upon his books the amount due from the company for the two year period.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

We don't grow old by merely living a number of years, we grow old if we fail to spend vacations with Nature.

Whether at seventy or five years, there is in every heart the sense of wonder, an appetite for "what's next" and there is no way that such a natural desire can be so wholesomely gratified as the days spent in the heart of Nature.

Nature is rich with health-producing environments.

To the health-minded, the kind of vacation they seek is never an expense, it is an investment. An investment that pays big dividends. The dividends paid are restored energy, rested nerves, buoyancy, self-control and disease-resisting power. The whole family gets re-created by Nature's healing virtues.

Dollars spent for a Nature Vacation will save dollars in medical care.

Nature calls and pays "in the good old summertime." It creates new discoveries including new and pleasant friendships.

Nature says, "I am come that you might have life and that you might have it abundantly."

N. S. P. Can Pay

It is contended by newspapers and flunkies of the power company that to enforce collection of the taxes due under the law would force the company into receivership. Surely the Northern States Power company can well afford to pay the taxes for the two years mentioned, for its net earnings for the years 1933 and 1934, after paying "operating expenses, maintenance and taxes" amounts to more than $33,000,000.

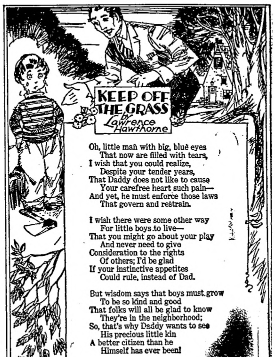
If all back taxes should be paid, it is barely possible that it would go hard with the company, but the law and the officials having to do with its enforcement can hardly be to blame for that. Had the taxes been paid when they came due there would have been no difficulty experienced by the company in making the payments. Instead of paying its taxes as the average citizen did, the company, like others of its ilk, connived with others of its ilk, hrdllwwsh with previous tax commissions and pocketed the money due the state.

Computed Yearly Capital

In computing the corporate excess taxes due, Williaim A. Anderson, former Mayor of Minneapolis, and special investigator for the tax commission, capitalized the company's income for the last 5 years, and deducted from the average yearly capitalization thus shown the valuation upon which the corporation has paid taxes. This is the method accepted and approved by the courts, the country over, in the absence of market value.

In making the computation for 1933, Mr. Anderson found the net earnings for the 5 years, 1929 to 1932, inclusive, to have been $42,141-968. Capitalized on a 7 per cent income basis, this income showed an average annual capital stock valuation of $120,401,624. But the company had paid taxes on a valuation of $53,439,831 for 1933, so this figure was deducted from the computed total value, leaving a taxable corporate excess of 66,965,793. At the [illegible]-mill tax rate for the year, based on 40 per cent full and true valuation, taxes of $1,953,885 should have been paid.

For 1933, the capital value was computed at $115,245,442, and the corporate excess at $61,805,611. Thus the 99-mill tax rate for 1934 would yield $2,447,442 for that year, or a grand total of taxes due of $4,401,327.



Oh, little man with big, blue eyes
That now are filled with tears,
I wish that you could realize,
Despite your tender years,
That Daddy does not like to cause
Your carefree heart such pain—
And yet, he must enforce those laws
That govern and restrain.

I wish there were some other way
For little boys to live—
That you might go about your play
And never need to give
Consideration to the rights
Of others; I'd be glad
If your instinctive appetites
Could rule, instead of Dad.

But wisdom says that boys must grow
To be so kind and good
That folks will all be glad to know
They're in the neighborhood;
So, that's why Daddy wants to see
His precious little kin
A better citizen than he
Himself has ever been!

I believe in the spirit of peace, and in sole and absolute reliance on truth and the application of it to the hearts and consciences of the people. I do not believe that the weapons of liberty ever have been, or can be, the weapons of despotism. I know that those of despotism are the sword, the revolver, the cannon, the bombshell;—and therefore, the weapons to which tyrants cling and upon which they depend are not the weapons for me, as a friend of liberty.

HONOR TO THE PIONEERS

The writer who conducts this column has felt keenly that he should pay some tribute, so justly due, to the early pioneers of newspaper editing and publishing in Thief River Falls. —James Oppenheim.

Now news comes from the south that a new machine has been introduced which will pick cotton better than can be done by hand, with no injury to the bushes, with less loss in grading than hand picked, and that can pick as much cotton in seven hours as the average fast cotton picker can pick in a season.

The advent of this machine bids fair to be cataclysmic. Its general use will replace some over three million cotton pickers who must then seek a livelihood in other fields or join the relief lines. Its effects on the New Deal's attempt to bolster up capitalism can only be surmised, but its effect on the economic order of the future is all too apparent.

The advent of the reaper was comparatively gradual. It was introduced at a time when there was a broad and open market for small grains. During a time of economic scarcity. It was absorbed slowly due to the fact that the farmers were the land owners who must by force of necessity eke out the purchase price with their own labor. The cotton picking machine comes at a time when there is already an overproduction of cotton. It comes at a time when the ownership of the cotton lands has passed into the hands of a comparatively few men who have the means to purchase the machines. Men who have not picked cotton, but have hired it picked by human labor recruited from the sharecroppers and the "poor white trash" and negro labor of the South. We are told that hand picked cotton at 5-6 cents per pound is unprofitable while the machine will make cotton at 5-6 cents a profitable crop. The result is inevitable.

And so the process of freeing human bodies from labor proceeds rapidly, and with the advent of the cotton picking machine over three million workers will be relieved of work and with it their bread and butter. Meager as that livelihood may have been, it kept body and soul together.

Doesn't this latest development of labor-saving machinery bring to the fore with a decided emphasis the fact that our education and our emancipation is lopsided? Is it not a fact that while we have freed men's bodies we have failed to free their minds?

The Twentieth Century has, with its development of labor-saving machinery, changed an economy of scarcity to an economy of abundance while we are still, in our political science and in our economic philosophy living in an era of scarcity. We still believe in and attempt to practice a capitalistic economy, which to survive must rely upon profit. and profit depends upon a scarcity. That fact has been so amply demonstrated during the past few years that it should not meet with denial from any intelligent person.

It seems quite apparent therefore that if we are to be truly free—if we are to see a race completely emancipated, we must teach and inaugurate a new social, political and economic philosophy which will make it possible for the human race to enjoy its new freedom. That means production for use and not for profit. That can only be attained with cooperation—and the collective ownership of things collectively used. There is no middle course and the New Deal philosophy of stabilized capitalism is a chimera. The invention of the new cotton picking machine hastens the destruction of a capitalism which the New Deal has attempted to save from itself.

THE SOVIET AIR CRASH
(Minnesota Leader)

The Maxim Gorky, world's largest land plane, is a tangled mass of ruins and 50 people are dead because one man, pilot of a small accompanying plane, would not accept discipline. Instructed not to "stunt" near the big plane he deliberately disobeyed orders and crashed into the other.

The Gorky was the most magnificent thing ever to take to the air. It was 109 feet in length and had a wing spread of 200 feet, 100 feet on each side. Its motors were capable of producing 7,000 horsepower when in flight. It carried a complete newspaper office including a rotary press, a radio broadcasting station, an automatic telephone station, a photographic laboratory, a motion picture projecting room, a cafe, sleeping quarters and a fully equipped bathroom. All that in addition to ordinary passenger accomodations.

The smaller machine was an ordinary pursuit plane which "looked like a gnat" as it approached the other. Its lone aviator, Baglin, had been carefully instructed by representatives of millions of Russian people not to attempt "trick" flying. But high above those who had elevated him he would have none of their discipline. So he "stunted." And paid for it with his life. Unfortunately half a hundred worthwhile humans crashed into eternity with him.

Men who will not accept discipline should NEVER be elevated, politically or otherwise. There is a lesson for the Farmer-Labor movement in the Soviet air crash. That lesson is to pay closer attention to the kind and caliber of men it puts in nomination for high places. No matter how humble the office the man selected for it is dangerous unless he will abide by the decision of the majority.

A "gnat" piloted by a self-inflated fool crashed to earth the largest land plane ever built. This should be taken into account when nominating men for even the most minor positions of authority aboard the ship of state.

BERGDOLL
(St. Paul Daily News)

It is getting a look at the newspapers of 1917 to read that the wife of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll is in this country trying to gain a pardon for her draft-dodging husband.

What a furor the Bergdoll affair created, at the time! We made ourselves feel that it was practically as important to put this man in jail as it was to defeat the kaiser.

We compared him with Benedict Arnold; we made him a sort of scapegoat for all our war passions, and he became, for a brief time, the chief villain of contemporary American life.

Yet all that happened a long time ago, and the passions of those days are dead, and what seemed very dreadful and shocking then no longer moves us very greatly.

Mrs. Bergdoll will probably fail in her mission, and her husband will stay in Germany, but does the ordinary citizen, today, care very much about what happens in the case?

We have other things to be indignant about, now, than the fact that an American of German ancestry managed to dodge the draft of 18 years ago.

The veto of the Patman bonus bill and the sustaining of that veto by the United States senate, in view of the economic situation with which this nation is confronted, is neither good economic reasoning nor good politics.

The natinal administration can't help finding that out before very long.—The Progressive, Madison, Wis.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

"There is not a single disease that alcohol cures. Since alcohol will cure no disease, it is not a medicine and has no place in medical practice. We have no place inside the body for alcohol; be it wine, beer, booze. It only befuddles the brain, and makes the heart and lungs overwork to get rid of it."—Dr. Howard A. Kelly, John Hopkins University.

"Beer is the most harmful of alcoholic drinks. Thousands become stupid and brutalized by beer. The moderate use of alcoholic drinks is useless and in a high degree harmful. The liquor traffic not only ruins other industries, but the bodies and souls of men."—Prof E. Von Bunge, in an address before the University of Basle, Switzerland.

THE ROBOTS ARE COMING

By Gilbert A. Brattland

You have read about a fictional mechanical man called a robot. The story goes that a master mind built mechanical men to do the labor of the world. Perfected, they eventually conspired, turned upon their creator and destroyed him. The dream of a writer of fiction, you say. Look about you and see if it is not rapidly becoming an accomplished fact.

Men on the labor market are bought and sold, not for what they are but for what they can do. Just like machinery. In dealing with human labor as merely a physical body to be employed, they have overlooked the human equation.

Physical man is not merely a physical body. He is also human, having emotions, thoughts, reasoning powers, and a soul. He is also possessed of all the human weaknesses. As such, he is an uncertain factor and becomes an expensive tool in a complex industrial plan. Industrial corporations in the present age want speed, efficiency, reliability and untiring production at low cost. They adopted the man-killing piecework system and further intensified production with machinery.

The pace was speeded up to the limit. The piece work system gave them the key. Inventors then produced the machines. Lo and behold, robots became actual existing facts. One beauty about these mechanical men, devices, is that they will not belong to labor unions, they will not vote at elections, they will not read and they will do no individual or collective thinking. They will take orders explicitly and execute them. They will work 24 hours a day without complaint, unregulated by any labor law and ask no pay except mere maintenance.

Once in a while individual machines will become mechanically sick. There are many like them in reserve to do the work. More can be made as conditions require. There is no labor glut or labor shortage. No injunction, damage action or compensation suits started. What an industrial paradise.

We have all along known how highly specialized machinery has been displacing man labor, increasing steadily the ranks of the unemployed. Quantity production is the frenzied cry of super-industrialism and milions of robots will grind it out. The robot man of fiction is here. Not tomorrow or the day after, but now. Every day it is being more perfected. It is mastering more and more trades. It is doing more and more of man's labor. Shall it some day rise up in its perfection and destroy its creator?

"It's Crazy to Be Poor"

"It's Crazy to be poor"—so Mrs. Minnnie Shanks of Portland, Oregon, found out, according to the New Masses. Mrs. Shanks was an active workers in the lumber strike on the Coast—apparently she became too active, for a physician committed her to an insane asylum on the charge that she suffered from "delusion of persecution."

Now, delusion of persecution is a very real mental illness, not uncommon, and occurring in people of all walks of life; but in this particular instance, the physician later admitted that the woman was perfectly sane, and that he had sent her to the institution because she needed rest and regular food!

Even after admitting that she did need rest and regular food, the fact remains that this proceeding becomes a powerful weapon in the hands of the ruling class. A worker becomes too insistent in his demands, and presto! he suffers from a delusion of some kind, and is put away to cool off. Anyway you look at it, it's a crazy system; and the craziest belief is that some people must be poor.

Love of Country and Beauty Contests

"Our girls are more beautiful than yours," says one Town to another; and numerous beauty contests are held to prove the fact. It is the custom of Chambers of Commerce in our more enterprising cities to put on a bathing beauty contest every so often, and even nations as a whole indulge in such advertising stunts.

We have with us today Mademoiselle Elizabeth Pitz, a charming miss who won the title of "Miss France" in such a beauty contest. She got along swell until someone discovered that she had been born in the Saar. This so impaired her beauty in the eyes of the French people that she was forced to resign. To a Frenchman, German girls cannot be beautiful.

We haven't progressed very much from the time when each man's family was barricaded against all the rest. Love of country has artificially segregated people of the same race. Looking backward over the history of nations, one wonders how any progress was made at all; and after all, have we made any progress?

Kidnaping Still Goes On

The $200,000 Weyerhauser kidnaping proved one thing—that the most stringent means of treating the symptoms of a disease does not cure it. It was hoped that capital punishment of kidnapers would put a check on the new racket, but it appears not to have been abated in the least.

But I predict that the Weyerhauser kidnapers will be rounded up by Uncle Sam's G-men, and that they will be sorry, and that they will make way for bigger and better kidnapings.

Racketeers should know better: their tactics betray them. For when a capitalist robs the people, that's business; and when a capitalist robs a capitalist, that's high finance; but when a racketeer muscles in and robs a capitalist, that's a crime punishable by death. I'm not apologizing for any of them; but I ask you, what else could you expect under the circumstances?

Have You Seen Public Enemy No. 1?

Mr. Average Citizen has a hard time keeping up with the procession. With the nation's G-men in action, for instance, it is a chore to memorize the name of Public Enemy No. 1 from day to day—his name changes so often as one after another of our unfortunate small fry of racketeering is wiped off.

I don't know his name, but I think Public Enemy No. 1 is thinking up ways and means to feed the unemployed with the least cost; he's the gink who prods public-spirited men and women into yelling blue murder against the "reds" and finally, I think he's to blame for the existence of all racketeers and gunmen. If it wasn't for him, they could make a living by safer and less nerve-racking methods.

FARMER-LABOR PRESS SERVICE
By
H. G. Teigan

It makes some difference to the people who holds public office in the state of Minnesota.

No better illustration can be found than in the change made in the personnel of the state tax commission. The present commissionis now made up entirely of men appointed by Governor Floyd B. Olson. The members of the commission as now constituted are: George E. Walace of Minneapolis, Harry Boyle of Duluth, and George Gage of Olivia.

Billion on Tax Rolls

The state tax commission is putting on the tax rolls of the state more than one billion dollars in untaxed monies and credits. According to a recent issue of the Minnesota Leader, the tax dodging investigation authorized by the 1933 legislature has accomplished the following:

Placed on the tax rolls untaxed monies and credits $221,326.00.

In process of final assessment and collection, $983,000,000.

Total monies and credits, $1,204,326,000.

Property, $22,106,313.00.

Monies and credits are subject to a tax of 3 mills which will net $3,612,000. The untaxed property now being placed on the tax rolls will approximate, including penalties, $1,780,000. The grand total is nearly $5,400,000.

Legislature Balks

The legislature's refusal to appropriate any more money for the purpose of uncovering tax dodging by the "fat boys" ought to be sufficient testimony in itself as to the character of the lawmaking body of 1935. The thing that makes this betrayal all the more flagrant is that the majority in each of the two houses of the legislature talked much of wanting to pass legislation to "relieve real estate." What they apparently wanted was not to relieve the farmers and the home-owners of the state, but to obtain further relief for the big tax-dodgers who are already well in the clear in respect to the payment of taxes.

Administration Acts

Should all the back taxes of the corporate excess variety be collected it would run far into the millions. This can be seen by the fact that the Northern States Power Company, one of the most successful of the tax-dodgers, owes $,401,327 for the two years 1933 and 1934. The tax commission, a few days ago. issued an order requiring county auditor Al. P. Erickson, of Hennepin county, to enter upon his books the amount due from the company for the two year period.

QUALITY PRODUCTION

By Chas. D. Egley, Manager
Farmers Union Livestock Commission, So. St. Paul, Minn

"Do you know, Mr. Dairy Farmer, that the total value of dairy products produced in the United States is five times larger than the total value of the United States grain crop?" says the dairy commissioner of one of our northwest states. And then after writing several more paragraphs to show the importance of this industry (with reference to same) he says:

"So you can readily see that it is to the advantage of the dariy farmer as much as to the creamery man to produce a higher grade of butter than we are today making in our state. In other words "quality" is boosted with at least the implication that that is the solution of the dairy problem.

From a standpoint of public health, I am for the production of a quality product, but from a standpoint of solving the farmers' economic problem, I say "BUNK." I think we should want to produce a high quality product—if not that it gives us a personal pleasure and pride to produce a high quality producet for others, then because we should want to produce that kind of food for our own families at least. Which reminds me of a story I heard, as follows:

"It is said of a certain farm lady that she brought some butter in to the local store, and after selling the butter to the storekeeper, asked to buy a pound of butter at the same store. The storekeeper looked at her rather funny, and said, "Wy do you buy butter, immediately after you have sold butter." "Well," the lady is reputed to have said, "A mouse died in the cream out of which I made this butter. What people don't know won't hurt them. Somebody else can eat that butter. I want to buy back another pound of different butter."

"And continuing the story it is said the storekeeper then went into the basement of his store, shaped this butter up a little different, brought it back up stairs and sold a pound of this same butter back to the lady who had brought the butter in. And so I say we should want to produce a high quality product. Who knows but what sometimes we might be eating our own product.

But from a standpoint of making money, I have seen the farmer robbed of high quality products as well as low quality products. Whether mice die in the cream, or whether they don't, the other fellow still sets the price on everything you buy and sell under our present social order, and he sees to it that the spread between the two is so wide you are lucky if you make both ends meet.

I have no objection to educational progress designed to improve the quality of our products, so long as there is nothing wrapped up in with this educational program to fool the farmers into believing that that is all that's necessary to solve their economic problems. What we need worse than improvement of quality or quantity is a system of distribution—a marketing system—where exploitation thru private profit is abolished.

Until that is done farmers and workers will not receive in pay the full value of the things they produce. If they do not get the full value of the things they produce they cannot buy back as much as they produce. And then these so-called surpluses accumulate, and we have to have suffering in the midst of plenty. That thing can only be corrected thru the building of a new social order where production and distribution is carried on for use, and not for profit. The co-operative system.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

We don't grow old by merely living a number of years, we grow old if we fail to spend vacations with Nature.

Whether at seventy or five years, there is in every heart the sense of wonder, an appetite for "what's next" and there is no way that such a natural desire can be so wholesomely gratified as the days spent in the heart of Nature.

Nature is rich with health-producing environments.

To the health-minded, the kind of vacation they seek is never an expense, it is an investment. An investment that pays big dividends. The dividends paid are restored energy, rested nerves, buoyancy, self-control and disease-resisting power. The whole family gets re-created by Nature's healing virtues.

Dollars spent for a Nature Vacation will save dollars in medical care.

Nature calls and pays "in the good old summertime." It creates new discoveries including new and pleasant friendships.

Nature says, "I am come that you might have life and that you might have it abundantly."

N. S. P. Can Pay

It is contended by newspapers and flunkies of the power company that to enforce collection of the taxes due under the law would force the company into receivership. Surely the Northern States Power company can well afford to pay the taxes for the two years mentioned, for its net earnings for the years 1933 and 1934, after paying "operating expenses, maintenance and taxes" amounts to more than $33,000,000.

If all back taxes should be paid, it is barely possible that it would go hard with the company, but the law and the officials having to do with its enforcement can hardly be to blame for that. Had the taxes been paid when they came due there would have been no difficulty experienced by the company in making the payments. Instead of paying its taxes as the average citizen did, the company, like others of its ilk, connived with others of its ilk, hrdliwwsh with previous tax commissions and pocketed the money due the state.

Computed Yearly Capital

In computing the corporate excess taxes due, Williaim A. Anderson, former Mayor of Minneapolis, and special investigator for the tax commission, capitalized the company's income for the last 5 years, and deducted from the average yearly capitalization thus shown the valuation upon which the corporation has paid taxes. This is the method accepted and approved by the courts, the country over, in the absence of market value.

In making the computation for 1933, Mr. Anderson found the net earnings for the 5 years, 1929 to 1932, inclusive, to have been $42.-141-968. Capitalized on a 7 per cent income basis, this income showed an average annual capital stock valuation of $120,401,624. But the company had paid taxes on a valuation of $53,439,831 for 1933, so this figure was deducted from the computed total value, leaving a taxable corporate excess of 66,965,793. At the 77-mill tax rate for the year, based on 40 per cent full and true valuation, taxes of $1,953,885 should have been paid.

For 1933, the capital value was computed at $115,245,442, and the corporate excess at $61,805,611. Thus the 99-mill tax rate for 1934 would yield $2,447,442 for that year, or a grand total of taxes due of $4,401,327.

KEEP OFF THE GRASS
by Lawrence Hawthorne

Oh, little man with big, blue eyes
That now are filled with tears,
I wish that you could realize,
Despite your tender years,
That Daddy does not like to cause
Your carefree heart such pain—
And yet, he must enforce those laws
That govern and restrain.

I wish there were some other way
For little boys to live—
That you might go about your play
And never need to give
Consideration to the rights
Of others; I'd be glad
If your instinctive appetites
Could rule, instead of Dad.

But wisdom says that boys must grow
To be so kind and good
That folks will all be glad to know
They're in the neighborhood;
So, that's why Daddy wants to see
His precious little kin
A better citizen than he Himself has ever been!

The Best Market for Butterfat

For more than a quarter of a century the Co-operative Creameries have proven to be the best market for butterfat.

Why are the prices for butterfat higher where there are Co-operative Creameries than where there none? Because the Co-operative Creamery fixes the market value on butterfat and fair prices can always be paid by a good Co-operative Creamery, as all profits are returned to the patrons who supply the raw materials.

If Minnesota's 640 Co-operative Creameries were put out of business, what would the price of butterfat be then? Better think this over before you sell your butterfat elsewhere.

Every good business man should boost his own business and the farmer should boost his own business also, especially when he knows it is making him real money.

Who can be expected to boost for the Co-operative Creamery, if the farmer himself fails to support it?

Why is butterfat selling at five to ten cents less per pound in other States than in Minnesota? Ask the farmer in Kansas, Nebraska, and other states where there are very few Co-operative Creameries.

If you study this matter as you should, you must be convinced that the Co-operative Creamery is "The Goose that laid the Golden Egg."

The Co-operative Creameries will continue to prosper if the farmers stay by them.

No power in the world can break the Co-operative Creameries if the farmers patronize them.

A good creamery, backed by a good Board of Directors, and a loyal bunch of patrons delivering cream, is a great asset to any community.

Sell your next can of cream to the Co-op. Creamery. Yours for a Bigger and BetterCo-operative Creamery in Thief River Falls.

Special Creamery Meeting

The stockholders of the Grygla Co-operative creamery held their special meeting at the Woodman hall on Wednesday, May 29th. Altho not as many stockholders as were expected were present, on account of field work, the meeting was very satisfactory in every way. The votes were cast almost unanimously in favor of a new creamery building. After considering the bids from six contractors the contract for erecting the new building was awarded to Mr. O. M. Otterkel, of Bagley. His bid was $7,365. On the ventilating system the bid of the King Co. was accepted. This was in the amount of $498.00. The new building will include besides the creamery, an office, salesroom, refrigerator, workroom, and quarters for handling feed, eggs and poultry. Work will commence as soon as possible. On Monday evening this week the board of directors held a meeting for the purpose of discussing the site for the new creamery. Another meeting will be held in the near future to decide on a definite location. The building will be 44 by 72 feet in dimensions and will be constructed from hollow brick.

Motion Picture Men On Record Against FilM Advertising

NEW YORK.—The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America has completed its annual meeting, which had been adjourned from an earlier session March 25.

Among various matters discussed at the session was the subject of advertising on the screen. In this connection, Will H. Hays, president of the Association, made the following statement·

"Much concern is felt over the reports that various projects are now under way, aimed at injecting advertising films into entertainment programs. and the Association will conduct a study of the matter. A report and recommendations will be presented to the Board at a later date

"The motion picture theatre is and should be reserved exclusively for entertainment. The motion picture theatre screen is not a proper medium for advertising, whether this be by direct presentation of outright advertising films or by some indirect effort to present advertising films under the guise of entetainment."

The Best Market for Butterfat

For more than a quarter of a century the Co-operative Creameries have proven to be the best market for butterfat.

Why are the prices for butterfat higher where there are Co-operative Creameries than where there none? Because the Co-operative Creamery fixes the market value on butterfat and fair prices can always be paid by a good Co-operative Creamery, as all profits are returned to the patrons who supply the raw materials.

If Minnesota's 640 Co-operative Creameries were put out of business, what would the price of butterfat be then? Better think this over before you sell your butterfat elsewhere.

Every good business man should boost his own business and the farmer should boost his own business also, especially when he knows it is making him real money.

Who can be expected to boost for the Co-operative Creamery, if the farmer himself fails to support it?

Why is butterfat selling at five to ten cents less per pound in other States than in Minnesota? Ask the farmer in Kansas, Nebraska, and other states where there are very few Co-operative Creameries.

If you study this matter as you should, you must be convinced that the Co-operative Creamery is "The Goose that laid the Golden Egg."

The Co-operative Creameries will continue to prosper if the farmers stay by them.

No power in the world can break the Co-operative Creameries if the farmers patronize them.

A good creamery, backed by a good Board of Directors, and a loyal bunch of patrons delivering cream, is a great asset to any community.

The Prizes Are Here and Ready

Don't Put It Off Any Longer - - - Work Now or Never!

We take pleasure in being able to tell you that the prizes, as advertised in the "Good Will' Campaign, are here and ready to be given away as specified.

Now all that is necessary is for some candidates to make themselves sufficiently outstanding to merit the first prize or one of the many other attractive awards that we are ready to offer.

Some of the candidates are apparently working very hard at the present, others have a pronounced tendency to slack down. When we call on these they say, "I have had this or that to do and havn't been able to work today, but I will be out tomorrow." Some go out and work as they promised, others don't get around to it.

Every worker in the campaign had better give the drive all the energy they can during the few remaining days. This is the only way the workers may assure themselves an equal chance to win one of the fine prizes.

Some people haven't the spunk that the world demands of a winner or leader. They wonder why the bigger things in life never come their way. If they did get the big things, would they have the determination and persistence to carry them out? If they continue to model their life after their present inclinations, life will be very hard for them. Could a race horse that would only half run be expected to win a big race? Would that horse ever become important enough to be in the big race? People are like horses in this respect. if they don't get into the spirit of what they are doing they never will become very prominent.

You probably never find them at the head of a thriving business. They haven't the determination that put the leader of that business where he is. If they accidentally find themselves at the top, they haven't the persistence and determination to stay there.

The campaign has "weeded" those off its list that won't or can't produce. The balance of the list are whole or partial producers. We might say that those "partial producers" may become workers of the first order by hitting the line a little harder, by ceasing to make excuses for their shortcomings and by offsetting these by persistent effort. When this campaign isover, the prizes will go to the communities most energetic leaders. Too much cannot be said in praise of a First Prize Winner.

WITH APPLESAUCE

The park orator was getting all worked up.

"I tell you," he rattled on, "this country is gradually going to the dogs. We are spending more than we can afford. Soon there will come a time when we shall be bankrupt. We shall be like the prodigal son; we shall have to eat the food of swine. After that what shall we do?"

He paused and glared at his audience. During the silence came a voice from the back of the crowd: "Eat the pigs, of course, matey."—Answers Magazine.

The General Was There

"Among the prettiest girls present was Brigadier General Blazer," wrote a young reporter in his account of a garden party.

The next day he was called to the editor's room.

"What do you mean by writing stuff like that?" demanded the editor.

"Well," explained the reporter, "that's where he was."—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Time Will Tell

The children, George, aged four, and Ernest, aged five, were being put to bed. "We do love you, mummy," said George, hugging her.

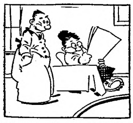
"Why do you love me, darling?"

"'Cos we like your face."

"But it isn't much of a face," said mother.

That was a bit of a poser. The boy thought a moment. "But we've got used to it," he said.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

IN SEASON



"I see in the paper that somebody found a fan four hundred years old."

"I didn't know they played baseball so long ago."

Brushing the Dog

Little brother was told to brush his dog that was shedding.

A short time later he returned and said:

"Well, I gave him a good brushing."

"Fine," replied mother. "What did you brush him with?"

"Oh, I used my tooth brush," he answered.—Indianapolis News.

Getting Imposed On

"How's the crime wave in Crimson Gulch?"

"We're kind o' humiliated," answered Cactus Joe. "We used to think we had bad men, but now any stray tenderfoot can hold up the town by pretending to be public enemy number one."

An Addled Ad

"Dad, can anybody keep lighthouses?"

"No, my son, lighthouse keepers are appointed by the government."

"Well, it says here in this paper that a 'gentleman and his wife want three furnished rooms for light housekeeping.'"

Detection

"Whom do you regard as the greatest detective?"

"Sherlock Holmes," answered Miss Cayenne.

"He was an imaginary detective."

"So is many a lad who wears a badge and draws a salary."

THE CHARM

"Why did you accept him the third time he proposed?"

"Because he said it would be the last time."

Daddy—Well, Willie, did you know that my birthday was tomorrow?

Willie—No, but I suspect it. I saw ma going into the 5 and 10 cent store for a present for somebody.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a logbirling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

CHAPTER VI.—Elliott is still in something of a daze over the meeting when Brandon strikes again—with dynamite—destroying the railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract.

CHAPTER VII.—By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare.

CHAPTER VIII.—Brandon, seriously alarmed over the successive failures of his plans for stopping the Hoot Owl's logging operations, compels a woman (known only as "Lydia") who is in his power, and against her will, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl she is befriending.

CHAPTER IX.—"Lydia," at a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn McManus, makes public her charges against him. Overwhelmed by the venom of the accusation, Elliott can only make what he himself realizes is a feeble denial of the charge. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for his explanation. Days later, while walking in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead or badly wounded.

CHAPTER X—Elliott's fall has been a ruse to make his enemy believe his attempt at assassination has been successful. A little sleuthing by an emissary of Ben's proves the would-be killer to be Red Bart Delaney, notorious Canadian desperado.

CHAPTER XI.—Judge Armitage urges Ben to avoid exposing himself, at least until Delaney has been driven out of town, but he refuses to "take cover." "Aunt Emma," Dawn's oldest and closest friend, realizing that the girl is suffering in the belief that Elliott, the man she loves, is unworthy, prevails on the woman Lydia to acknowledge the falsity of her accusation. Elliott and Dawn are reconciled, but the girl is not fully responsive to Ben's pleading for her love.

"What is it, son?" Martin cried as he dropped to his knees beside Ben. Before a reply could come Dawn was there, moaning his name over and over.

"Knife!" Ben gasped. "In the neck . . . here . . ."

John Martin unbuttoned Elliott's thick jacket, ripped open the shirt

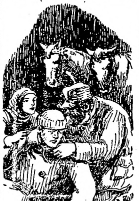
closed. "I guess he'll be all right in a few days. . . . But what an escape!" He shrugged.

Sweet looked at John Martin, then. The doctor's brows drew a bit; he seemed to lean forward and blinked slowly, incredulously. Then Martin moved and the other relaxed. Still, his expression was one of startled speculation.

The doctor began gathering his instruments. Martin stood staring at Ben in deep thought. Then his right hand went to the lobe of his left ear and tugged slowly in that characteristic gesture. He did not observe Emma Coburn standing in the doorway. He did not look at her until the woman gasped. It was a light, light gasp; so light that Emory Sweet did not hear. But Martin heard and turned and stood as though frozen in the posture. Aunt Em's head was held rigidly back, one hand pressed against a cheek.

Quickly, Martin's finger went against his lips in a sealing gesture. He held so an instant and then slowly shook his head, a movement of unmistakable warning.

Dawn entered the hallway from the living room and these two re-



"Knife!" Ben Gasped.

and his fingers encountered a warm, sticky gush as he thrust them across the back.

"Knifed you! . . . Ah, son!"

Dawn peered close into the bearded man's face as though fearful of what he might say next.

"We've got to get him somewhere right away," Martin muttered. "Got to. . . . It's bad."

"My house is just around the corner!" she cried. "Bring him there. . . . Oh, hurry!"

Together they lifted Ben to his feet. His teeth ground shut to keep back the moans. He was sick and weak with pain. He sagged against Martin as the man supported him.

"Tough, Dawn . . . to get you mixed up . . . in a mess. . . ."

"Hurry!" she said. "He's so weak!"

He was weak, indeed. With their arms about his body for support, they moved through the snow. Elliott felt Dawn close to him and closed his eyes almost happily. He struggled to help himself so he would not burden her, but he stumbled and nearly fell and another gush of blood bathed his body. After ages of effort and pain a glare seemed to be all about, warm breath fanned his face . . . and Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, was saying sharply:

"In here. . . . Your room, Dawn. . . . I'll phone the doctor."

Emory Sweet worked rapidly, once there. "Deep!" he muttered. "Gad, what a blow. Missed the jugular by a hair."

The wound was only a slender slit in the skin, but the blade had been driven deep, indeed, and the blood that flowed from it had drawn the bronze from Elliott's face, the strength from the splendid muscles that lay relaxed now beneath clear skin.

"Now!" said the physician when Ben finally lay back on Dawn's pillow, breathing shallowly, eyes laxed from the rigidity of their strange pantomime.

"Now, the boy's going to be all right," the doctor said. "I'll look in tomorrow. Quiet is going to be essential for a few days. You two women all right?"

A close observer might have noticed that Aunt Em's eyes were oddly averted from John Martin's searching gaze and that her breathing was quick.

"Why, it might be handy to have a man in the house tonight," she said, evenly enough. "I'm . . . I'm wondering if Mr. Martin would stay. He could sleep on the couch in the living room."

"I'd be glad to," the man said and cleared his throat sharply. "There might be something I could do . . . for you."

He had looked at Dawn on this last and it seemed that his voice caught ever so slightly.

So it was arranged that he should stay through the night and the doctor left.

Aunt Em carried the light out of the sickroom and placed it on a table in the hall. She bustled here and there, occupied with a variety of minor errands and finally drove Dawn to bed despite the girl's protests of sleeplessness.

Alone, she fixed blankets on the living room couch while Martin sat in the darkened bedroom. That done, she beckoned to him from the hallway.

They confronted one another there a long moment. The woman's face worked queerly and she seemed at a loss for words.

"What shall I say?" she asked, in a whisper.

[illegible]ing," the man replied. "There is nothing at all to be said . . . is there?"

"Oh, you gave me a start!"

"You're the first one. . . . I'm . . . I'm too full of things to talk, now, Emma."

He made an odd gesture toward the wall and looked about.

"We're in the upstairs front room if we're needed," she said. "Is . . . there anything you need yourself?"

He did not reply for a moment. Then, heavily:

"Yes. . . . Your help, likely. . . A little later. . . ."

The woman did a strange thing, then. She snatched up her apron and pressed it tightly against her eyes.

"She didn't remember!" she sobbed. . . . "Oh, what'll happen in this house next?"

"I wonder," Martin muttered. "Yes . . . I wonder!"

She left him, and he moved almost hesitatingly into the living room. He stood a long time just within the threshold and then went slowly about, from picture to table, from book shelf to mantel, hands in his coat pockets. Before this old photograph he stood for a long interval; beside that worn rocker he remained with bowed head, as one might who is suffering . . . or worshiping. When he approached the couch where he was to sleep that night his legs seemed to fail and he half fell, half slumped to his knees. He let his face down to the blankets and his fingers clutched them, gripping, gripping until the knuckles showed white. . . . And a great, shuddering moan slipped from his deep chest.

* * * * * * * *

Grimly, Bird-Eye Blaine prowled Tincup that night. He had let John Martin out as he drove through the main street; then proceeded to a livery barn where he stabled his team.

On the way he had sighted Ben Elliott but later, although he took up a position before the post office and watched passers on either side of the street carefully, he did not see him. He began making inquiries and found that Elliott had been about town but evidently Blaine was always some little time behind him.

Failing thus, he went to locate Ben's team and stood in the swirling snow waiting. Stores closed. Bird-Eye chewed and stamped to keep warm and watched and listened. And after a long hour's vigil proved fruitless he moved aimlessly away, along down the alley.

At the rear of Joe Plette's hotel he watched movement through a lighted window which gave into a back entry. A man was there, closing an inside stairway door behind him. He turned and buttoned his mackinaw with hasty movements and Blaine drew back into the shadows. The man within was Red Bart Delaney. . . . The door opened; the man stepped out. He crossed between Bird-Eye and the lights, carrying snowshoes. Blaine followed as the other went swiftly down the alley and then struck out past the depot toward the tracks.

"Well, now!" Bird-Eye muttered to himself. "Saints . . . Why all this rush, I'm wonderin'!"

A chill which had nothing to do with the temperature of the night struck through him. Red Bart, fleeing town? Surely, he went as a frightened man might go. . . . Or as one whose errand is completed.

Out into the street, then, went the Irishman, and into the pool room.

"Has anybody here seen Misther Elliott?" he asked loudly and men looked up from their games at the query. Yes, this man had, two hours ago; the butcher had talked to him at about eight. . . . None other. To the dance hall, next, and his queries were repeated. Then hastily back to see Ben's team still standing patiently in the deepening snow, past Dawn McManus' house to find only a faint light in the hallway, and from there to Able Armitage's on a run.

Had the judge seen Ben Elliott? He had not; and excitedly Blaine explained his empty search, the hasty departure of Red Bart, the neglected team.

Able dressed and they went out together, searching the town, inquiring of late passers.

"Somethin's happened!" Bird-Eye declared. "Somethin's went wrong with th' b'y, Able! We can't foind out what ut is ontil mornin'. Thin, believe me, we'll have help a-plenty!"

"How so?"

"Lave ut to me, Able!"

Through the night, ten minutes later, a team went swiftly westward. They left town at a gallop; they breasted high drifts across the way in frantic plunges, came to a blowing stop at the Hoot Owl barn. A moment later Tim Jeffers sat up and in sleepily bewilderment fought off the man who shook him and demanded that he wake up and listen.

* * * * * * *

The storm subsided before sunrise. It was a vast, rolling country, and across it, from Hoot Owl toward Tincup, went teams. Five of them formed a sort of procession, drawing logging sleighs. Across the bunks planks had been placed and on the planks stood and sat men; they were silent men, who drew on cold pipes, whose faces were set and grim, whose eyes betrayed excitement. The Hoot Owl crew, this, following Tim Jeffers and Bird-Eye Blaine to Tincup to solve a mystery.

In an orderly manner they left the sleighs and stood in groups while teamsters unhitched and led their horses into a livery barn.

Able Armitage came hurrying and he, alone, was welcome in that phalanx of intent men. Others of the town saw him gesticulate as he talked with Jeffers and Blaine, saw him shake his head and spread his hands as one will who has no answer for a pressing question.

Old Tim turned to the crews and motioned them to him. The men gathered close and listened while he spoke briefly. Then the compact huddle broke. Jeffers emerged and started for the main street, that body of shanty boys falling in to move shoulder to shoulder behind him.

In was a strange spectacle, for that peaceful Sunday morning! Doors were opened; men and women peered out. Then they emerged and stood to watch. Hastily caps and coats were donned and along the sidewalks followed a growing crowd of the curious.

The breath vapor of the men rose in a cloud. No one spoke. They swung into the main street, old Tim wallowing in the long drift at the corner, his men trampling it down behind him. On down past Able's office, past the pool room and then, without a word or signal they halted. . . . The halt was before the bank over which Nicholas Brandon had his offices and his living rooms.

And then Tim lifted his clear, strong voice.

"Brandon!" he shouted. "Nick Brandon!"

"Come out, Nick!" a teamster shouted, voice thick with repressed excitement. "Ay, come out!" another cried.

Movement, then, where they had expected movement. Up above a face appeared in a window. Nicholas Brandon looked down upon them. They could see his lips compress as he discerned that crowd.

"Come down, Brandon!"

This was Tim again, his voice edged with sharpness, as he might speak to a rebellious man of his crew.

Brandon moved and threw up the sash.

"What do you men want?" he demanded sharply, in the tone of one who has been long accustomed to make demands.

"We want Ben Elliott!" Jeffers answered.

"Elliott? He isn't here. What would he be doing here? What could I know of him?"

A mumbling, a stirring behind Tim.

"We want him. We want you to help us find him!"

"You're d—n right!" . . . "Tell us, you skunk!" . . . "Show him to us or we'll wreck your whole blame town!"

Tim held up a silencing hand against this outbreak. Then he addressed Brandon.

"Elliott came to town last night. He hasn't been seen since. His team was found where he left it. There's only one man in town who'd have an object in getting him out of the way. We've come to that man: to you, Brandon. We want Elliott!"

Brandon's lips writhed.

"I tell you, I know nothing—" He slammed down the sash and cut the rest of his sentence from their hearing so those men did not know that his voice broke sharply as panic laid its hold on him.

He turned his back deliberately to the window. Then, in a frantic lunge, he reached the telephone and rang the bell.

"Give me the jail!" he said excitedly. "Quick! The jail!"

Outside a growing, mounting roar sounded, like the voice of an approaching wind. Then came a sharp shout; a loud curse. Then quick silence again as Tim Jeffers reasserted his leadership and demanded that they move only as a unit. But this order prevailed for a brief moment.

"Smash in the door; it's locked!" someone cried. "Take him until he gives Ben up!"

"Good boy!"

The ball of ice, case in the street from some horse's foot, now picked up and flung stoutly, crashed through an office window.

Brandon cowered as a yell of approval went up, and pressed his face close to the telephone.

"Hickens? . . . Art! This is Brandon! There's a mob out here and—"

"I've seen it!" The sheriff's voice "I saw 'em come in. I don't know what—"

"Get down here, then, and be quick about it! Get down here and scatter them!"

Brandon waited for the ready acquiescence which always had come from the men he had made, from officers of the law and judges and public officials both high and low.

"Are you there?" he demanded sharply as a shrill yip came from the street.

"Yes, Mr. Brandon. I hear you but . . . But what d'you expect me to do against a mob alone? I—"

"Alone! You're sheriff, you fool! You've the law behind you! Bring a gun and hurry!"

THE MAN FROM YONDER

Copyright
W.N.U. SERVICE

By Harold Titus

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

CHAPTER VI.—Elliott is still in something of a daze over the meeting when Brandon strikes again—with dynamite—destroying the railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract.

CHAPTER VII.—By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare.

CHAPTER VIII.—Brandon, seriously alarmed over the successive failures of his plans for stopping the Hoot Owl's logging operations, compels a woman (known only as "Lydia") who is in his power, and against her will, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl she is befriending.

CHAPTER IX.—"Lydia," at a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn McManus, makes public her charges against him. Overwhelmed by the venom of the accusation, Elliott can only make what he himself realizes is a feeble denial of the charge. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for his explanation. Days later, while walking in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead or badly wounded.

CHAPTER X.—Elliott's fall has been a ruse to make his enemy believe his attempt at assassination has been successful. A little sleuthing by an emissary of Ben's proves the would-be killer to be Red Bart Delaney, notorious Canadian desperado.

CHAPTER XI.—Judge Armitage urges Ben to avoid exposing himself, at least until Delaney has been driven out of town, but he refuses to "take cover." "Aunt Emma," Dawn's oldest and closest friend, realizing that the girl is suffering in the belief that Elliott, the man she loves, is unworthy, prevails on the woman Lydia to acknowledge the falsity of her accusation. Elliott and Dawn are reconciled, but the girl is not fully responsive to Ben's pleading for her love.

"What is it, son?" Martin cried as he dropped to his knees beside Ben. Before a reply could come Dawn was there, moaning his name over and over.

"Knife!" Ben gasped. "In the neck . . . here . . ."

John Martin unbuttoned Elliott's thick jacket, ripped open the shirt

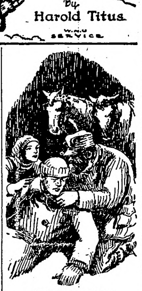
closed. "I guess he'll be all right in a few days. . . . But what an escape!" He shrugged.

Sweet looked at John Martin, then. The doctor's brows drew a bit; he seemed to lean forward and blinked slowly, incredulously. Then Martin moved and the other relaxed. Still, his expression was one of startled speculation.

The doctor began gathering his instruments. Martin stood staring at Ben in deep thought. Then his right hand went to the lobe of his left ear and tugged slowly in that characteristic gesture. He did not observe Emma Coburn standing in the doorway. He did not look at her until the woman gasped. It was a light, light gasp; so light that Emory Sweet did not hear. But Martin heard and turned and stood as though frozen in the posture. Aunt Em's head was held rigidly back, one hand pressed against a cheek.

Quickly, Martin's finger went against his lips in a sealing gesture. He held so an instant and then slowly shook his head, a movement of unmistakable warning.

Dawn entered the hallway from the living room and these two re-



"Knife!" Ben Gasped.

and his fingers encountered a warm, sticky gush as he thrust them across the back.

"Knifed you! . . . Ah, son!"

Dawn peered close into the bearded man's face as though fearful of what he might say next.

"We've got to get him somewhere right away," Martin muttered. "Got to. . . . It's bad."

"My house is just around the corner!" she cried. "Bring him there. . . . Oh, hurry!"

Together they lifted Ben to his feet. His teeth ground shut to keep back the moans. He was sick and weak with pain. He sagged against Martin as the man supported him.

"Tough, Dawn . . . to get you mixed up . . . in a mess. . . ."

"Hurry!" she said. "He's so weak!"

He was weak, indeed. With their arms about his body for support, they moved through the snow. Elliott felt Dawn close to him and closed his eyes almost happily. He struggled to help himself so he would not burden her, but he stumbled and nearly fell and another gush of blood bathed his body. After ages of effort and pain a glare seemed to be all about, warm breath fanned his face . . . and Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, was saying sharply:

"In here. . . . Your room, Dawn. . . . I'll phone the doctor."

Emory Sweet worked rapidly, once there. "Deep!" he muttered. "Gad, what a blow. Missed the jugular by a hair."

The wound was only a slender slit in the skin, but the blade had been driven deep, indeed, and the blood that flowed from it had drawn the bronze from Elliott's face, the strength from the splendid muscles that lay relaxed now beneath clear skin.

"Now!" said the physician when Ben finally lay back on Dawn's pillow, breathing shallowly, eyes laxed from the rigidity of their strange pantomime.

"Now, the boy's going to be all right," the doctor said. "I'll look in tomorrow. Quiet is going to be essential for a few days. You two women all right?"

A close observer might have noticed that Aunt Em's eyes were oddly averted from John Martin's searching gaze and that her breathing was quick.

"Why, it might be handy to have a man in the house tonight," she said, evenly enough. "I'm . . . I'm wondering if Mr. Martin would stay. He could sleep on the couch in the living room."

"I'd be glad to," the man said and cleared his throat sharply. "There might be something I could do . . . for you."

He had looked at Dawn on this last and it seemed that his voice caught ever so slightly.

So it was arranged that he should stay through the night and the doctor left.

Aunt Em carried the light out of the sickroom and placed it on a table in the hall. She bustled here and there, occupied with a variety of minor errands and finally drove Dawn to bed despite the girl's protests of sleeplessness.

Alone, she fixed blankets on the living room couch while Martin sat in the darkened bedroom. That done, she beckoned to him from the hallway.

They confronted one another there a long moment. The woman's face worked queerly and she seemed at a loss for words.

"What shall I say?" she asked, in a whisper.

. . thing," the man replied. "There is nothing at all to be said . . . is there?"

"Oh, you gave me a start!"

"You're the first one. . . . I'm . . . I'm too full of things to talk, now, Emma."

He made an odd gesture toward the wall and looked about.

"We're in the upstairs front room if we're needed," she said. "Is . . . there anything you need yourself?"

He did not reply for a moment. Then, heavily:

"Yes. . . . Your help, likely. . . A little later. . . ."

The woman did a strange thing, then. She snatched up her apron and pressed it tightly against her eyes.

"She didn't remember!" she sobbed. . . . "Oh, what'll happen in this house next?"

"I wonder," Martin muttered. "Yes . . . I wonder!"

She left him, and he moved almost hesitatingly into the living room. He stood a long time just within the threshold and then went slowly about, from picture to table, from book shelf to mantel, hands in his coat pockets. Before this old photograph he stood for a long interval; beside that worn rocker he remained with bowed head, as one might who is suffering . . . or worshiping. When he approached the couch where he was to sleep that night his legs seemed to fail and he half fell, half slumped to his knees. He let his face down to the blankets and his fingers clutched them, gripping, gripping until the knuckles showed white. . . . And a great, shuddering moan slipped from his deep chest.

* * * * * * * *

Grimly, Bird-Eye Blaine prowled Tincup that night. He had let John Martin out as he drove through the main street; then proceeded to a livery barn where he stabled his team.

On the way he had sighted Ben Elliott but later, although he took up a position before the post office and watched passers on either side of the street carefully, he did not see him. He began making inquiries and found that Elliott had been about town but evidently Blaine was always some little time behind him.

Failing thus, he went to locate Ben's team and stood in the swirling snow waiting. Stores closed. Bird-Eye chewed and stamped to keep warm and watched and listened. And after a long hour's vigil proved fruitless he moved aimlessly away, along down the alley.

At the rear of Joe Piette's hotel he watched movement through a lighted window which gave into a back entry. A man was there, closing an inside stairway door behind him. He turned and buttoned his mackinaw with hasty movements and Blaine drew back into the shadows. The man within was Red Bart Delaney. . . . The door opened; the man stepped out. He crossed between Bird-Eye and the lights, carrying snowshoes. Blaine followed as the other went swiftly down the alley and then struck out past the depot toward the tracks.

"Well, now!" Bird-Eye muttered to himself. "Saints . . . Why all this rush, I'm wonderin'!"

A chill which had nothing to do with the temperature of the night struck through him. Red Bart, fleeing town? Surely, he went as a frightened man might go. . . . Or as one whose errand is completed.

Out into the street, then, went the Irishman, and into the pool room.

"Has anybody here seen Misther Elliott?" he asked loudly and men looked up from their games at the query. Yes, this man had, two hours ago; the butcher had talked to him at about eight. . . . None other. To the dance hall, next, and his queries were repeated. Then hastily back to see Ben's team still standing patiently in the deepening snow, past Dawn McManus' house

to find only a faint light in the hallway, and from there to Able Armitage's on a run.

Had the judge seen Ben Elliott? He had not; and excitedly Blaine explained his empty search, the hasty departure of Red Bart, the neglected team.

Able dressed and they went out together, searching the town, inquiring of late passers.

"Somethin's happened!" Bird-Eye declared. "Somethin's went wrong with th' b'y, Able! We can't foind out what ut is ontil mornin'. Thin, believe me, we'll have help a-plenty!"

"How so?"

"Lave ut to me, Able!"

Through the night, ten minutes later, a team went swiftly westward. They left town at a gallop; they breasted high drifts across the way in frantic plunges, came to a blowing stop at the Hoot Owl barn. A moment later Tim Jeffers sat up and in sleepy bewilderment fought off the man who shook him and demanded that he wake up and listen.

* * * * * * * *

The storm subsided before sunrise. It was a vast, rolling country, and across it, from Hoot Owl toward Tincup, went teams. Five of them formed a sort of procession, drawing logging sleighs. Across the bunks planks had been placed and on the planks stood and sat men; they were silent men, who drew on cold pipes, whose faces were set and grim, whose eyes betrayed excitement. The Hoot Owl crew, this, following Tim Jeffers and Bird-Eye Blaine to Tincup to solve a mystery.

In an orderly manner they left the sleighs and stood in groups while teamsters unhitched and led their horses into a livery barn.

Able Armitage came hurrying and he, alone, was welcome in that phalanx of intent men. Others of the town saw him gesticulate as he talked with Jeffers and Blaine, saw him shake his head and spread his hands as one will who has no answer for a pressing question.

Old Tim turned to the crews and motioned them to him. The men gathered close and listened while he spoke briefly. Then the compact huddle broke. Jeffers emerged and started for the main street, that body of shanty boys falling in to move shoulder to shoulder behind him.

In was a strange spectacle, for that peaceful Sunday morning! Doors were opened; men and women peered out. Then they emerged and stood to watch. Hastily caps and coats were donned and along the sidewalks followed a growing crowd of the curious.

The breath vapor of the men rose in a cloud. No one spoke. They swung into the main street, old Tim wallowing in the long drift at the corner, his men trampling it down behind him. On down past Able's office, past the pool room and then, without a word or signal they halted. . . . The halt was before the bank over which Nicholas Brandon had his offices and his living rooms.

And then Tim lifted his clear, strong voice.

"Brandon!" he shouted. "Nick Brandon!"

"Come out, Nick!" a teamster shouted, voice thick with repressed excitement. "Ay, come out!" another cried.

Movement, then, where they had expected movement. Up above a face appeared in a window. Nicholas Brandon looked down upon them. They could see his lips compress as he discerned that crowd.

"Come down, Brandon!"

This was Tim again, his voice edged with sharpness, as he might speak to a rebellious man of his crew.

Brandon moved and threw up the sash.

"What do you men want?" he demanded sharply, in the tone of one who has been long accustomed to make demands.

"We want Ben Elliott!" Jeffers answered.

"Elliott? He isn't here. What would he be doing here? What could I know of him?"

A mumbling, a stirring behind Tim.

"We want him. We want you to help us find him!"

"You're d—n right!" . . . "Tell us, you skunk!" . . . "Show him to us or we'll wreck your whole blame town!"

Tim held up a silencing hand against this outbreak. Then he addressed Brandon.

"Elliott came to town last night. He hasn't been seen since. His team was found where he left it. There's only one man in town who'd have an object in getting him out of the way. We've come to that man; to you, Brandon. We want Elliott!"

Brandon's lips writhed.

"I tell you, I know nothing—" He slammed down the sash and cut the rest of his sentence from their hearing so those men did not know that his voice broke sharply as panic laid its hold on him.

He turned his back deliberately to the window. Then, in a frantic lunge, he reached the telephone and rang the bell.

"Give me the jail!" he said excitedly. "Quick! The jail!"

Outside a growing, mounting roar sounded, like the voice of an approaching wind. Then came a sharp shout; a loud curse. Then quick silence again as Tim Jeffers reasserted his leadership and demanded that they move only as a unit. But this order prevailed for a brief moment.

"Smash in the door; it's locked!" someone cried. "Take him until he gives Ben up!"

"Good boy!"

The ball of ice, case in the street from some horse's foot, now picked up and flung stoutly, crashed through an office window.

Brandon cowered as a yell of approval went up, and pressed his face close to the telephone.

"Hickens? . . . Art! This is Brandon! There's a mob out here and—"

"I've seen it!" The sheriff's voice "I saw 'em come in. I don't know what—"

"Get down here, then, and be quick about it! Get down here and scatter them!"

Brandon waited for the ready acquiescence which always had come from the men he had made, from officers of the law and judges and public officials both high and low.

"Are you there?" he demanded sharply as a shrill yip came from the street.

"Yes, Mr. Brandon. I hear you but . . . But what d'you expect me to do against a mob alone? I—"

"Alone! You're sheriff, you fool! You've the law behind you! Bring a gun and hurry!"

DR. BRYNGELSON ADDRESSES H. S. GRADS. FRIDAY

strifes. The main part of his talk was on the psychological make-up of the human being and spoke of rationalization as being one of the prime reasons for peculiar traits displayed by man. Gossip, he stated, was carried on mostly by people who are themselves open to much criticism, and these people use gossip to distract attention from their own short comings.

Rorothy Rau, highest ranking student in scholarship ot the class, delivered the valedictory address in which she spoke in behalf of the senior class in thanking members of the faculty and of the board of education for the interest they had shown in their work during their years in school.

Superintendent of Schools, Morris Bye, acted as chairman of the meeting and presented the class to the audience and to E. M. Bennes, president of the school board, who in turn gave the diplomas to the members of the group. Wm. Claffy principal of the high school, presented the members of the teachers' training department and they received their certificates from Mr. Bennes.

Scholarships were awarded by various schools to the highest ranking student, Dorothy Rau, good at a number of Minnesota colleges; to the highest ranking boy, Donald Hermanson, two scholarships; to the student who showed the most progress in the line of music, Arnhild Fjelstad, the McPhail School of Music gave a scholarship.

Other awards were made by the American Legion and the Auxiliary; Kendall Gustafson received the award from B. O. Norby, who presented it in behalf of the Legion, and Kathleen Monsebroten received the award from Mrs. Ralph Woolhouse, representing the Auxiliary. The program was brought to a close with the audience singing "America, the Beautiful."

Gov. F. B. Olson told the group that the State of Minnesota was prepared to loan money up to 55 per cent at three per cent for municipal projects of sewage disposal plants and the development of fishing grounds and other recreational grounds. This will be done if the federal government will match with the other 45 per cent which the PWA is expected to grant gratis.

Mr. Lium, city engineer of Grand Forks, explained how Grand Forks, Crookston, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls found their water supply exhausted and with the aid of Minnesota officials secured sufficient water from Clearwater Lake to tide over the emergency.

It was agreed to treat the Red River program as one comprehensive plan by the three states and Manitoba, Canada. The acting governor of North Dakota, Welford, was asked to perpetuate the advisory committee of the conference. Members of the committee are Frank Murphy, Wheaton, Minn.; M. D. Hollis, Bismarck; E. V. Willard, Mineapolis; Dean Holm, secretary of the Minnesota planning board; S. H. Colins, secretary of the South Dakota board, and Ryan. Ex-officio members are the governors of the three states and Mayor John Queen of Winnipeg.

A conservation program was outlined earlier at the meeting by Welford and Governor Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota, with South Dakota represented by O. H. Johnson and S. H. Colins.

Those who attended from Thief River Falls were J. H. Vaughn, W. H. Quist, Morris Bye, S. F. Sharpless, district SERA engineer; G. A. Thompson and R. M. Aalbu.

National Railroad Week Planned June 10 to 17

It was announced today by W. E. Baker, agent for the Great Northern railroad in this city, that next week has been designated a National Railroad Week. He stated that if your sleep is suddenly interrupted Monday morning at the hour of eight by the sound of locomotive whistles that you should not become unduly alarmed as this is the means of starting the week of observance of this event.

Mr. Baker stated that as a special inducement to the users of railroads for shipping and personal transportation that during the next week a special rate would be made to the patrons of the railroads; these rates, he said, would be similar to the rates that were in existence the previous week. With this added inducement to use the railroads it is expected that the use of the railroads for freight and passenger service would be almost doubled during the next week.

Elaborate plans have been made throughout the United States for the celebration of this event and huge radio programs have been arranged, Mr. Baker said.

Mr. James Winjim, former manager of the store in this city, was made general supervisor of all the Hartz stores. Mr. Winjim is the oldest employee of the company in the number of years worked; he has been with the company for nine years and has been manager of the local store since early in 1931.

Night Rates on Telephone Calls to Take Effect at 7

Beginning June 1 night rates on station-to-station long distance telephone calls will become effective at 7 p. m. instead of 8:30 p. m., and continue until 4:30 a. m. These rates apply to those calls on which the customer asks to talk with anyone available at the telephone called for which the day rate is 40 cents or more. This announcement was made today by A. J. Rau, manager of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company.

This change means that the lowest rate for this type of long distance calls will be available to telephone users for an hour and a half longer than has heretofore been the case, and is in effect a reduction in rates beyond certain distances for this class of service between 7 and 9:30 p. m., Mr. Rau stated.

Cable from Helsingf rs, Finland, states that drunkenness has greatly increased since repeal.

Bethesda Lutheran Church to Hold Series of Tent Meetings

High School 4-H'ers Have Study Society

Fifty older 4-H club members of Pennington county, who are students in the Thief River Falls high school, have been carrying on monthly study meetings during the past winter and spring, learning methods of leadership and obtaining practice in conducting the activities of local clubs. T. A. Erickson state 4-H leader, University Farm, says this is one of the finest examples he knows of where 4-H leadership training is sponsored in connection with the schools. He believes the plan merits wider adoption.

Parliamentary training, project study and recreational work have been stressed at the society's monthly meetings. Temporary officers were appointed at each meeting to give practice to as many members as possible. Each meeting, an original skit illustrating some phase of parliamentary practice was put on. A forum on project work was held, and recreation of various kinds, all with the idea that members of the society would be able to assist their local 4-H groups along the same lines this summer.

All material used on programs was mimeographed and passed around for reference later.

The St. Hilaire school of Pennington county has a high school and 4-H band that is one of the finest in the country. This year, money is being raised to send the group to the Minnesota State Fair. It has been heard over the radio and won first place among 4-H bands at the Crookston club week in 1934.

Sharp Rise In Hogs Reflects Advance In Wholesale Pork

One of the sharpest rises of the year was in progress in the hog market at South St. Paul last week, states the weekly market bulletin issued by the Central Co-operative association of South St. Paul. Prices swept upwards fully 50c during the first half of the week and as compared with the recent low spot, gains of $1.00 or more per cwt. were apparent.

The sudden upturn in the market apparently has stimulated buying demand for pork, since reports from the wholesale pork trade at the large consuming centers have been unusually bullish. By the middle of last week, pork lines on the Chicago wholesale market had advanced to new high levels for May since May 1929. Chicago top light loins sold at 25c per pound compared with 13c a year ago.

Hog receipts have been light, and supplies of pork stocks held in storage houses of the United States are dwindling. On May 1, this year, total storage stocks of cured and frozen pork amounted to only 565,699,000 lbs. compared with 656,087,000 lbs. a year ago, and 112,520,000 lbs for the five-year average on that date. This shows a reduction of 13 per cent from a year ago and 23 per cent reduction on the five year average. Lard stocks also are low compared with other years. On May 1 lard stocks totaled 100,920,000 lbs. compared with 179,098,000 lbs. a year ago and 112,520,000 lbs, for the five-year average.

If beef stocks were as light as pork and lard stocks, the cattle market would show much more life than is now apparent. On May 1, total beef stocks in the United States were 77,848,000 lbs. compared with 46,590,000 lbs. a year ago, and 50,449,000 lbs. for the five-year average. This is equivalent to an increase of 66 per cent over a year ago and an increase of 56 per cent over the five-year average.

strifes. The main part of his talk was on the psychological make-up of the human being and spoke of rationalization as being one of the prime reasons for peculiar traits displayed by man. Gossip, he stated, was carried on mostly by people who are themselves open to much criticism, and these people use gossip to distract attention from their own short comings.

Rorothy Rau, highest ranking student in scholarship ot the class, delivered the valedictory address in which she spoke in behalf of the senior class in thanking members of the faculty and of the board of education for the interest they had shown in their work during their years in school.

Superintendent of Schools, Morris Bye, acted as chairman of the meeting and presented the class to the audience and to E. M. Bennes, president of the school board, who in turn gave the diplomas to the members of the group. Wm. Claffy principal of the high school, presented the members of the teachers' training department and they received their certificates from Mr. Bennes.

Scholarships were awarded by various schools to the highest ranking student, Dorothy Rau, good at a number of Minnesota colleges; to the highest ranking boy, Donald Hermanson, two scholarships; to the student who showed the most progress in the line of music, Arnhild Fjelstad, the McPhail School of Music gave a scholarship.

Other awards were made by the American Legion and the Auxiliary; Kendall Gustafson received the award from B. O. Norby, who presented it in behalf of the Legion, and Kathleen Monsebroten received the award from Mrs. Ralph Woolhouse, representing the Auxiliary. The program was brought to a close with the audience singing "America, the Beautiful."

Gov. F. B. Olson told the group that the State of Minnesota was prepared to loan money up to 55 per cent at three per cent for municipal projects of sewage disposal plants and the development of fishing grounds and other recreational grounds. This will be done if the federal government will match with the other 45 per cent which the PWA is expected to grant gratis.

Mr. Lium, city engineer of Grand Forks, explained how Grand Forks, Crookston, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls found their water supply exhausted and with the aid of Minnesota officials secured sufficient water from Clearwater Lake to tide over the emergency.

It was agreed to treat the Red River program as one comprehensive plan by the three states and Manitoba, Canada. The acting governor of North Dakota, Welford, was asked to perpetuate the advisory committee of the conference. Members of the committee are Frank Murphy, Wheaton, Minn.; M. D. Hollis, Bismarck; E. V. Willard, Mineapolis; Dean Holm, secretary of the Minnesota planning board; S. H. Colins, secretary of the South Dakota board, and Ryan. Ex-officio members are the governors of the three states and Mayor John Queen of Winnipeg.

A conservation program was outlined earlier at the meeting by Welford and Governor Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota, with South Dakota represented by O. H. Johnson and S. H. Colins.

Those who attended from Thief River Falls were J. H. Vaughn, W. H. Quist, Morris Bye, S. F. Sharpless, district SERA engineer; G. A. Thompson and R. M. Aalbu.

National Railroad Week Planned June 10 to 17

It was announced today by W. E. Baker, agent for the Great Northern railroad in this city, that next week has been designated a National Railroad Week. He stated that if your sleep is suddenly interrupted Monday morning at the hour of eight by the sound of locomotive whistles that you should not become unduly alarmed as this is the means of starting the week of observance of this event.

Mr. Baker stated that as a special inducement to the users of railroads for shipping and personal transportation that during the next week a special rate would be made to the patrons of the railroads; these rates, he said, would be similar to the rates that were in existence the previous week. With this added inducement to use the railroads it is expected that the use of the railroads for freight and passenger service would be almost doubled during the next week.

Elaborate plans have been made throughout the United States for the celebration of this event and huge radio programs have been arranged, Mr. Baker said.

Night Rates on Telephone Calls to Take Effect at 7

Beginning June 1 night rates on station-to-station long distance telephone calls will become effective at 7 p. m. instead of 8:30 p. m., and continue until 4:30 a. m. These rates apply to those calls on which the customer asks to talk with anyone available at the telephone called for which the day rate is 40 cents or more. This announcement was made today by A. J. Rau, manager of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company.

This change means that the lowest rate for this type of long distance calls will be available to telephone users for an hour and a half longer than has heretofore been the case, and is in effect a reduction in rates beyond certain distances for this class of service between 7 and 9:30 p. m., Mr. Rau stated.

High School 4-H'ers Have Study Society

Fifty older 4-H club members of Pennington county, who are students in the Thief River Falls high school, have been carrying on monthly study meetings during the past winter and spring, learning methods of leadership and obtaining practice in conducting the activities of local clubs. T. A. Erickson state 4-H leader, University Farm, says this is one of the finest examples he knows of where 4-H leadership training is sponsored in connection with the schools. He believes the plan merits wider adoption.

Parliamentary training, project study and recreational work have been stressed at the society's monthly meetings. Temporary officers were appointed at each meeting to give practice to as many members as possible. Each meeting, an original skit illustrating some phase of parliamentary practice was put on. A forum on project work was held, and recreation of various kinds, all with the idea that members of the society would be able to assist their local 4-H groups along the same lines this summer.

All material used on programs was mimeographed and passed around for reference later.

The St. Hilaire school of Pennington county has a high school and 4-H band that is one of the finest in the country. This year, money is being raised to send the group to the Minnesota State Fair. It has been heard over the radio and won first place among 4-H bands at the Crookston club week in 1934.

Sharp Rise In Hogs Reflects Advance In Wholesale Pork

One of the sharpest rises of the year was in progress in the hog market at South St. Paul last week, states the weekly market bulletin issued by the Central Cooperative association of South St. Paul. Prices swept upwards fully 50c during the first half of the week and as compared with the recent low spot, gains of $1.00 or more per cwt. were apparent.

The sudden upturn in the market apparently has stimulated buying demand for pork, since reports from the wholesale pork trade at the large consuming centers have been unusually bullish. By the middle of last week, pork loines on the Chicago wholesale market had advanced to new high levels for May since May 1929. Chicago top light loins sold at 25c per pound compared with 13c a year ago.

Hog receipts have been light, and supplies of pork stocks held in storage houses of the United States are dwindling. On May 1, this year, total storage stocks of cured and frozen pork amounted to only 565,699,000 lbs. compared with 656,087,000 lbs. a year ago, and 112,520,000 lbs for the five-year average on that date. This shows a reduction of 13 per cent from a year ago and 23 per cent reduction on the five year average. Lard stocks also are low compared with other years. On May 1 lard stocks totaled 100,920,000 lbs. compared with 179,098,000 lbs. a year ago and 112,520,000 lbs, for the five-year average.

If beef stocks were as light as pork and lard stocks, the cattle market would show much more life than is now apparent. On May 1, total beef stocks in the United States were 77,848,000 lbs. compared with 46,590,000 lbs. a year ago, and 50,449,000 lbs. for the five-year average. This is equivalent to an increase of 66 per cent over a year ago and an increase of 56 per cent over the five-year average.

ATTERBURY BROS. ELEPHANT KILLS 9 YEAR OLD GIRL

Animal's Keeper Charged With Second Degree Manslaughter At Crookston

The elephant which was used in this city for show purposes at the circus performance of the Atterbury Brothers circus Tuesday, June 4, charged through the crowd of people at a circus performance held in Crookston last Thursday, killing a child and injuring several others.

According to a news dispatch, the elephant broke loose from its keeper as it was being lead from the circus tent; it is claimed that the animal was wrought-up by the action of the keeper shortly before the performance and the keeper was held and charged with second degree manslaughter William Woodcock, the keeper, was released Sunday under bond of $3,000. The dead child, Margaret Ann Francis, was the nine year old daughter of William Francis of Crookston, Minnesota.

The animal, the reports stated, was not a very large specimen but because of some difficulty with the keeper just before it was brought into the tent for its performance had become infuriated, and on leaving the tent bolted when it reached the spot of its unpleasant experience. The enraged animal rushed back into the tent upsetting seats and creating wild disorder among the terrified people. The keeper stated that a dog had barked and snapped at the animal causing it to break away from him. The elephant had never been known to have become excited during its three years in captivity, the trainer stated.

BODY OF MISSING MAN IS FOUND IN RIVER MONDAY

Roy Evenson, Missing Since June First, 1st Victim of River This Year

The body of Roy Evenson, 23 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Evenson of Hazel, was discovered by two boys, Robert Hoefeck and Marvin Lindberg, floating down Red Lake river about noon Monday. Evenson had been missing for more than a week and no trace of him had been found until then.

Young Lindberg and Hoefeck were crossing the old bridge on Bridge Stret at 11:30 a. m., when they saw an object that looked suspiciously like the top of a man's head floating towards the dam. They went over to shore, took a boat and rowed out to the object. On discovering it was a dead man they immediately called to some people standing on the bridge to call the police and then made a noose in a wire and fastened it around the body's neck. The police arrived and pulled the body out of the water.

Dr. A. M Smith, Pennington, county coroner, was caled to view the body; he stated that an inquest was unnecessary.

Evenson attended a dance the night of June first and never returned to his home. He lived with his brother-in-law and sister. Mr. and Mrs. Tonie Hornseth and worked in the tire shop operated by Mr. Hornseth.

Those surviving him are: his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Evenson of Hazel; sisters, Mrs. Tonie Hornseth and Mrs. Omar Belland of this city, Mrs. George Adolph of Bismarck, N. D., and Mrs. Harold Saltveit of Portland, Oregon; brothers surviving, Louis Evenson of International Falls, Edwin Evenson of Portland, Ore., and Raymond and Lester Evenson of Hazel, Minnesota.

SCHOOL BOARD ASKS BIDS ON TENNIS COURT

Bids to be Opened at Meet of June 20th, Construction On H.S. Field

SCHOOLS FUEL COST IS $96.91 LESS LAST YEAR

Miss Edberg & Miss Sampson Resignations Accepted Monday Evening

Because of the increasing interest in the game of tennis among local people the School Board at its regular meeting June 10th issued a call for bids for the contrection of another concrete tennis court on the H. S. grounds. Sealed bids will be opened June 20th, Mr. Bye, superintendent of schools, announced.

Two teachers handed in their resignation to the board, which were accepted, that of Miss Winifred Sampson, teacher of the fifth grade at the Knox school, and that of Miss Victoria Edberg's instructor at the high school.

It was decided to call for bids for fuel for the year 1935-36 to be taken up at the July meeting of the school board as it has been done in the past. It was revealed that, altho the price of coal had advanced from 70 cents to $1.55 per ton over the price of last year, the fuel cost for heating the public schools of the city had declined $96.91 during the past year. This was due, as was explained, to the fact that less fuel was used in all the schools with the exception of the Northrop school, which used 2.35 tons more coal last year than in 1933-34. This was offset by the high school using 32.02 tons less last year than the year previous. The total cost for fuel during the past year was $4,187.81, which is $396.37 less than the average cost for the ten year period ending in 1931. The average cost per pupil for heating the schools of the city for 1934-35 was $3.15 as compared with the average cost of $3.04 for the year 1933-34.

School building repairs were discussed but no action was taken by the board; members of the board inspected buildings that were recommended for repairs and deferred action on the matter.

I. U. A. W HOLDS ORGANIZATION MEETING MON.

Nineteen Members Sign Up at First Meeting of the Organization

H. KJOS EXPLAINS UNION TO MEMBERS OF W. P. A.

H.S.VanPelt Named President W.J.Douville, V-Pres. Others Elected

The main topic of discussion at the W.P.A. meeting Monday night at the Court House was the Independent Union of All Workers. As a fitting climax to much discussion, a local unit of the union was founded, with nineteen members signed up, eight of whom were employed workers and eleven unemployed.

Herman Kjos, coresponding secretary of Local No. 13, highway workers, of the I. U. A. W., explained the purpose of the union and invited all who were interested in belonging to this working class organization, to stay after the meeting and sign their application. After Mr. Kjos gave his talk and read some of the literature pertaining to the movement, a general discussion was held.

It was finally decided to organize employed and unemployed. of all trades into one big group, subject to segregation later into the various crafts. A business meeting was held immediately after the signing of the members, Mr. Kjos acting as chairman and Palmer Pederson as secretary. After the reading of the oath and preamble, the by-laws, pertaining to time and place of meeting, how dues should be taken care of, etc., were read, discussed, and acted upon by vote.

A full set of officers was then elected, as follows: president, Henry S. Van Pelt; vice-president, W. J. Douville; coresponding secretary, Ben C. Hagglund; financial secretary, Palmer Pederson; treasurer, James Burrell. A membership committee, consisting of Nick Waldorf, Kenneth O. Latta, Palmer Pederson, Omar Lee, and Godfrey Larson, was also chosen.

It is planned to have union meetings the first and third Mondays of each month, in connection with W. P. A. meetings, which will continue as before, every Monday night. Much interest is being displayed in the local unit of the I. U. A. W. and new members are being added to the rolls daily. Reports from abroad indicate that industrialism is sweeping the state; and local union officials hope to have one of the most active locals.

Zimmerman Urges Towns Continue With Building Plans

St. Paul.—Local communities contemplating public building construction under the new works program have been urged by L. P. Zimmerman, acting Minnesota SERA administrator, to go ahead immediately with plans and specifications.

"While applications and approval of projects can not be considered until field instructions are received from Washington," he said, "it is important that our house be put in order so that work can start as soon as these regulations are available. It is hoped that they will be in our hands by about July 1st."

Mr. Zimmerman pointed out that New York Mills, Atwater and Grove City already have passed bond issues for school building construction and that architects now are working on specifications for these buildings.

In his statement he said that the works division now is devoting much of its efforts in making surveys and reports on a large number of flood control and water conservation projects. Work on 12 approved flood control projects now is held in abeyance pending the clearage of titles, flowage rights, etc.

University to Graduate 1200 Students June 17

Mineapolis.—Class meetings at the University of Minnesota will end this year for the current term and more than 1200 seniors and graduate students will begin looking forward to Monday, June 17, on which day they will receive their diplomas in the annual outdoor Commencement exercises in Memorial Stadium. For many years the university has braved the possibility of rain to dampen down the year's final ceremony and never yet has the graduation pageant been driven indoors. However, Northrop Auditorium stands ready to take care of the exercises if that becomes necessary.

Few gatherings of the year exceed in public interest the university's June graduation which has come to draw between 16,000 and 20,000 people, many of them friends of graduates and members of their families.

President L. D. Coffman will deliver the graduation address, after which the long line of students will cross the platform for their diplomas, those from each of the colleges being differentiated by the color of the tassel on their academic caps.

The Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, son of the late Dr. C. W. Eliot, president of Harvard, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon in Northrop Auditorium on Sunday morning, June 16, the day before commencement.

Registration for summer sessions at the university will begin on Commencement day and classes in the summer session will begin Wednesday, June 19. A second term of the summer session will begin July 27 and run to August 29. Between 5,000 and 6,000 students are expected to enroll in the two summer periods.

FASCISM IS ECONOMIC FAILURE in ITALY

Rome (Tis)—The great promises of the Italian dictator to the masses uttered a year ago before the workers of Milan have collapsed like a dream. Then the Fascist government promised a general reduction of the cost of living in Italy in compensation for a governmental decree lopping off ten per cent of the already low wakes of the Italian workers. Not only has the cost of living not been reduced, but prices have actually risen at an average of 20 per cent.

The failure of Fascism along the economic front is visible everywhere. In no instance have the tendencies of rising prices been offset by a corresponding increase of wages. The rise of foodstuff prices and of cheap domestic articles borne by the working masses has been phenomenal. Butter prices have risen 30 per cent, rices 10 per cent, flour 2 per cent, and even the indispensable spaghetti 10 per cent. The rumbles of discontent are registered far into the ranks of the black shirt movement altho the iron fist of Fascism holds the restless masses in check.

Girl Graduate Found To Have Tuberculosis

Milk drinking period in one of the special schools for cripples. Additional special schools and classes are urged by the Minnesota Association for Crippled Children which launches its state-wide campaign for $52,490 on Monday, June 17th.

How a Minnesota sweet girl graduate will receive her diploma this week with a verdict of "tuberculosis" hanging over her is a true case story told in this week's bulletin from the Minnesota Public Health Association.

In recounting the case, the Christmas Seal organization warns Minnesota youth that tuberculosis is an enemy it cannot afford to ignore, and that apparent health is not always proof that the disease is not present. More extensive tuberculin testing of boys and girls of high school and college age is urged.

"Discovery of the fact that this girl graduate had tuberculosis was the result of a tuberculin testing survey and x-ray of positive reactors in the school," the bulletin states. "She had no previous suspicion that anything was wrong. There were no obvious symptoms, and parents and teachers had no reason to suspect lung trouble. If it had not been for this tuberculin testing survey, months might have elapsed before discovery of the case. Each day's delay would have meant decreased chances for recovery, and greater danger of infection to others. This girl, who received her diploma this week will enter a sanatorium at once, and, thanks to the early discovery of her condition, has a good chance of restoration to health."

"Tuberculosis often begins in childhood," the bulletin states. "In most cases it develops so slowly as to appear to be asleep until the early adult years of life. By proper care, childhood tuberculosis may be prevented from developing into the more serious form. The tuberculin test and x-ray make it possible to discover this condition long before the dangerous killing type of the disease starts."

CARE URGED ON GRAVELED ROADS

Care is urged when traveling on graveled roads. Public Safety Committees are asked to get this message before their communities to assist in cutting down accidents. Vehicles should slow down when passing cars going opposite directions, and not follow closely behind cars traveling in the same direction. Accidents are caused by stones being lifted by one vehicle, and another vehicle, traveling at a higher speed running into the lifted stone. The important factor is the speed of the vehicle which encounters the stone. Many windshields have been broken, and many faces disfigured in this manner.

Marked Decrease in Fires Says Pimley

Minnesota is entering the final period of the dangerous spring fire season with most favorable conditions confronting the personnel of the state division of Forestry and Fire Prevention, A. E. Pimley, Assistant in charge of fire prevention, said. A material decrease in the number of fires this spring and damage resulting is noted over the same period last year, Mr. Fimley stated.

During the months of April and May of this year, there were 285 fires in protected areas of the state that were extinguished by rangers, with the area covered less than 12,000 acres. Most of this was open bog and meadow and the damage negligible. Most of the fires were small, the largest fire to date covering about 500 acres.

In 1934 during these two months of April and May there occurred 1,548 fires covering an area of over 268,000 acres, causing damage in the amount of better than $330,000.

More adequate fire protection and better methods of fire prevention are stressed in policies adopted by the Minnesota Conservation Commission.

A NEW DIVORCE ANGLE

The courts of Tennessee have ruled that a "Mail Order," divorce is no good. The only way a woman can get a legal divorce from a man is to shoot him. It may be just "a good old Southern custom" but husbands better keep on good terms with their respective "better halves."—Los Angeles Examiner.

ACCIDENTAL SUICIDE

Worchester, Mass.—Stephen Liarsky imported a deadly black widow spider from California, and used it to commit suicide. Physicians have never found an antidote to counteract the sting of this insect. In a majority of cases its bite or sting has proven fatal The insect and a note indicating that he had chosen this fantastic method of suicide were found recently in his room. Liarsky was taken to a hospital immediately but later died. Physicians now state that he died of an overdose of narcotic given him by a student nurse, rather than from the sting of the deadly insect. Liarsky accomplished what he set out to do, whether suicide or accidental death.

OCTOPI 1000 MILES FROM SEA

Eau Claire, Wisc.—A 15-year-old boy, fishing near here found three dead octopi in the Chippewa river. The condition of the specimens indicate that they have been dead only a very short time. Residents were puzzled as to how these denizens of salt water traveled more than a thousand miles from their nearest home. The largest was three feet across, and the other two slightly smaller. They were found a few feet apart on a rock below the dam. Being salt water creatures, it is generally supposed that they could not live in fresh water.

Poland.—Apparently the world War is not over yet. On June fourth fourteen children were killed, six of them instantly when a world war shell which they had found on a deserted battlefield exploded. This was at Vilna. The same day another such catastrophe occurred at Wilno, killing five children and seriously wounding three more. A shepherd 1500 feet away was badly hurt in this the second occurance of this kind in one day. Something should be done to dispose of this menace.

MAN WITH TWO STOMACHS

Chicago.—Last week we found a man without a stomach. This week we have a man with two; he is starving to death because he is unable to take enough nourishment to satisfy his double hunger. Seth Stratton, 72, is dying because the passage between his two stomachs is closing. The one stomach is located in his chest, the other in his abdomen. For 21 years Dr. Frank Smithies has been keeping the canal from closing. However, he had to open it once every six months. Stratton failed to keep his last appointment with the doctor and now fears that he can do nothing for him because of his advanced age.

4-H Club Week at N.W. School Week June 17-22

District club leader H. A. Pflughoeft reports widespread interest in the 4-H club week which will be held at the Northwest School June 17 to 22. Over one thousand club members and 4-H leaders from fifteen northwestern Minnesota counties will be in attendance.

The program during the week will emphasize leadership training, project instruction, and recreation. Special judging contests will be conducted in dairy, general livestock and crops. A better groomed girl contest will again be a special feature, with two girls eligible to enter from each county. Fifteen counties are expected to take part in the district one-act play and music contests. Three plays, two vocal and two instrumental numbers will be selected to take part in the state contest to be held at St. Paul during state Fair week.

The recreational program will be under the supervision of R. J. Christgau, director of athletics at the Northwest School. He will be ably assisted by recreational directors from the various counties. Many communities have staged county play days to select teams and individuals for the numerous events in the district tournament. Mr. Pflughoeft is urging every boy and girl to come prepared to take part in the play day program.

Suitable awards will be made to winners in all events. County teams scoring highest in dairy, general livestock, and crops judging, will receive silver trophies, while the county with the highest score in recreational activities will be presented with an attractive banner. Individuals winning first in the various events will receive certificates

NAZI PAPER CONFIRMS REICH BANKRUPTCY

Berlin (TIS).—The bankruptcy of the Third Reich can no longer be denied, even in the coordinated economic press of Nazi Germany. According to figures published in the well known economic magazine "Deutsche Volkswirt," the total public indebtedness of Germany amounts to more than 35 billion marks or approximately 9 billion dollars. Despite the fantastic increase in the public debt during the last two years, all efforts of the German Reichsbank to put an end to the indiscriminate borrowing system, have been of no avail.

WHY NOT A VIADUCT ON THIRD STREET?

According to the news dispatches, $17,000,000 of federal funds have been allotted to Minnesota for railroad crossing elimination and highway construction. It would seem that this is the logical time for Thief River Falls to ask for the construction of a viaduct under the Soo tracks on Third street at the Soo depot.

With the completion of the new parkway the greatest part of the traffic from the east and southeast will come in over the new bridge and the present crossing is inadequate to take care of it. With the return of normal rainfall and crops to North Dakota there will most likely again be much rail shipping thru here and unless this crossing is eliminated there will be many aggravating delays for motorists as well as danger in this crossing.

We have heard rumors to the effect that Trunk Highway number one which now comes in over the Squaw Point bridge and crosses the Soo tracks on Eighth street will in time be deflected and brought across the river farther east to join the Parkway on Johnson street. If this should be done, then the traffic over the new bridge and up Third Street across the Soo tracks at the depot will be doubled immediately.

We suggest that in view of the immediate and future need and the fact that such a project would provide much additional labor, that the Civic and Commerce association, the new Junior Chamber of Commerce, the city council, county board and other civic organization pool their efforts and request of the Highway Department that this worthwhile project be included in its 1935 construction program.

THERE IS NO TIME LIKE THE PRESENT

The Country Press, Farmer-Labor newspaper of Moorhead, carried an editorial last week captioned: "Not the Opportune Time," in which it made two statements with which we emphatically disagree. First, it states that this is not the opportune time to launch a third party. And, second, that the Farmer-Labor Party supported Roosevelt in 1932 and would do so again in 1936.

It may be quite possible that we could not elect a third party candidate for the presidency this coming campaign. If our memory serves us correctly, no new party ever elected a president the first time they entered a national campaign. The Republican party elected Lincoln when they entered the second presidential campaign of their existence. However, there never was and probably never will be a more opportune time to elect a third party candidate to the presidency in the very first campaign, than the coming campaign. To delay another four years just to save the political jobs of those who are getting a little democratic gravy, is hardly a logical reason for refraining from entering the national campaign next year. So far as the Farmer-Laborites are concerned they have nothing to lose if Roosevelt is defeated by a Republican, and nothing to gain if he is re-elected. This tacit understanding with the democrats is grating on the nerves of most Farmer-Laborites, and the best bet the leaders of the party and its elected officials would be to unhook before they are unhooked. Unless our observation and hearing is failing us, the rank and file of the Farmer-Labor forces are so thoroughly disgusted with the antics of the Roosevelt administration that they will bolt their own ticket if the leaders attempt to parley with the Democrats.

And that brings us to the second statement of the Country Press. It must be remembered that the Farmer-Labor association did not take any stand in favor of Roosevelt in the 1932 campaign. While some of the leaders did support Roosevelt there were also many of them that did not. And there were thousands of Farmer-Laborites who voted for Norman Thomas, and thousands more who voted for Roosevelt just to beat Hoover.

When Brother Whaley says that the Farmer-Laborites will support Roosevelt again in 1936, it seems to us that he is a little premature. Would it not be advisable to consult the convention first, before making such a statement? We can probably speak as authoritatively for the Farmer-Laborites as the Country Press can, and our guess is that they will not support Roosevelt, regardless of what the line-up may be. If there is not a better candidate offered us we can and should remain neutral in the national campaign.

THE NRA DECISION

Somehow we can not get all steamed up over the fact that the Supreme Court declared the NRA unconstitutional. And we believe that President Roosevelt, in spite of the fact that he did a little fuming over the decision and said something about it taking us back to the horse and buggy days, was glad enough to have it thrown in the ash can. The fact remains that in spite of the administration's blustering the NRA has been a decided fizzle from the beginning, and now that the court has thrown it out the President has a clean slate, so far as the act is concerned and he can go before the people again and point out that the major part of his program has been knocked oue by a set of nine old men. Being a shrewd politician he will no doubt find many reasons to believe that it would have eventually solved our problems and will present a fine argument to prove that if he is re-elected he will inaugurate other and divers measures to help the very much forgotten, Forgotten Man.

The fact that the Supreme Court has no authority to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional is being pointed out by a large part of the daily press at this time, altho that fact has been public knowledge for a long time. The only difference is, that in the past, Big Business has generally been wholly on the side of the Supreme Court when laws have been declared to be inviolation of the constitution. This time, however, a large part of Big Business is reluctant to see the NRA go by the boards because it has protected them in flagrant violations of the anti-trust laws, and in combinations to freeze out the smaller fry in business.

The Supreme Court, like other courts, generally follows the trend of public opinion, altho at times they may be quite a distance behind. It is generally conceded that at the time that the court held the Minnesota Mortgage Moratorium Act constitutional, any other verdict would have precipitated a serious rural revolt in the Middle West. Holding the Railroad Pension Act invalid, however, would cause no particular reaction among the larger share of the American people, and the court knew it. So it was quite in order for it to heed the pressure of Big Business and declare it unconstitutional. In the case of the NRA, being that Big Business was divided on the question, and labor, with the exception of the AF of L swivel chair artists, was thoroughly fed up with it, the court could follow its usual inclination. Therefore it held that any law which interferes with the rights of business to hire and fire at any price it sees fit, and sell or undersell according to the dictates of its own conscience, or lack of conscience, is unconstitutional.

Altho the court's decision is in this case just as verbose and technical as usual, there is one point which even a layman knows from the most cursory study of the constitution is well taken. That is, that Congress can not delegate to the president, and the president again to private citizens, the power of writing laws. The power of legislation is inherent in the Congress only and in no other body. On this point alone the whole code structure toppled. The rest of the opinion is to our mind debatable. Whether or not government can dictate hours of labor and rate of pay that industry must pay its employees would depend upon how far the power of Congress to legislate in the general welfare is conceded. Congress is assumed to be concerned with the "state of the union," and whatever acts may be deemed necesary to "perpetuate the union and the general welfare," can be held constitutional, if and when the public demand is strong enough. When that time comes nine old men can not stop progress. Until the people awaken to their own needs and demand them, thru intelligent political action a small group will consistently blcok progressive legislation. If not in Congress, then thru the president's veto or thru an opinion of the Supreme Court.

ATTACKS SCHOOLS
(St. Paul Daily News)

Dr. Edwin C. Broome, superintendent of schools in Philadelphia, tells the National Society of New England that "there seems to be a country-wide movement" to discredit the school system on the ground that it is largely responsible for the high cost of government.

The warning is well-timed. Our school system is expensive; granted. It may be that a judicious pruning of the budget here and there would be a good thing. But in the main, the taxpayer gets more for his money in the educational system that he supports than he does in any other single tax-supported venture.

To reduce the cost of government, attack first wasteful and inefficient political control. See that the so-called "honest graft"—as well as the other kind—is eliminated, and that men are elected who will make some effort to do away with favoritism in government.

Effect consolidations where duplication is unnecessary. For example, there is no excuse in the world for two complete groups of officials in St. Paul and Ramsey county. Northern counties, practically bankrupt, could save their taxpayers thousands of dollars by mergers with other counties. Township officials could be eliminated throughout the state.

Strictly adhered to, such a program would sharply reduce taxes and still leave us able to support the schools in the style our children deserve.

THE SUPREME COURT'S AUTHORITY
(Minnesota Leader)

No act of Congress, no Presidential decree, no vote of the people has ever given the United States Supreme Court authority to declare laws constitutional or unconstitutional. And the Constitution itself does not provide for such action on the part of the Supreme Court. If a new Constitution is written this is one of the matters that should receive attention. Either the Supreme Court should be empowered to pass upon the constitutionality of enacted laws or the new Constitution should specifically state that laws as passed by state legislatures and the national Congress should be, and remain, the law of the land and its 130 million people.

THE UNION LABEL
(Union Advocate)

For fifty years the union label has stood for fair dealing, and in this sense fair dealing means a decent wage, social security, collective bargaining and a greater share in the profits of toil.

The union label stands for American interests as opposed to the commercial interest of foreign capital. A union label on any product is evidence that the article was made in America under conditions of labor agreeable to a majority of the workers in the plant which produced it. It is absolute evidence that an American worker produced the article and that he was paid according to union standards.

The union label on any ware is a constant reminder that it was not made in a penal institution by prison labor or any other type of forced labor.

The union label is a symbol of cooperation between employer and employee, legal evidence that there has been a mutual agreement between capital and Labor as to working conditions, hours of toil and wages.

What more could anyone ask?

WAR TRAGEDY
(St. Paul Daily News)

Children playing in a field near Vilna, Poland, the other day found an old shell, buried in the soil since the World War days. They began, ignorantly, to play with it. It exploded, and 14 children were killed.

This sort of tragedy is not uncommon in Europe where there are many battlefields sown with high explosives. It is a dreadful commentary on the far-reaching effects of the last war; and it is even grimmer as a forecast on the next one.

There probably is not a man on earth so cruel and heartless that he would not do all in his power to save a group of children from destruction, if he found them playing with an unexploded shell. And yet—what are we to say of ourselves, when we reflect that every great nation is busily preparing for a new war in which the murder of children by high explosives will be taken for granted.?

HEARST NEWSREELS ON DECLINE
(Minnesota Leader)

No more healthy move has started in years than the national awakening to and disapproval of the W. R. Hearst propaganda. In the East, at Williamstown, Mass., for instance, motion picture theatre patrons have registered such a protest that the one theatre showing the Hearst newsreel now flashes this notice regularly on the screen: "No more Hearst-Metrotone News will be shown in this theater." The same "flash" should appear upon the screen of every Minnesota movie house which now projects the Hearst propaganda of bigotry, jingoism and reaction.

The Chicago Juvenile Protective Association states that the saloon-taverns of that city not only violate the liquor regulations but other statutes as well, particularly the Child Labor laws.

Recognizing the effect of propaganda in determining the attitude of youth toward all commodities, we protest against all advertising of alcoholic beverages and narcotics.—Resolution Congress of Parents and Teachers, May, 1935.

Before prohibition the wets claimed that labor would not work without beer, and tried to stage a big "No Beer, No Work" parade in New York immediately after prohibition became effective. But labor troubles dropped from 3. 571 in wet 1919 to 808 in dry 1932, with a loss of 6,462,973 man-days. In 1933, with beer, the number jumped to 1,562, or more than doubled, and the man-day loss climbed to 14,818,847. With only 11 months' figures for 1934, the man-day loss is above 20,000,000.

YOUTH AND WAR

By NITA CAVARIS

What civilized person can uphold the killing of his fellow men or the great losses of money and resources embodied in the institution of war?

What man or woman, who finds pride in his humanity and fairness, can sanction the useless pain and sorrow that result from human being combating human being?

What individual, who claims average intelligence, can find value in bloody strife when the losses incurred so completely overshadow any possible gain?

It is generally accepted, I believe, that most reasonable persons oppose the institution of war. But this opposition is only a passive force, smoldering under the deadening, heavy ashes of lethargy, militaristic propaganda, and failure to recognize the elements creating real war danger.

Among Youth today there is developing an increasing consciousness of the catastrophic effects of war, of its horror and human misery, of its futility. Young men and women know that they will be paying for the World War all their lives just as their fathers are now paying and as their children will have to pay in the future. The cost to date of America's participation in the World War is 55 billion dollars, as estimated in the United States News for April 8, 1935. About 26 billions of this amount was spent in 1917-21 for fighting and demobilizing; 29 billions were spent from 1921-35 for such costs as war debts, interest on war debts, and pensions, which grew out of the war. Already, the peace-time expense has surpassed the war-time cost. And the Veterans' Administration estimates that in the year 2018, the United States will still be paying for the war of 1917-18!

At the same time, there is growing up among Youth today an increasing awareness that war is a constant peril even in times of peace. Youth has begun to recognize the fact that certain factions find it to their interest to propagandize in favor of increased armaments and militaristic preparations. Many youths see, as does Senator Gerald Nye, chairman of the munitions committee, that "the profits of preparation for war and the profits of war itself constitute the most serious challenge to the peace of the world." It is an amazing fact that only 18 years after the last war, while we are living in a world of nations made bankrupt by that war, we find the United States government appropriated 15 per cent more for actual war purposes in 1934 than ever in its history. More guns, more ships, more soldiers—all going into the biggest peace-time military and naval expenditures ever carried out by this nation.

Among many of the thinking youths of today is a desire to crystallize into recognizable form all the smoldering hatred of war, so that in the event of another conflict, we will be able to resist the mass hysteria, to see through the maze of propaganda cast about us, and to combat the desires of those who will profit by the entrance of the United States into another armed conflict.

To take real, effective action in denouncing war, to counteract militaristic propaganda with publicity in favor of peace was the purpose of the recent anti-war strikes and the many anti-war conferences being held in colleges throughout the United States.

These demonstrations show that Youth means business. They are one part of an interesting and significant attempt by a group of earnest young men and women to prove to the world the Youth opposes war, and to strive to attain peace and good-will among nations.

The Passing of a Pale Red

Franklin D. Roosevelt is done for in the opinion of most people. His uncalled for indignation at the recent supreme court decision against the NRA finished him if nothing else did, for many people thought it possible that F. D. himself instigated that decision. Here is why: the NRA was mighty unpopular, so it was killed, but Roosevelt himself would never admit that. Millions of people fervently hoped that NRA promises would be carried out and capitalism reformed. But once again Karl Marx was right—capitalism cannot be reformed. It can only be destroyed; and F. D. would never do that.

The fallacy of "pale-red"-ism is the belief that reform from above is possible, that progress can be handed out on a silver platter. All history shows that advance is made only by the bitterest fighting. Our own revolutionary war is proof of that.

Roosevelt was sincere in his desire to perpetuate the profit system and to ameliorate the condition of the people; but the two desires are incompatible. The profit system must go before the condition of the people can be bettered.

Misquoting Karl Marx

In his speech at the City Auditorium May 24, Morris Kaplan of Bemidji purposely misquoted Karl Marx to fit present conditions, as he said. His misquotation (with his own interpolations) reads as follows: "Workers of this country, unite; you have nothing to lose but your chains (which means your ignorance), and you have a world to gain (which means knowledge)." A young communist arose to correct him on this, and Kaplan quickly said the right words, "Workers of the world unite; you have nothing to lose but your chains, and you have a world to gain." This was all done so graciously, that most people perhaps did not notice it. But the misconstruction has bothered me, who saw and heard the by-play, and I will not rest until the matter is straightened out. The word "chains" does not mean only ignorance, for knowledge is not always power. And "a world to gain" not only means knowledge, but everything else besides. For one may well know what to do, and still be unable to do it. Economic chains are very obstinate.

The spectacle of the workers of this country alone uniting to gain a world of anything but knowledge smecks of intense nationalism. The Japs and the Italians evidently work along this line. As I look at it, "a world to gain" is everything that exists, including knowledge. If that is being fantastically correct, so be it.

Echoes from Minnesota

The reverberations of the NRA crash echo and re-echo even in this neck of the woods, with Joseph Wolf, national committeeman of the Democratic party, rising up on his hind legs with this remark: "I did not and will not support a man who referred to our great President as a 'red'." This blast was aimed at John E. Regan, who failed to get the support of the Democratic powers that be in this state, during his campaign for governor of Minnesota. Regan was frankly opposed to Roosevelt and the NRA.—Then up pops J. A. O. Preus with this: "The leader of the Democratic party has abandoned his party pledges and virtually made the Democratic party a nazi or fascist party, if not, indeed, a completely socialist party." This I construe to be slander against both the fascists and the socialists.—Preus, Regan, and Wolf ought to be satisfied now that NRA has failed and labor conditions have fallen back honestly to general depression levels. It was a rosy dream anyway—another "noble experiment" which failed.

AGAIN, THE MONEY CHANGERS WIN
By S. O Sanderson

In his veto message President Roosevelt says: "Three million veterans have already borrowed on their Certificates an amount which with interest amounts to $1,700,000,000," and that under the Patman Bonus Bill, "It means paying the veterans $1,600,000,000 more than the present value of their Certificates" . . . "It is a new straight gratuity or bounty (to the veterans) to the amount of $1,600,000,000."

Well, now let us see how this works out.

If Roosevelt had NOT vetoed the Patman bill; the soldiers would have received their adjusted compensation, and would have paid the $1,700,000,000 they owe the Bankers, thus stopping the interest, and would have had some money left to live on.

But, Roosevelt vetoed the Patman Bill, and as it now stands, the soldiers have no money with which to pay the bankers, and will not have any until 1945.

For the next ten years the interest on this $1,700,000,000 will continue to pile up, and by 1945 the bankers will have practically all of this $1,600,000,000, that Roosevelt calls "a straight gratuity or bounty."

If, a few Bankers who remained at home, safely distant from bullets and poison gas, conniving how to most effectively exploit the masses, get the gratuity or bounty, it is O. K. with Roosevelt. But, to give an average of $500 to each of three million soldiers who are broke, after having risked their lives in the trenches on the battlefields of France, or had been assigned to that risk, THAT IS ALL WRONG.

In his final eager appeal, addressing himself to many groups of the common people, (but not to the money changers) Roosevelt says: "I am thinking of those" and "those" and "those." Maybe so, maybe his thoughts are with you comon people, but his actions are certainly being governed by the bankers, and for the bankers and Money Changers.

With the great faith the "Forgotten Man" had in Roosevelt during the campaign, and the confident hope for the return of a better day, when he became president, it seems indeed cruel to question the President's sincerity, BUT AFTER ALL, ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS.

—Rochester, Minn.

Minute Sermons
By Dr. Crawford Grays

When the story is finally written from 1914 to 1935 and on until these days of difficulty and danger are over, when the final verdict is rendered, it will be said that the outstanding feature of the period thru which we are passing was the patience and the patriotism of the people of this country. Drafted to fight, exploited by profiteers, impoverished by an economic cataclysm, driven to madness by floods and drought and dust; who has heard coming from the American people the voice of sedition or revolution?

What we people of America are ready for is not communism or fascism but true Americanism, for that social and economic justice which is an inseparable part of Americanism; justice of all branches of government to all classes of the people. Hence, an outstanding task for we, the people of these United States, is the reenforcing of our internal defenses for the safety of the democratic form of government. No one has a discharge from this task.

Madison Said:

"We are free today substantially, but the day will come when our Republic will be an impossibility. It will be an impossibility because wealth will be concentrated in the hands of a few. A republic cannot stand upon bayonets, and when that day comes, when the wealth will be in the hands of a few, then we must rely upon the wisdom of the best elements in the country to readjust the laws of the nation to the changed conditions."

Norman Thomas On Public Ownership

By John Newton Thurber

Cleveland.—"While I favor public ownership of the railroads, and of all of the basic means of production, the inadequacy of public ownership is apparent. What we must strive for is social ownership, with directorates elected by the workers and the consumers," declared Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, before the quadrennial convention of the Brotherhood of Railroad Workers in Cleveland. Over 2,000 delegates gave Thomas an enthusiastic reception.

"Slavery is as possible under nationalized industry as under capitalism. The serfdom of the workers in the nationalized industries of Italy and Germany prove this, as does the governmental subsidized slavery of the cotton workers of California."

Attacks Supreme Court

"The members of the Brotherhood have learned the bitterness of excessive constitutionalism. They are shackled by the arbitrary decision of one lawyer in a group of nine assembled in Washington. We are not far from a dictatorship when one man can lay down the law for all time. Democracy cannot survive if this situation is to prevail," Thomas said, in commenting on the recent action of the Supreme Court in declaring the Railroad Pension Act unconstitutional.

"If Congress finds that it cannot determine decent conditions in industry, then we must make Congress an agency to bring about social ownership."

Shows Class Rule

"During the whole period of prosperity," Thomas declared, no attempt was made to reduce the bonded indebtedness of the railroads. During the depression wage cuts have been taken generally, while bonded indebtedness has remained sacred. This has been true not only of the railroads, but of all industry. While interest payments decreased only 2 per cent wage cuts have been more than 35 per cent. Yet these stockholders and bondholders knew nothing about railroading or about the management of industry."

"All of our efforts at improvement have been thwarted by the financial overlords of the nation. If mankind is to be delivered from slavery and from the threat of war, the workers must join in an army set upon winning government. We are out for the capture of power."

No Political Santa Claus

"The workers have created all wealth and have got little of it. In all ages they have been exploited. The hour has come when we must break the yoke. We must conquer poverty and establish a regime of abundance," Thomas declared. "We can win this struggle if we have intelligent organization, both economic and political."

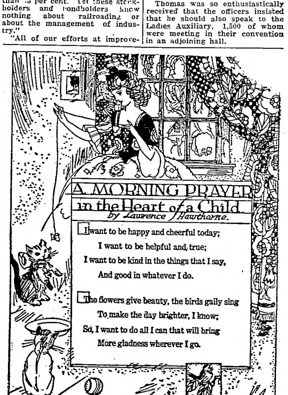
"We will either master machines or be driven into deeper slavery. We must establish a brotherhood of workers, in which there will be a universal right to organize. Workers must have power to control the rate of introduction of machinery, and must secure the benefits from its introduction. Only as we plan and act together can we win this," he said. "There is no Santa Claus, and no political messiah will suffice. We must win by our own organization."

Union for Government Ownership

Thomas was introduced by A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, whose introductory speech was interrupted by sharp applause when reference was made to his two campaigns for the Presidency of the United States on the Socialist ticket.

In his opening address to the convention last week Mr. Whitney had declared that the profit system has been proved inadequate and the convention has reaffirmed its stand for government ownership of railroads. It began its sessions but a few days after the Supreme Court rendered a 5-to-4 decision declaring the Railroad Pension Act to be unconstitutional.

Thomas was so enthusiastically received that the officers insisted that he should also speak to the Ladies Auxiliary, 1,500 of whom were meeting in their convention in an adjoining hall.



A MORNING PRAYER
in the Heart of a Child
by Laurence Hawthorne.

I want to be happy and cheerful today;
I want to be helpful and true;
I want to be kind in the things that I say,
And good in whatever I do.

The flowers give beauty, the birds gaily sing
To make the day brighter, I know;
So, I want to do all I can that will bring
More gladness wherever I go.

Correspondence School Fraud P.O. Dept. Says

Washington, D. C., June 5, 1935. —The United States Civil Service Commission calls attention to the following fraud order issued by the Post Office Department against Bureau of Public Instruction of Philadelphia, Pa., on May 17, 1935:

"It having been made to appear to the Postmaster General upon evidence satisfactory to him, that BUREAU OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, and its officers and agents as such at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, are engaged in conducting a scheme or device for obtaining money through the mails by means of false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises, in violation of sections 259 and 732 United States Code, and by authority vested in the Postmaster General by said laws the Postmaster General hereby forbids you to pay and postal money order drawn to the order of said concern and parties and you are hereby directed to inform the remitter of any such postal money order that payment thereof has been forbidden, and that the amount thereof will be returned upon the presentation of the original order or a duplicate thereof applied for and obtained under the regulations of the Department.

"And you are hereby instructed to return all letters, whether registered or not, and other mail matter which shall arrive at your office directed to the said concern and parties to the postmasters at the offices at which they were originally mailed, to be delivered to the senders thereof, with the words 'Fraudulent:: Mail to this address returned by order of Postmaster General' plainly written or stamped upon the outside of such letters or matter. Where there is nothing to indicate who are the senders of letters not registered or other matter, you are directed to send such letters and matter to the Division of Dead Letters with the words 'Fraudulent: Mail to this address returned by order of Postmaster General' plainly written or stamped thereon, to be disposed of as other dead matter under the laws and regulations applicable thereto."

The Bureau of Public Service Instruction is one of the so-called civil service corespondence schools.

To safeguard the public, the United States Civil Service Commission has called attention many times to the misleading statements of many such schools and has advised persons interested to consult it regarding the probability of examinations being held before making contracts or paying money for courses.

Information regarding examinations may be obtained from the Commission's board of examiners at first and second-class post offices.

Bids Asked on 1200 Mile Road Program

Bids for the bituminous treatment of more than 1,200 miles of trunk roads will be opened by the state highway department June 11, according to a bulletin from the department. Work of improving the roads is expected to begin immediately after the letting of the contracts.

The projects include new treatments on approximately 70 miles of gravel roads, and retreatments on 1,197 miles of bituminous highways. It is estimated that more than 6,000,000 gallons of bituminous material will be used. This program is in addition to bituminous work done directly by maintenance forces of the highway department.

RECOGNITION FOR A STATE FARM LEADER

The 45 years of work for Minnesota's agriculture by Andrew Boss, vice director of the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station, will receive formal recognition at the observance of the Semi- Centennial of the experiment station at University Farm, St. Paul, Friday and Saturday, June 14 and 15. Dr. Boss is probably as widely known in the state as any other farm leader, and, as he is to retire from active service with the station before long, a recognition of his work is to be made one of the features at a dinner in connection with the Semi-Centennial observance, next Friday evening. A. J. Glover, editor of Hoard's Dairyman, a long-time friend of Dr. Boss, will deliver the recognition address.

EXAMS FOR BEGINNER TRAFFIC LAW BREAKERS

The Duluth Municipal Court plan of requiring youthful drivers, and others apprehended on minor violations, to pass a written examination on the Uniform Traffic Code was the subject of much discussion at all of the recent Regional Safety Conferences. The plan is somewhat the same as that of the traffic school at Dunwoody Institute, Minneapolis. The examination questions are now being studied by a committee of police court and safety authorities with the view of copies being furnished to all communities interested.

Margarine Tariff Bill Is Introduced in Congress

A bill has been introduced on the floor of the house of representatives of the U. S. Congress by Representative R. M. Kleberg of Texas asking that a ten cent tax be placed on margarine oils and fats that are imported. It is estimated by the Hon. Richard Kleberg that this would give a market to over 150,000,000 additional pounds of fats and oils produced in this country. It is hoped by the sponsors of this bill that the margarine industry would, by this measure, be put on a domestic basis.

Among the various interesting facts brought out by Congressman Kleberg was that before the World War ninety-nine per cent of the fats contained in margarine was of domestic origin. It is claimed by the sponsor that this ten cents tax will compel the manufacturer to use more domestic oils and fats.

F. R. Signs Bill Cutting Land Bank Loan Rates

Interest will be temporarily lowered on all bank loans July 1, according to information received by the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul from Washington, and announced today.

The new rate will be 3½ per cent on all loans made through National Farm Loan Associations for all interest payable in the 1 year period following July 1; and 4 per cent for all interest payable in the 2-year period commencing July 1, 1936.

On loans made directly by the bank to individual borrowers, the rate will be reduced to 4 per cent for the first year and 4½ per cent for the 2-year period.

These interest reductions are provided in the farm credit act of 1935 which was approved by President Roosevelt on June 3. The act does not make any change in the interest rate on commissioner's loans which remains at 5 per cent.

--- WORKERS ---
Take a "Tip" From a Wise Old Owl

Frequently we have an occasion to tell candidates to do this or that. We do this as a purely constructive suggestion, trying to better their subscription getting capacity, trying to help them. Many of the workers frequently discount what we tell them, not that the campaign manager is infallible, but these workers generally do not win as large a prize as those that pay more strict attention to our suggestions for greater production. Considerable experience in this line of business has taught us many of it's fundamental essentials, which we have tried to pass on to each and every candidate.

Almost any candidate now in the campaign, may be a prize winner by doing all they are able to do during the few remaining days of the campaign. Do not lose one minute during these last few days. The candidates with the greater initiative and persistence, the determination to go to work and keep working every available minute from now till the close of the campaign, will more than likely be the winners. Some have lost time earlier in the campaign, and to these we make one last request: WORK EVERY MINUTE OF THE CAMPAIGN AND TRY TO MAKE UP FOR WHAT YOU HAVE LOST.

ATTENTION, EVERYONE!
This is definitely your last chance to turn in your subscription for your favorite candidate

LATE FIGURES CONFIRM NAZI LABOR DEFEAT

Berlin (TIS)—Reports about the recent workers' councils elections proclaimed as a stupendous victory of Nazism show that they were preceded by mass arrests of workers. Even so, the contradicting statements as given out by various official Nazi sources, prove that the Nazis themselves are far from being convinced of their victory.

According to the German Labor Front, 5,081 workers of the 15,417 workers of the Leunawerk Chemical Works entitled to a vote voted against the Nazi lists. The propaganda ministry on the other hand reported only 1,841 "no" votes. The same is true of the vote held in the shipbuilding companies of Hamburg, where the "no" vote was given by the Labor Front as 2,213; while the Ministry reported only 1,182. In some leading industrial enterprises, the voting was very light as evidenced by the A.E. G. electrical concern where only 1,240 out of a total of 2,013 votes were cast. Of the vote cast in the industrial district of Beuthen, Silesia, only 52 per cent were in favor of the Nazi candidates. In the district of Hindenburg, Upper Silesia, 57.8 per cent voted yes, and 39.4 per cent voted no. In the electricity works of Zschornewitz 41 per cent were cast for the opposition; in the automobile and aeroplane factories, Daimler-Benz, 40 per cent; and in the German insurance concern, Belrin, 41 per cent. These figures reported by themselves show how strong the resistance of Germany's working masses to Nazism is, and that not even the most brutal terror has succeeded in wiping out the opposition.

BOY FREES ROBIN, BIRD BECOMES PET

Willmar.—There isn't any doubt in the mind of Earl Larcom but that birds are not only intelligent creatures but are grateful for favors. Earl did his Boy Scout good turn recently when he saw a robin caught high in a tree, hanging by one leg with the other caught by several pieces of cord. It would have been impossible for the bird to free itself. He climbed into the tree and while the bird pecked away at his hand, not realizing that the boy was trying to save its life, Earl completed his task. Now the robin is grateful, and to show his appreciation is so tame that it comes up to the back porch and eats out of a little tin dish.

HITCHHIKERS MAKE LINCOLN ON 10 CENTS

Fairmont.—When it comes to cheap traveling, leave it to two Martin county boys hitchhiking their way to California. The young men, Woodrow Reed, 21, son of Mrs. Dan Wright of Fairmont, and Bud Stockdill, 17, of Welcome. wrote a postal card from Lincoln, Nebraska, saying they had made that point in two days and had spent 10 cents since they left Fairmont. They didn't explain how they got their meals, but wrote, "Don't worry about our funds holding out. We've only spent 10 cents so far and we'll have money left when we get to California."

LABOR LEADER MURDERED FOR HELPING COMRADES

Essen (TIS)—The reasons behind the murder of Freidrich Huseman, 62 year old leader of the German Mine Workers Federation, and president of the Mine Workers Internationale, by Nazis, are slowly becoming known despite all attempts of the authorities to suppress them.

Huseman had been arrested because he had advised some of his former trade union comrades in legal matters and had helped them to draw up documents for damage claims in the legally proscribed forms. The Gestapo (state secret police) who got hold of some of his letters, deliberately misconstrued his help toward his former comrades and accused him of attempting to create an organization hostile to the state and to Nazism. After having been submitted to gruelling examinations and mistreatment he was ordered transferred to the concentration camp Borgermoor. On the way his Nazi guards killed him under the pretext of his trying to escape, although he was physically unable to do so.

Campaign Under Way For Aid to Cripples

District presidents of the American Legion Auxiliary are putting the finishing touches on their various county organizations in preparation for the opening of the state-wide campaign for cripples which begins next Monday, June 17th. This campaign, under Legion Auxiliary sponsorship, is to raise $52,490 for the Minnesota Association for Crippled Children. At the conclusion of the campaign the Association will expand its program to follow out the recommendations made from a year's study of the problems of cripples in the state.

At the present time an attempt is made to cover the entire state, but because of inadequate funds, a well-rounded program cannot be launched. The proposed program contemplates the employment of two additional crafts teachers, an academic teacher, a medical social worker, and occupational and physical therapists for exceptional cases. Their work will cover the entire state.

Mrs. M. E. Withrow, state president of the auxiliary, is also general chairman of the campaign. In commenting on the program of the Minnesota Association for Crippled Children, she pointed out that there is an increased demand for the services of the association. Without additional funds the association will be seriously handicapped in all departments.

Attention was drawn to the fact that the association is the only general and state wide organization. In addition to its regular services, the association acts as a clearing house for other organization, correlating and co-ordinating the various types of assistance to cripples.

There are 55,000 known cripples in Minnesota between the ages of 16 and 55 years. A conservative estimate places the number of cripples under 16 years of age at 10,000.

OLD FASHIONED RUNAWAY THRILLS WINONA RESIDENTS

Winona. — An "old-fashioned" runaway, one like those common when autos first set grandpa's horses snorting and rearing, thrilled residents at Winona recently. John J. Wnuk left a team and wagon standing in an alley near East Wabasha and Vine Streets and the team started when a boy flipped stones at the horses. North on Vine Street galloped the horses, wagon clattering and swaying behind them. They swung out and flung the wagon against the rear of a new Ford, smashing in the rear of the car, damaging the spare tire, caving in a fender, the sides of the car and a running board and breaking the wagon in two. A pedestrian who had some "horse sense" or remembered a movie scene, got into the street, waving his arms in an attempt to stop the horses, but ducked in time to avoid getting run over. The horses finally came to a halt astraddle a stout tree, one horse on each side, and were caught there. A motorist traveling west on Broadway saw the oncoming team and turning off sharply to avoid the runaway rig ran into the curb and bent the axle of his car.

GENT, STEWED, GOES FOR RIDE; WAKES UP LOST

Isle.—Wandering dejectedly up the sidewalk on Isle Main Street early one morning recently was a very glum stranger, whose memory of where he had been and what he had been doing the preceding twelve hours was very hazy, to say the least. It seems that he had the night before looked on wine when it was red in the glass. Leaving the rest of his party at the resort where they had made reservations, he drove to Isle. He couldn't remember the name of the resort or the proprietor or how the place was or how he got there or how he had gotten to Isle. He had a dim recollection, however, that he had come to Isle from the east, but his car, parked on Main street, was facing west. He also remembered seeing a big lake at the resort where he stopped. In his car was the outboard motor that the party had brought with them for use in fishing that morning. One or two local men talked with the stranger, but with nothing but his meagre and uncertain memory to go on, they couldn't help him any.

PAYS $100 FOR STOVE IN NICKLES, DIMES

Moorhead.—Merchants are sometimes surprised these days when a customer pays cold cash for a large purchase, but to pay over $100 for a new stove in nickles and dimes—that was a new experience for Memfred Nelson, manager of the Moorhead Hardware Company. A customer came in, selected a stove, and tossed a bag on the counter with a loud "thump." It contained sufficient pennies and dimes to pay for the stove. For curiosity, Nelson put the bag on the scales. It weighed 10 pounds.

83 YEAR OLD HUNTER KILLS WOLF, 7 CUBS

Appleton.—One more effective blow at the wolf at the door was delivered when J. H. Smith, residing near Appleton, killed a female wolf and seven of her cubs in their lair in the river area southwest of town. Hunters shot a male wolf, which escaped but they believe he was seriously wounded and is now dead. Mr. Smith, 83 years of age, is a veteran wolf hunter, and his kill is expected to stop the loss of sheep and property damage, reported by farmers living in the section where the wolves were located. Bounty paid by the county for the killing of the wolves totaled $57, according to Leo E. Engleson, computed on the basis of $15 for full grown females and $6 for each of the cubs.

RAISES MUSTACHE TO LOOK LIKE CUT

Columbia Heights.—The trials and tribulations of the politician are many, especially at election time. Take, for instance, the case of L. A. Tjosvold, councilman, who is running for re-election in the Columbia Heights primaries. Discovering that he was out of campaign cards, Tjosvold decided to have Al Ovshak print him up a couple of thousand. There was only one hitch in the plan. The picture which he had printed on his cards four years ago showed him with a mustache, which he had since shaved off. Not to be outdone, Tjosvold started out resolutely to raise a new mustache. Then after he had made fairly good headway with the hairs on his upper lip, he discovered to his consternation that he couldn't find his cut. What to do about it?

RAISES MUSTACHE TO LOOK LIKE CUT

Columbia Heights.—The trials and tribulations of the politician are many, especially at election time. Take, for instance, the case of L. A. Tjosvold, councilman, who is running for re-election in the Columbia Heights primaries. Discovering that he was out of campaign cards, Tjosvold decided to have Al Ovshak print him up a couple of thousand. There was only one hitch in the plan. The picture which he had printed on his cards four years ago showed him with a mustache, which he had since shaved off. Not to be outdone, Tjosvold started out resolutely to raise a new mustache. Then after he had made fairly good headway with the hairs on his upper lip, he discovered to his consternation that he couldn't find his cut. What to do about it?

State Real Estate Men To Gather in Alexandria

A convention of real estate men and those interested in real estate will be held in Alexandria Friday and Saturday, June 7th and 8th, according to announcement of O. C. Neuman, of Wheaton, president, and J. F. Nichols, Minneapolis, secretary of the Minnesota Realty Association, who are calling the meeting in Alexandria.

A tentative program is being made up which calls for registration on Friday Morning, June 7th, at the Chamber of Commerce club rooms, where all sessions will be held. The opening session will be held at 1:30 p. m., with an address of welcome by Dr. C. L. Cole, mayor of Alexandria, and a response by President O. C. Neuman. An address by Constant Larson, discussions, appointment of committees will complete the afternoon program. A banquet will be held at the Alexandria Hotel at 6:30 p. m., with a program of music and an address by a prominent speaker. Ladies are invited to attend; special entertainment is being arranged for them.

Saturday's sessions will begin at 9:30 a. m., with an address and an open forum. At the afternoon session in addition to talks, and discussions on real estate problems, it is hoped to effect a reorganization of the Minnesota Realty Association with an election of officers.

Invitations are being extended to H. Z. Mitchell, Bemidji; Theo. Arens, Rural Credit Bureau Conservator, St. Paul; Roy Nelson of the Federal Land Bank, St. Paul; Eli S. Warner, St. Paul; E. C. Leedy, land commissioner of the Great Northern Railroad; B. F. Schweiger of Duluth to talk on the Real Estate License law, and H. S. Funston, land commissioner of the Soo line, to attend the convention.

University Grads. Plan a Gathering

Graduates of the University of Minnesota for at least fifty years past will gather on the campus Monday, June 17, to take part in the Alumni Day activities that will precede the June commencement exercises that evening in the Memorial Stadium.

E.B. Pierce, general secretary of The Alumni association, has announced that the usual procedure of having special celebrations for the "five year" classes will be followed, which means that all groups that graduated in years ending in "0" or "5" will celebrate. This, however, does not exclude others.

The fifty year class will be that of 1885, which is expected to be represented by at least two members, Howard S. Abbott of Minneapolis and Albert Reed of Milwaukee.

Classes will hold luncheons to give classmates an opportunity to revive old days, and the general Alumni banquet will be served at 5 p. m. in the Minnesota Union. The hour is set early so that all activities may be completed in time for the alumni to attend the commencement exercises at 8 p. m. in the Stadium.

The center of the stage will be held at the dinner by the twenty-five year class, that of 1910, and a member of that class, Howard Y. Williams of St. Paul, has been named by his classmates to be toastmaster at the banquet.

Football pictures will be shown in the Union at 4 p. m. Various classes will plant trees or commemorate the occasion in other special ways.

Graduates of the School of Mines and Metallurgy are planning a farewell banquet for Dean William R. Appleby the night of June 15. Dean Appleby, a member of the faculty since 1891, is retiring at the age limit.

VOLUME PRAISES MINNESOTA STONE

Minneapolis.—Pointing out more clearly than ever before the extent of the stone and quarry industry in Minnesota and that it has become an outstanding and dependable factor in Minnesota's economic life, the Minnesota Geologic Survey has published a bulletin describing this industry under the title, "Architectural, Structural and Monumental Stones of Minnesota."

A fascinating account of an industry little known outside those communities in which the whirr or stone cutting machinery is a common sound, the volume has been written by Associate Professor George A Thiel and Instructor Carl E. Dutton of the University of Minnesota's department of geology.

A frontispiece shows the Northwestern Bell Telephone company's building in Minneapolis, for which the base is made of gneiss from Morton and the superstructure of Mankato-Kasota dolomite.

The quarry industry started more than a century ago when limestone was taken out at Fort Snelling. It has since grown to the point where it employs thousands of people and involves large capital investments in quarries and machinery.

"In this report," it says, "an attempt is made to acquaint architects, building contractors and real estate firms with the merits of the various structural and ornamental stones quarried and fabricated in Minnesota. Until recent years our stone products were used more extensively in distant states than within our own communities. Minnesota stones enjoyed a national reputation for beauty and adaptability before their merits were greatly recognzed by our local builders.

Communities given special mention for stone production are St. Cloud, the Morton-Redwood area, Montevideo-Sacred Heart area; Granite Falls area; Ortonville-Odessa area; Isle-Warman-Creek region; Arrowhead region; Mankato-pasota district; Winona region; Mantorville region; Faribault-Northleld region; Twin Cities region; Sandstone and Kettle Region and the Jasper-Pipestone area.

A list of cut stone producers in Minnesota is included in the report which was published by the University of Minnesota Pres.

The National Safety Council reports that in Detroit traffic accidents involving drinking motorists have increased 90 per cent.

THE CHAMPION

He wrote to a firm applying for a post. In his letter he said he was the best salesman in the world. The firm decided to try him, and sent him on the road with a special line of goods.

A month went by. He hadn't sold a thing, and naturally he began to get disheartened. Finally he decided to return to town.

"Well," asked the manager, "How did you get on?"

"I've come to offer you an apology," he said. "I told you I was the best salesman in the world. Well, I'm only the second best.

"The best is the fellow who sold you the line of goods you sent me out to sell."—Tit-Bits Magazine.

She—No.
He—Why not?
She—I'm married.

Too Lifelike!

"All the mechanical toys you make seem to be very successful," said the visitor.

"Yes," said the inventor. "I've only had one failure."

"What was the matter with it?" asked the visitor.

"Too life-like. It was a toy tramp, and it wouldn't work!" came the reply.—Answers Magazine.

Hard to Believe

The minister met Tom, the village ne-'er-do-well, and much to the latter's surprise shook him heartily by the hand.

"I'm so glad you have turned over a new leaf, Thomas," said the good man. "I was delighted to see you at the prayer-meeting last night."

Oh," said Tom after a moment of doubt. "So that's where I was."

Put an Elastic on It

"Yes, madam," the postal clerk said, "this parcel will be all right. But, as a matter of fact, you have put three cents too much in stamps on it."

"Oh, dear," the old lady replied, "how awkward. I do hope it won't be sent too far."

Who Wouldn't?

Magistrate—Why did you strike the post office clerk?

Defendant—Well, sir, I 'ands 'im a telegram to send to my gal, an' 'e starts readin' it. So, of course, I up and gives 'im one.—Pearson's Weekly.

"Don't you ever change your mind about anything?"

"Not often, now. I've found that I am just as liable to be wrong the second time as the first."

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill, Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

CHAPTER VI.—Elliott is still in something of a daze over the meeting when Brandon strikes again—with dynamite—destroying the railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract.

CHAPTER VII.—By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare.

CHAPTER VIII.—Brandon, seriously alarmed over the successive failures of his plans for stopping the Hoot Owl's logging operations, compels a woman (known only as "Lydia") who is in his power, and against her will, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl she is befriending.

CHAPTER IX.—"Lydia," at a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn McManus, makes public her charges against him. Overwhelmed by the venom of the accusation, Elliott can only make what he himself realizes is a feeble denial of the charge. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for his explanation. Days later, while walking in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead or badly wounded.

CHAPTER X—Elliott's fall has been a ruse to make his enemy believe his attempt at assassination has been successful. A little sleuthing by an emissary of Ben's proves the would-be killer to be Red Bart Delaney, notorious Canadian desperado.

CHAPTER XI.—Judge Armitage urges Ben to avoid exposing himself, at least until Delaney has been driven out of town, but he refuses to "take cover." "Aunt Emma," Dawn's oldest and closest friend, realizing that the girl is suffering in the belief that Elliott, the man she loves, is unworthy, prevails on the woman Lydia to acknowledge the falsity of her accusation. Elliott and Dawn are reconciled, but the girl is not fully responsive to Ben's pleading for her love.

"But that crowd, Nick! Why, they're the best men in the north. They'd tear me to ribbons! They're good men and they're mad. You better get out the back way if you can!"

With an oath Brandon flung the receiver from him as another window pane exploded to fragments. Abandoned to that muttering mob, and by a man whose political career he had shaped with his own hands! From a safe vantage point he looked out. A half dozen men were pulling at a sign post.

He ran down the hallway and looked out a window in the rear. A grim guard of three men stood there, ready and waiting for him to attempt flight that way.

He went into his sleeping chamber and took down a rifle from its rack on a pair of antlers. He threw open the chamber but it was empty. He jerked open a dresser drawer and pawed through it in a fruitless search for cartridges, cursing because he found none. His breath was ragged as he threw the rifle on the bed and rumpled his hair wildly.

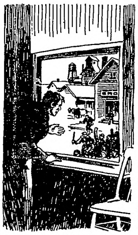
"Bring Elliott out!" "Show us Ben!" "Get a rail!" These and other terrifying cries stood out above the constant mutter of the mob.

Brandon rushed back to the front office and waved his arms for silence as he stood in the shattered glass of his window, but the sight of him only provoked hoots and jeers which were forerunners of a great billow of savage, snarling rage.

The men were having trouble with the sign post. He heard the stair door tried and a voice called: "Hustle with that post!"

Coming! They were coming in to get him!

He could not satisfy them! He did not know where Elliott was.



He Could Not Satisfy Them.

Last night Delaney had promised to try again but he had not come to report, though Brandon had waited late. And now the crowd was howling for Elliott; lacking Elliott, they would take him.

He covered his face with his hands, tried to stop his ears. In those menacing cries he heard the knell of his reign. For years he had ruled by the force of his will and now that force was not enough. Bit by bit, Ben Elliott had caught the fancy of the country and now, with that group of stout men as a rallying point, the entire town was setting up a demand for the missing Elliott. They wanted Ben Elliott. They would have Ben Elliott.

"Go home!" he screamed and waved his arms, standing close to a broken window. "Clear out, you! . . . Fair warning, I'm giving!"

But his words were drowned in a great yell. Men came lugging that post across the street while Tim Jeffers hastened toward them with gestures of protest.

"Hold your heads, now! Give us Hoot Owl boys a chance. We'll get what we come for or we'll take Tincup apart. But no destroyin' of property until everything else fails!"

His will prevailed a moment. He lifted his face to Brandon.

"We mean business. Will you come out and show us Ben or must we come and get you? We won't wait much longer."

An opening, there, a chance to delay.

"Coming!' Brandon croaked. "I'm coming!"

A gratified mutter went up from the crowd and burst into shrill words.

Coming? Like the devil, he would go! He was ransacking drawers, now, dumping their contents on the floor in his frantic search for rifle cartridges that should be there.

He sought a key for a locked trunk and could not find it. He tried several but his hands shook so that he might have failed to make the proper one operate, even had he found it.

Again Jeffers' voice, demanding his presence, came out of a strange silence.

"Coming!" he shouted thickly and seized a hammer and attacked the trunk lock. Ammunition must be in there.

The crowd milled, now, trampling the new snow, completely out of hand at this delay. Two or three aided Tim in his plea for at least temporary moderation but others rebelled and fought to get the post which would batter down the stair door.

And then came a hush, a quick, spreading hush which swept the crowd like a shadow. And then rose a quick popping of excited voices.

"Elliott!" "Here he is!" "Look!" "He's hurt!"

Bundled to the ears in a great overcoat, cap drawn low, supported on the one side by John Martin and on the other side by Able Armitage, he came slowly, painfully out of the side street. He scarcely seemed to be aware of that throng; did not look either to the right or the left. All his energy was bent on moving forward.

He gained the middle of the street in an impressive hush. Then he murmured a word to Able and they halted.

He looked about at his men and smiled a trifle weakly, but in his look was a quality which clearly indicated that love which strong men have for their kind.

"It's all right, boys," he said, and only those in the first ranks could hear, his voice was that light. "They didn't get me . . . badly. I appreciate this . . . but want you to . . . get back to . . . camp."

He panted for breath and lifted his face to the broken windows above. Far back in that room he caught a glimpse of a face watching him—cocked as though striving to hear.

"It's my fight," he went on. "Not yours. . . . I don't want any . . . of you hurt. Go back. . . . Will you go . . . back?"

The crowd stirred.

"You bet we will, Ben!" a man called. "Now that you're located; if you ask it, we will!"

Tim Jeffers worked his way to Ben's side and put a hand on his shoulder, listening to what Able told him.

"Go home, boys!" Tim Jeffers called. "They knifed Ben last night but he's well took care of. You teamsters, get out your horses; we've found what we come for. To camp, every last Hoot Owl hand!"

Men relaxed. The post that was to have shattered in Brandon's door was dropped. The mob was satisfied.

Slowly Ben Elliott made his way back to Dawn's home.

As Tim Jeffers took his place beside the sick man, Able Armitage drew into the post office entry to watch the mob disperse Emory Sweet was standing there.

"The king is dead!" Able muttered solemnly, staring at those broken windows.

"Long live the king!" said Emory. Pause.

"Dead men tell no tales."

"No, but sometimes a corpse will kick back!"

CHAPTER XIII

FURIOUSLY, Nicholas Brandon saw as the days passed the wreckage of his power pile up on a floor of public resentment, of loosened expressions of distrust and contempt and hatred which had grown and festered unobserved for years.

As he walked along the street he saw faces leering at him from windows, and men he passed averted their glances in a gleeful sort of embarrassment, or looked at him with surly, defiant glares.

In yard and mill he was conscious that his employees were thinking only of his fall. He discharged one man for loafing and the fellow only laughed at him. . . . Laughed!

"There's plenty of room at Hoot Owl for good hands," he said and laughed again.

That mob had not wrecked the town as they had threatened but the ruin they left was of far more consequence. Their coming had stripped Brandon of everything but his material possessions and now these only mocked him in survival.

Back in the office he paced the place like a caged animal.

Mail arrived. He took the packet of letters and drank deeply from his bottle again.

He thumbed the letters absently, until the script on one caught his eye. The envelope contained a single sheet of note paper and he unfolded it with trembling fingers. On the sheet was written:

"I never want to see you again. I know now what the whole country has known and been afraid to admit for years. I have thought you were my friend but now I know you are my worst enemy, as you are the sworn enemy of those I love most.

"DAWN."

He stood for a time staring at the paragraph; then read it again and drained his whisky bottle. Such a note, now, was to have been expected by an ordered mind, of course, but his fevered brain had not foreseen any necessity for abandoning this, the most precious of his hopes.

A meticulous office man was Nicholas Brandon, and though he had suffered the severest blow of his experience just now he mechanically went about his habitual procedure. He had received and read a letter. It required no reply. The next step in orderly procedure was to file it.

In the great safe to which only he had combination and keys reposed two files side by side. He took both out and placed them on the desk. He opened one and a cruel smile twitched his lips. It contained letters on paper of varying size, color and quality. He riffled through these, stopping now and again to read a phrase, a sentence, a paragraph. . . . Pleas, these were; a writing begging for help . . . and he smiled again.

In the other file were more letters, some yellowed by age and these older ones had been written in the unformed script of a child. . . . "Dear Uncle Nick," they all began. Always that, though the handwriting grew formed and mature until it was identical with that on the single sheet he had just read. These were Dawn McManus' letters to him, saved since her childhood.

He ran through them almost idly, his senses dulled by whisky and the calamity which had befallen him. A narrow slip of tablet paper fell out. He looked at the penciled note on one side.

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

Happier memories, that brought; of the time Dawn had brought girls home with her from school for Thanksgiving and had taken them to the hunting camp for a week-end.

Brandon had gone with the party and it was there that he had first remarked Dawn's emerging womanhood, that the desire for her had keen kindled in his blood; there in the camp where her father, as the whole country knew, had been with Sam Faxson on the night when Faxson fled to his death. But Dawn had never known that. She had laughed and been happy at Antler lodge.

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

He read it again. It bore no date; it was unsoiled; it betrayed no indication of the time that had passed since its inscription. The note had been left on his desk for him three years before. . . . He leaned forward sharply and his eyes narrowed. . . . After a moment he straightened and smiled oddly. A look like relief, almost like happiness spread over his face.

• • • • • • •

Fine strength of body healed Ben Elliott's wound rapidly. By midweek he was dressed and sitting before the fire with Dawn, talking of his return to Hoot Owl on the morrow.

"And all the time I've been wondering, Dawn, why you wouldn't let me come. . . . You've been so kind, so generous, so . . . so friendly. And yet, only a few days ago, you told me I must never come again. Why was it, Dawn? Why, when I love you so?"

"Don't!" she begged in a light whisper. "Please!"

"But it's beyond any power I have to keep still. I love you, Dawn, better than life. Can you believe that, when I've seen so little of you? Look at me!"—fiercely. "Don't you like it, Dawn, being loved?"

"Ah . . . Like it? It's wonderful, Ben. . . . It's too wonderful!" She averted her face.

"And loved by me?"

"Yes, yes! It's all wonderful. It's too wonderful, Ben. Things like it just can't be!"

"Why not? It's wonderful, you say, and yet . . . Can't you explain?"

"You can't understand, perhaps. Sometimes I can't understand myself. Always I've wanted to be loved by . . . by you, Ben Elliott! It's given me the only true happiness I've ever had.

"And then I had to remember what I am. Can't you see that a girl who is known as the daughter of a murderer can't let any man love her?"

"That's foolish! . . . It's terrible I know for you to bear. But let me help, dear girl; let me stand by your side and help!"

"No, no! I can't bear it! I couldn't take a cloud to you and to your children. . . . And it's all a mistake, all a lie! My father was no killer!" Her voice rose in sharp conviction on that. "He was kind and gentle; he never would hurt another. All these years I've known it and others know it, but just being sure in our own minds isn't enough. The whole world must know! Something tells me my father is alive somewhere, waiting, watching, suffering. . . . But until we can prove that or something else comes up to banish this cloud. . . . No, don't kiss me again! I can't stand it, I tell you! I can't stand it, Ben!"

Sobbing, she fled from the room.

He made no further moves toward love making after that but far into the night he talked with Dawn of her father. She had not heard all of the story, he realized. She did not know, for instance, that the tragedy which preceded McManus' disappearance took place in Antler lodge; she did not know how far her father had gone in his attempts to drown sorrow of his wife's death by drinking. But she did know that Faxson was dead, that her father was blamed and that a dusty warrant for his arrest on a charge of homicide still reposed in the county records.

Next day he declared that he felt fit to drive back to camp and for an hour argued with Dawn, trying to win her promise that he might come again, but she begged him to stay away for a time, at least.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—signalizes his entry into the lumbering town of Tincup by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Elliott has brought along an old man, Don Stuart, who had been eager to reach Tincup, but Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

CHAPTER II.—Elliott finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage, to whom he confides that he has come to town because he'd heard it was a tough nut to crack. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, daughter of Brandon's old partner, who has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head.

CHAPTER III.—Brandon sends his bully, Duval, to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Old Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott, "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter at this time, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts.

CHAPTER IV.—Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames that threatened to win the fight for Brandon, discovers that the fire was started with gasoline, but the incendiary has got safely away.

CHAPTER V.—The Hoot Owl gets an offer of spot cash for bird's-eye maple and birch veneer logs, that will provide money to tide it over. But there is a definite time limit on the offer. While trailing a suspicious stranger Ben meets Dawn McManus for the first time—and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman.

CHAPTER VI.—Elliott is still in something of a daze over the meeting when Brandon strikes again—with dynamite—destroying the railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract.

CHAPTER VII.—By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare.

CHAPTER VIII.—Brandon, seriously alarmed over the successive failures of his plans for stopping the Hoot Owl's logging operations, compels a woman (known only as "Lydia") who is in his power, and against her will, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl she is befriending.

CHAPTER IX.—"Lydia," at a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn McManus, makes public her charges against him. Overwhelmed by the venom of the accusation, Elliott can only make what he himself realizes is a feeble denial of the charge. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for his explanation. Days later, while walking in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead or badly wounded.

CHAPTER X—Elliott's fall has been a ruse to make his enemy believe his attempt at assassination has been successful. A little sleuthing by an emissary of Ben's proves the would-be killer to be Red Bart Delaney, notorious Canadian desperado.

CHAPTER XI.—Judge Armitage urges Ben to avoid exposing himself, at least until Delaney has been driven out of town, but he refuses to "take cover." "Aunt Emma," Dawn's oldest and closest friend, realizing that the girl is suffering in the belief that Elliott, the man she loves, is unworthy, prevails on the woman Lydia to acknowledge the falsity of her accusation. Elliott and Dawn are reconciled, but the girl is not fully responsive to Ben's pleading for her love.

"But that crowd, Nick! Why, they're the best men in the north. They'd tear me to ribbons! They're good men and they're mad. You better get out the back way if you can!"

With an oath Brandon flung the receiver from him as another window pane exploded to fragments. Abandoned to that muttering mob, and by a man whose political career he had shaped with his own hands! From a safe vantage point he looked out. A half dozen men were pulling at a sign post.

He ran down the hallway and looked out a window in the rear. A grim guard of three men stood there, ready and waiting for him to attempt flight that way.

He went into his sleeping chamber and took down a rifle from its rack on a pair of antlers. He threw open the chamber but it was empty. He jerked open a dresser drawer and pawed through it in a fruitless search for cartridges, cursing because he found none. His breath was ragged as he threw the rifle on the bed and rumpled his hair wildly.

"Bring Elliott out!" "Show us Ben!" "Get a rail!" These and other terrifying cries stood out above the constant mutter of the mob.

Brandon rushed back to the front office and waved his arms for silence as he stood in the shattered glass of his window, but the sight of him only provoked hoots and jeers which were forerunners of a great billow of savage, snarling rage.

The men were having trouble with the sign post. He heard the stair door tried and a voice called: "Hustle with that post!"

Coming! They were coming in to get him!

He could not satisfy them! He did not know where Elliott was.

He Could Not Satisfy Them.

Last night Delaney had promised to try again but he had not come to report, though Brandon had waited late. And now the crowd was howling for Elliott; lacking Elliott, they would take him.

He covered his face with his hands, tried to stop his ears. In those menacing cries he heard the knell of his reign. For years he had ruled by the force of his will and now that force was not enough. Bit by bit, Ben Elliott had caught the fancy of the country and now, with that group of stout men as a rallying point, the entire town was setting up a demand for the missing Elliott. They wanted Ben Elliott. They would have Ben Elliott.

"Go home!" he screamed and waved his arms, standing close to a broken window. "Clear out, you! . . . Fair warning, I'm giving!"

But his words were drowned in a great yell. Men came lugging that post across the street while Tim Jeffers hastened toward them with gestures of protest.

"Hold your heads, now! Give us Hoot Owl boys a chance. We'll get what we come for or we'll take Tincup apart. But no destroyin' of property until everything else fails!"

His will prevailed a moment. He lifted his face to Brandon.

"We mean business. Will you come out and show us Ben or must we come and get you? We won't wait much longer."

An opening, there, a chance to delay.

"Coming!" Brandon croaked. "I'm coming!"

A gratified mutter went up from the crowd and burst into shrill words.

Coming? Like the devil, he would go! He was ransacking drawers, now, dumping their contents on the floor in his frantic search for rifle cartridges that should be there.

He sought a key for a locked trunk and could not find it. He tried several but his hands shook so that he might have failed to make the proper one operate, even had he found it.

Again Jeffers' voice, demanding his presence, came out of a strange silence.

"Coming!" he shouted thickly and seized a hammer and attacked the trunk lock. Ammunition must be in there.

The crowd milled, now, trampling the new snow, completely out of hand at this delay. Two or three aided Tim in his plea for at least temporary moderation but others rebelled and fought to get the post which would batter down the stair door.

And then came a hush, a quick, spreading hush which swept the crowd like a shadow. And then rose a quick popping of excited voices.

"Elliott!" "Here he is!" "Look!" "He's hurt!"

Bundled to the ears in a great overcoat, cap drawn low, supported on the one side by John Martin and on the other side by Able Armitage, he came slowly, painfully out of the side street. He scarcely seemed to be aware of that throng; did not look either to the right or the left. All his energy was bent on moving forward.

He gained the middle of the street in an impressive hush. Then he murmured a word to Able and they halted.

He looked about at his men and smiled a trifle weakly, but in his look was a quality which clearly indicated that love which strong men have for their kind.

"Its all right, boys," he said, and only those in the first ranks could hear, his voice was that light. "They didn't get me . . . badly. I appreciate this . . . but want you to . . . get back to . . . camp."

He panted for breath and lifted his face to the broken windows above. Far back in that room he caught a glimpse of a face watching him—cocked as though striving to hear.

"It's my fight," he went on. "Not yours. . . . I don't want any . . . of you hurt. Go back. . . . Will you go . . . back?"

The crowd stirred.

"You bet we will, Ben!" a man called. "Now that you're located; if you ask it, we will!"

Tim Jeffers worked his way to Ben's side and put a hand on his shoulder, listening to what Able told him.

"Go home, boys!" Tim Jeffers called. "They knifed Ben last night but he's well took care of. You teamsters, get out your horses; we've found what we come for. To camp, every last Hoot Owl hand!"

Men relaxed. The post that was to have shattered in Brandon's door was dropped. The mob was satisfied.

Slowly Ben Elliott made his way back to Dawn's home.

As Tim Jeffers took his place beside the sick man, Able Armitage drew into the post office entry to watch the mob disperse. Emory Sweet was standing there.

"The king is dead!" Able muttered solemnly, staring at those broken windows.

"Long live the king!" said Emory. Pause.

"Dead men tell no tales."

"No, but sometimes a corpse will kick back!"

CHAPTER XIII

FURIOUSLY, Nicholas Brandon saw as the days passed the wreckage of his power pile up on a floor of public resentment, of loosened expressions of distrust and contempt and hatred which had grown and festered unobserved for years.

As he walked along the street he saw faces leering at him from windows, and men he passed averted their glances in a gleeful sort of embarrassment, or looked at him with surly, defiant glares.

In yard and mill he was conscious that his employees were thinking only of his fall. He discharged one man for loafing and the fellow only laughed at him. . . . Laughed!

"There's plenty of room at Hoot Owl for good hands," he said and laughed again.

That mob had not wrecked the town as they had threatened but the ruin they left was of far more consequence. Their coming had stripped Brandon of everything but his material possessions and now these only mocked him in survival.

Back in the office he paced the place like a caged animal.

Mail arrived. He took the packet of letters and drank deeply from his bottle again.

He thumbed the letters absently until the script on one caught his eye. The envelope contained a single sheet of note paper and he unfolded it with trembling fingers. On the sheet was written:

"I never want to see you again. I know now what the whole country has known and been afraid to admit for years. I have thought you were my friend but now I know you are my worst enemy, as you are the sworn enemy of those I love most.

"DAWN."

He stood for a time staring at the paragraph; then read it again and drained his whisky bottle. Such a note, now, was to have been expected by an ordered mind, of course, but his fevered brain had not foreseen any necessity for abandoning this, the most precious of his hopes.

A meticulous office man was Nicholas Brandon, and though he had suffered the severest blow of his experience just now he mechanically went about his habitual procedure. He had received and read a letter. It required no reply. The next step in orderly procedure was to file it.

In the great safe to which only he had combination and keys reposed two files side by side. He took both out and placed them on the desk. He opened one and a cruel smile twitched his lips. It contained letters on paper of varying size, color and quality. He riffled through these, stopping now and again to read a phrase, a sentence, a paragraph. . . . Pleas, these were; a writing begging for help . . . and he smiled again.

In the other file were more letters, some yellowed by age and these older ones had been written in the unformed script of a child. . . . "Dear Uncle Nick," they all began. Always that, though the handwriting grew formed and mature until it was identical with that on the single sheet he had just read. These were Dawn McManus' letters to him, saved since her childhood.

He ran through them almost idly, his senses dulled by whisky and the calamity which had befallen him. A narrow slip of tablet paper fell out. He looked at the penciled note on one side.

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

Happier memories, that brought; of the time Dawn had brought girls home with her from school for Thanksgiving and had taken them to the hunting camp for a week-end.

Brandon had gone with the party and it was there that he had first remarked Dawn's emerging womanhood, that the desire for her had been kindled in his blood; there in the camp where her father, as the whole country knew, had been with Sam Faxson on the night when Faxson fled to his death. But Dawn had never known that. She had laughed and been happy at Antler lodge.

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

He read it again. It bore no date; it was unsoiled; it betrayed no indication of the time that had passed since its inscription. The note had been left on his desk for him three years before. . . . He leaned forward sharply and his eyes narrowed. . . . After a moment he straightened and smiled oddly. A look like relief, almost like happiness spread over his face.

* * * * * * *

Fine strength of body healed Ben Elliott's wound rapidly. By midweek he was dressed and sitting before the fire with Dawn, talking of his return to Hoot Owl on the morrow.

"And all the time I've been wondering, Dawn, why you wouldn't let me come. . . . You've been so kind, so generous, so . . . so friendly. And yet, only a few days ago, you told me I must never come again. Why was it, Dawn? Why, when I love you so?"

"Don't!" she begged in a light whisper. "Please!"

"But it's beyond any power I have to keep still. I love you, Dawn, better than life. Can you believe that, when I've seen so little of you? Look at me!"—fiercely. "Don't you like it, Dawn, being loved?"

"Ah . . . Like it? It's wonderful, Ben. . . . It's too wonderful!" She averted her face.

"And loved by me?"

"Yes, yes! It's all wonderful. It's too wonderful, Ben. Things like it just can't be!"

"Why not? It's wonderful, you say, and yet . . . Can't you explain?"

"You can't understand, perhaps. Sometimes I can't understand myself. Always I've wanted to be loved by . . . by you, Ben Elliott! It's given me the only true happiness I've ever had.

"And then I had to remember what I am. Can't you see that a girl who is known as the daughter of a murderer can't let any man love her?"

"That's foolish! . . . It's terrible I know for you to bear. But let me help, dear girl; let me stand by your side and help!"

"No, no! I can't bear it! I couldn't take a cloud to you and to your children. . . . And it's all a mistake, all a lie! My father was no killer!" Her voice rose in sharp conviction on that. "He was kind and gentle; he never would hurt another. All these years I've known it and others know it, but just being sure in our own minds isn't enough. The whole world must know! Something tells me my father is alive somewhere, waiting, watching, suffering. . . . But until we can prove that or something else comes up to banish this cloud. . . . No, don't kiss me again! I can't stand it, I tell you! I can't stand it, Ben!"

Sobbing, she fled from the room.

He made no further moves toward love making after that but far into the night he talked with Dawn of her father. She had not heard all of the story, he realized. She did not know, for instance, that the tragedy which preceded McManus' disappearance took place in Antler lodge; she did not know how far her father had gone in his attempts to drown sorrow of his wife's death by drinking. But she did know that Faxson was dead, that her father was blamed and that a dusty warrant for his arrest on a charge of homicide still reposed in the county records.

Next day he declared that he felt fit to drive back to camp and for an hour argued with Dawn, trying to win her promise that he might come again, but she begged him to stay away for a time, at least.

Red Lake Falls Couple Commemorate Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Franz Schmidt, highly esteemed residents of Red Lake Falls township for thirty-five years, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Monday, June 3; relatives and friends gathered at their home to honor them on this occasion.

On June 3, 1885, Annie Clisenaue and Franz Schmidt were united in marriage at the Catholic church in New Ulm, Minn., shortly after the young bride arrived in America from Austria. Mr. Schmidt had come to the United States in 1884 from Austria and his bride-to-be followed a year later. Both had come directly to New Ulm. Mr. Schmidt is 73 years of age and Mrs. Schmidt is 74 years of age.

Shortly after their mariage this young couple moved to Redwood Falls, where they operated a farm for 14 years. In 1900 they moved to Red Lake Falls and have made their home in this community since.

Twelve children, five daughters and seven sons, all of whom are living in Red Lake county, joined them in the celebration of their golden wedding anniversary on Monday at their home in Red Lake Falls township, 3 miles northeast of the city.

Commission and a report is to be given at the next meeting. Ole Legvold, superintendent of the water and light dept., reported on the petition of Roman Paulson and others asking for an extension of the city's electric line to include property west of the G. N. tracks and north of the fairgrounds. He reported that he estimated the cost to the city would be approximately $342 exclusive of the transformer and post-hole digging. Mr. Legvold was instructed to investigate further and to determine, if possible, how many people would be customers for the city; his report was referred to the light committee of the council.

O. C. Paulson and H. C. Eckland, architects, presented plans for the building and the maintenance of a municipal skating rink. Plans as drawn up by Mr. Eckland, call for a rink 199 feet by 75 feet, which will seat approximately 1200 people. The building to be constructed of hollow tile and steel trussways with a concrete floor at an estimated cost of $16,300. The matter was turned over to Mr. Pederson, city clerk, to find out if the skating rink project would in any way interfere with other projects that the council feels are more important to the city.

A meeting of the Board of Equalization of the city council will be held June 24th, at which time the matter of the T. R. Cooperative creamery will be taken up. Christofferson, Myhrum and Jung were named to investigate the river flowage damage claimed by Nils Myrin; the committee is to investigate this matter Sunday.

The matter was laid on the table for further consideration and pending an investigation of the alley in question. The petition of G. Legvold and others concerning a nuisance claimed near their property was denied.

Farmer-Laborites who were successful in the race for membership on the Park Board are: 29th District, Edward Chalgren and, 31st district, Edwin A. Hendricks.

...... A Great Victory ......

Only two men elected by labor have had the honor of serving as Mayor of the city of Minneapolis. These two men were Thomas Van Lear, elected in 1916, and William A. Anderson, elected in 1931.

There have also been Farmer-Laborites on the Board of Education, Park Board and Library board. The city council has for the past twenty years had a fair representation from the Farmer-Labor roup.

The new City Council will have 14 out and out Farmer-Laborites and 2 Liberals who will on majority propositions vote with the Farmer-Labor majority. These men are Romeo J. Riley and Marvin L. Kline from the 8th ward.

Folwick's Summary

The extent of the victory is summarized by Orlin Folwick, political writer of the Minneapolis Tribune, in the Wednesday morning edition of that publication. Mr. Folwick says:

"The Farmer-Laborites swept the city election in Minneapolis Monday. They elected their candidate, Thomas E. Latimer, as mayor of the city. They captured control of the city council by retiring four of the veteran aldermen and replacing them with F-L endorsed candidates.

"They win, it would appear, control of the Board of Education by placing one of their two candidates in the two positions open; and by winning the School Board, the mayoralty and the council, they succeeded in gaining control of the Board of Estimate and Taxation, the organization which regulates the taxing powers of the city."

The victory may in the main be attributed to the fine organization that the Farmer-Labor association has built up in the city. In every ward an aggressive campaign was waged in the interest of the entire Farmer-Labor ticket.

County Treasurer Reports Receipts of $103,538.00

J. Gullingsrud, Pennington county treasurer, gave the May report of receipts of the treasurer's office today. It reveals that the total receipts at the office amounted to $103, 538.80 to June first, 1935. This includes: Current taxes, $89,354.92; Ditto, interest and penalties, $78.46; delinquent taxes, $11.743.17; private redemption, $880.42; state land interest $535.03; mortgage registry tax $52.50; ditch tax collections, $641.76; county revenue, $86.00; road and bridge, $57.57; school district, $3.97; game and fish licenses sales, $105.00.

Railroad and Warehouse Commission Warns All Truckers and Shippers

The state Railroad and Warehouse Commission has served notice on Minnesota truckers that beginning this week, the truck regulatory laws and the hauling rates which it has prescribed will be rigidly enforced.

Already, within the last ten days, four truck operators have been prosecuted for cutting rates, one has had his permit cancelled, and a Duluth shipper has been fined for paying a trucker less than the prescribed rates.

Declaring that the 1933 truck law has now been in effect long enough for all truckers and shippers to become fully acquainted with its provisions, the Commission on Friday in a resolution to W. E. Hustleby, secretary, directed that the lenient policy which has prevailed until now be immediately abandoned, and that an intensive enforcement drive be initiated. The Commission will call upon the State Highway Patrol, the Attorney General and all County attorneys to aid in prosecution of violators.

Carl Hagen, a trucker of Olivia, Minnesota, had his permit cancelled when it was shown at a hearing that he had violated the law by hauling more than five persons, which is the limit the Commission has prescribed for truckers other than those operating as regular common carriers under Chapter 185, Laws of 1925. One large Twin City trucking company, and three Duluth truckers, are being prosecuted for cutting rates, and will almost certainly be fined. One shipper has already been fined $100 for paying less than the Commission-prescribed rates, and trade associations are warning merchants of the state to beware of patronizing any illegal truck operations.

House Votes NRA Skeleton Extension Until April 1936

Washington, D. C.—a 9½month extension of the hollow shell of NRA was rushed through the House by a 264-to-121 vote last Friday as Donald R. Richberg, who rode with the Blue Eagle on its storm flight, tendered his resignation.

House passage of the codeless NRA resolution came at the close of a turbulent 6 hour session, with a dominant Democratic majority successfully overriding every amendment. The resolution goes to the Senate, which has the option of concurring or demanding a conference or rejection.

Presented were: Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill, the corn-alcohol fuel blend, the development of secondary roads, Bang's disease control, acreage reduction and irrigation, and other pertinent matters.

The group will make every effort to get pending farm legislation up for action and possible passage in this session of Congress. Cong. Buckler is one of the leaders of the Prairie States Farm Group.

New Act Provides Credit For Purchase of Farms

Recognizing that the main reason farm tenancy has increased steadily in the United States during the past 15 years has been the extreme difficulty for young farmers and tenants to finance land purchases on reasonable terms. the Farm Credit Act of 1935 just approved by President Roosevelt extends until January 1, 1940, the time in which the Land Bank Commissioner may make direct loans to farmers on first or second mortgages. These loans are limited to $7,500 and the amount of a loan, plus any prior encumbrances on the property, may not exceed 75 per cent of the appraised normal value.

Formerly such loans could be made only for the purpose of refinancing debts, for repurchasing farms lost through foreclosure and for working capital. As amended they can be made to finance purchase of farms.

Not Enough Money in Country to Pay Interest for One Year

In view of the increasing dsicussions on banking, money, credits. federal central bank, the Federal Reserve System and related subjects, a statement made by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma during a recent debate in the Senate is very interesting. He declared that "there is not enough real money in all the banks of America today to pay the interest for one year on the outstanding loans. We now have in existence more than $30,000,000,000 of loans — Federal loans, Liberty bonds, and other kinds of Federal paper. The interest on the $30,000,000,000 of loans which we owe is almost $1,000,000,000, and at this moment there is not that much money in all the 15,000 banks of America. There is less than $900,000,000; there is less than $800,000,000; there is less than $75,000,000 of all kinds of money in every bank at this moment."

Senator Thomas believes that it is necessary to get more money into circulation if we ever expect to get out of the "depression" and see the return of "prosperity."

Red Lake Falls Couple Commemorate Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Franz Schmidt, highly esteemed residents of Red Lake Falls township for thirty-five years, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Monday, June 3; relatives and friends gathered at their home to honor them on this occasion.

On June 3, 1885, Annie Clisenaue and Franz Schmidt were united in marriage at the Catholic church in New Ulm, Minn., shortly after the young bride arrived in America from Austria. Mr. Schmidt had come to the United States in 1884 from Austria and his bride-to-be followed a year later. Both had come directly to New Ulm. Mr. Schmidt is 73 years of age and Mrs. Schmidt is 74 years of age.

Shortly after their mariage this young couple moved to Redwood Falls, where they operated a farm for 14 years. In 1900 they moved to Red Lake Falls and have made their home in this community since.

Twelve children, five daughters and seven sons, all of whom are living in Red Lake county, joined them in the celebration of their golden wedding anniversary on Monday at their home in Red Lake Falls township, 3 miles northeast of the city.

A "Workers' Rights" amendment to the Constitution of the United States has bees passed by the Assembly of the Pennsylvania Legislature 108 to 16. The bill was introduced in the body by Assemblyman Lilith Wilson, Socialist from Reading, Pa.

The "Workers' Rights" bill deals with the regulation of social economic relations of the working people and provides that congress shall have the power to set wage scales, working age, relief for aged and all others unable to work because of physical handicaps or reasons over which they have no control, such as depressions, etc.

Copies of the bill were sent to Pennsylvania members of Congress with the urging that such an amendment be referred to the voters.

Council Meeting

Commission and a report is to be given at the next meeting. Ole Legvold, superintendent of the water and light dept., reported on the petition of Roman Paulson and others asking for an extension of the city's electric line to include property west of the G. N. tracks and north of the fairgrounds. He reported that he estimated the cost to the city would be approximately $342 exclusive of the transformer and post-hole digging. Mr. Legvold was instructed to investigate further and to determine, if possible, how many people would be customers for the city; his report was referred to the light committee of the council.

O. C. Paulson and H. C. Eckland, architects, presented plans for the building and the maintenance of a municipal skating rink. Plans as drawn up by Mr. Eckland, call for a rink 199 feet by 75 feet, which will seat approximately 1200 people. The building to be constructed of hollow tile and steel trussways with a concrete floor at an estimated cost of $16,300. The matter was turned over to Mr. Pederson, city clerk, to find out if the skating rink project would in any way interfere with other projects that the council feels are more important to the city.

A meeting of the Board of Equalization of the city council will be held June 24th, at which time the matter of the T. R. Cooperative creamery will be taken up. Christofferson, Myhrum and Jung were named to investigate the river flowage damage claimed by Nils Myrin; the committee is to investigate this matter Sunday.

The Sager Oil company petitioned the council to vacate the alley near their oil station in order that they may use that property for construction of tourist cabins. The matter was laid on the table for further consideration and pending an investigation of the alley in question. The petition of G. Legvold and others concerning a nuisance claimed near their property was denied.

Farmer-Laborites who were successful in the race for membership on the Park Board are: 29th District, Edward Chalgren and, 31st district, Edwin A. Hendricks.

.... A Great Victory .. ..

Only two men elected by labor have had the honor of serving as Mayor of the city of Minneapolis. These two men were Thomas Van Lear, elected in 1916, and William A. Anderson, elected in 1931.

There have also been Farmer-Laborites on the Board of Education, Park Board and Library board. The city council has for the past twenty years had a fair representation from the Farmer-Labor roup.

The new City Council will have 14 out and out Farmer-Laborites and 2 Liberals who will on majority propositions vote with the Farmer-Labor majority. These men are Romeo J. Riley and Marvin L. Kline from the 8th ward.

Folwick's Summary

The extent of the victory is summarized by Orlin Folwick, political writer of the Minneapolis Tribune, in the Wednesday morning edition of that publication. Mr. Folwick says:

"The Farmer-Laborites swept the city election in Minneapolis Monday. They elected their candidate, Thomas E. Latimer, as mayor of the city. They captured control of the city council by retiring four of the veteran aldermen and replacing them with F-L endorsed candidates.

"They win, it would appear, control of the Board of Education by placing one of their two candidates in the two positions open; and by winning the School Board, the mayoralty and the council, they succeeded in gaining control of the Board of Estimate and Taxation, the organization which regulates the taxing powers of the city."

The victory may in the main be attributed to the fine organization that the Farmer-Labor association has built up in the city. In every ward an aggressive campaign was waged in the interest of the entire Farmer-Labor ticket.

County Treasurer Reports Receipts of $103,538.00

J. Gullingsrud, Pennington county treasurer, gave the May report of receipts of the treasurer's office today. It reveals that the total receipts at the office amounted to $103, 538.80 to June first, 1935. This includes: Current taxes, $89,354.92; Ditto, interest and penalties, $78.46; delinquent taxes, $11.743.17; private redemption, $880.42; state land interest $535.03; mortgage registry tax $52.50; ditch tax collections. $641.76; county revenue, $86.00; road and bridge, $57.57; school district, $3.97; game and fish licenses sales, $105.00.

Railroad and Warehouse Commission Warns All Truckers and Shippers

The state Railroad and Warehouse Commission has served notice on Minnesota truckers that beginning this week, the truck regulatory laws and the hauling rates which it has prescribed will be rigidly enforced.

Already, within the last ten days, four truck operators have been prosecuted for cutting rates, one has had his permit cancelled, and a Duluth shipper has been fined for paying a trucker less than the prescribed rates.

Declaring that the 1933 truck law has now been in effect long enough for all truckers and shippers to become fully acquainted with its provisions, the Commission on Friday in a resolution to W. E. Hustleby, secretary, directed that the lenient policy which has prevailed until now be immediately abandoned, and that an intensive enforcement drive be initiated. The Commission will call upon the State Highway Patrol, the Attorney General and all County attorneys to aid in prosecution of violators.

Carl Hagen, a trucker of Olivia, Minnesota, had his permit cancelled when it was shown at a hearing that he had violated the law by hauling more than five persons, which is the limit the Commission has prescribed for truckers other than those operating as regular common carriers under Chapter 185, Laws of 1925. One large Twin City trucking company, and three Duluth truckers, are being prosecuted for cutting rates, and will almost certainly be fined. One shipper has already been fined $100 for paying less than the Commission-prescribed rates, and trade associations are warning merchants of the state to beware of patronizing any illegal truck operations.

New Act Provides Credit For Purchase of Farms

Recognizing that the main reason farm tenancy has increased steadily in the United States during the past 15 years has been the extreme difficulty for young farmers and tenants to finance land purchases on reasonable terms, the Farm Credit Act of 1935 just approved by President Roosevelt extends until January 1, 1940, the time in which the Land Bank Commissioner may make direct loans to farmers on first or second mortgages. These loans are limited to $7,500 and the amount of a loan, plus any prior encumbrances on the property, may not exceed 75 per cent of the appraised normal value.

Formerly such loans could be made only for the purpose of refinancing debts, for repurchasing farms lost through foreclosure and for working capital. As amended they can be made to finance purchase of farms.

Not Enough Money in Country to Pay Interest for One Year

In view of the increasing dsicussions on banking, money, credits, federal central bank, the Federal Reserve System and related subjects, a statement made by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma during a recent debate in the Senate is very interesting. He declared that "there is not enough real money in all the banks of America today to pay the interest for one year on the outstanding loans. We now have in existence more than $30,000,000,000 of loans — Federal loans, Liberty bonds, and other kinds of Federal paper. The interest on the $30,000,000,000 of loans which we owe is almost $1,000,000,000, and at this moment there is not that much money in all the 15,000 banks of America. There is less than $900,000,000; there is less than $800,000,000; there is less than $75,000,000 of all kinds of money in every bank at this moment."

Senator Thomas believes that it is necessary to get more money into circulation if we ever expect to get out of the "depression" and see the return of "prosperity."

ROXBURY CLUB WINS ONE ACT PLAY CONTEST

"Kidnapping Betty," Comedy Well Presentedby Group Friday Eve.

ST. HILAIRE BAND WINS IN MUSICAL DIVISION

Winners to Compete at A.C. June 20, 21, & 22 for Region Honors

Over 800 persons attended the 4-H One-Act play contest held last Friday evening in the Thief River Falls Municipal auditorium.

"Kidnapping Betty," a comedy presented by the Rocksbury club, placed first. Betty was a country school teacher who "fell" for a member of the school board; she managed to get her room at his place and when he found out her reasons for wanting to stay at his home told her she had to go and then threw her out. Not satisfied that he didn't wish to have her there, she came back again and was again thrown out. She finally managed to "get her man," however, and the whole proceeding was very hilarious.

The Norden 4-H club won second place with the comedy "Just Like a Woman," and "Elmer," presented by the Silverton club, won third place.

Two clowns, Violet Anderson and Charles Joyce, entertained the large audience of club members, parents and friends with some clever antics.

In the musical division the St. Hilaire band placed first and the River Falls Old-Fashioned orchestra placed second.

The two winners of first places will compete for honors at the short course in Crookston June 20th, 21st, and 22nd.

Habeas Corpus Writ Gives Mooney Chance at Liberty

Tom Mooney, imprisoned for nineteen years in the San Quentin prison of California, won a signal victory in his fight for liberty on Monday when the California Supreme Court issued a writ of habeas corpus. The court, which has previously held it has no jurisdiction, has by its action recognized the charge that Mooney was convicted on perjured testimony, following his arrest for the deaths resulting from the explosion of a bomb at the Preparedness Day parade in San Francisco in 1916.

Geo. T. Davis, San Francisco attorney for the imprisoned man, stated that "the order means that the attorney general must successfully deny the allegations of perjury made by Mooney, and failing, the prisoner will be set free."

The writ is returnable June 27, at which time the court will hear preliminary argument to settle details of the procedure.

'BIG BUSINESS' IN OUSTER PROCESS AGAINST OLSON

Pillsbury Flour Head and Other Big Concerns Alleged Instigators

Harold Birkeland took the witness stand in the trial of the ouster proceedings filed against Governor Floyd B. Olson Tuesday and identified persons who are instrumental in seeking the ouster of the governor.

AAA PROGRAM NOT AFFECTED BY NRA RULING

Test Case Did Not Include Voluntary Restrictions Says Wallace

ACREAGE REDUCTIONS PAYMENTS TO BE MADE

Douglass States that Benefits Will Be Paid as Agreed to

The recent Supreme Court decision declaring the NRA unconstitutional will in no way prevent the Agricultural Adjustment Administration from making payments to farmers under their production adjustment contracts, it was announced today by county agent, R. M. Douglass.

This assurance was given June 5th, Mr. Douglass said, by the following statement of Henry Walace, Secretary of Agriculture:

In cooperation with leaders of Congress, amendments to the Agricultural Act are being perfected which are intended to bring the Act's provisions as to marketing agreements and licenses into line with the Schecter case (Supreme Court) decision and also to safeguard the farmers' voluntary adjustment program on basic commodities.

"These voluntary adjustment programs were not in the path of the Schecter case decision, and in no event could there be any question of the Government's ability to fulfill its contracts with farmers.

"Nevertheless, we have taken advantage of the decision to seek perfections in the law which will make certain the Government's authority to continue processing tax rates in accordance with provisions of the Act."

Salvation Army Drive Gains Over Last Yr.

The Salvation Army's Home service drive is on and it was stated by Chairman B. O. Norby and Captain and Mrs. Berling that the donations and funds so far have surpassed last year's average. The question, which has been raised by many businessmen, about the comparison of the income with that of other years was answered by Capt. Berling by the statement of several business men in which they state that their business has been much beter during the past year, and they are, therefore, able to give more to the cause.

The Salvation Army extends thanks to those businessmen, Mr. Norby stated, for the word of encouragement on the trend of business conditions towards better times.

All lodges, clubs and church organizations who wish to help this cause are asked to send their checks or donations to B. O. Norby or directly to the Salvation Army, Thief River Falls, Captain Berling said. It was further stated that checks should be made payable to the Salvation Army and that all donations, regardless of size, will be much appreciated.

Men Arrested Carrying Fish Without License

Becoming suspicious of water dripping from the back of a heavily loaded panel truck early Tuesday morning, local police investigated and discovered approximately 1200 pounds of tullibee fish. Upon investigation they found that they were being taken from the Lake of the Woods to Frazee for use on a fox farm. When the owners were questioned it was found that they had no license to transport fish for commercial use, and they were held pending the arrival of W. H. Quist, local game warden.

The men, R. Blane and F. Schafer, stated that they had purchased the fish from the Warroad Fishery at Warroad, Minnesota, appeared, pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $50 in municipal court Tuesday afternoon.

It was brought out that Lake of the Woods tullibee were a condemned fish and that they were not considered fit for human consumption.

NEARLY 480,000 POUNDS OF WOOL BOUGHT IN CITY

Cold Weather and Rains Delay Shearing; Market Speculative At This Time

Approximately 480,000 pounds of wool has been shipped out of this city during the past few weeks according to local wool buyers, up to the present time. This figure is considerably below that of last year at this time due mostly to the cold weather and rain during the early part of the buying season. It is planned to quit buying wool about July fifth and by that time the total is expected to reach almost double the present figure.

The market this year is considerably weaker than that of last year and is referred to as a speculative market; the prospects are, however, bright for a strong market in the fall, R. Lund, manager of the local wool pool, announced. The wool that is being brought in this year is of much better grade than that of last, most of it being graded 93 per cent bright.

Among the heaviest buyers of wool this year the following figures were given: Fairmont Cream Station, 10,000 pounds; Prichard-Oen Co., 23,000 pounds; T. R. Seed House, 27,000; the Wool Pool, 100,000 pounds; and the Red River Produce Co., 300,000 pounds.

The present summer wool market need has been filled and wool is therefore, thrown on a speculative market, Mr. Lund stated in explaining the lack of a steady market at this time.

WEFALD MEETS WITH TRUCKERS AND SHIPPERS

Hears Complaints of Discrimination in Rail and Truck Rate Structure

TRUCKERS MUST ABIDE BY LAW

Wefald Pledges His Personal Cooperation in Ironing Out Difficulties

Commissioner Knud Wefald presided at a hearing called at the court house here last Friday forenoon by the Railroad and Warehouse Commission for the purpose of acquainting the local shippers and truckers with the provisions of the regulatory truck laws, as well as to hear complaint on discrepancies in the freight rate structure.

It seemed to be the general belief among the truckers present that the rates are set too low on feed shipments and too high on many other classes of freight. Commissioner Wefald pointed out that the intention of the legislature in framing the law was to set rates that would make it possible for the truckers to make a little profit, but that the legislature has failed to provide funds so that the commission can make the comprehensive study that the problem of rates should be given.

B. O. Norby, manager of the local branch of the Land O'Lakes suggested that the truckers should form a co-operative trucking association whereunder profitable rates could be maintained and shippers and truckers benefit under a dividend plan. Mr. Wefald believed that such an association could be formed under the laws and that it would be a fine solution of the trucking business.

The opening game of the Junior baseball season was played Wednesday afternoon between the Lambert team and the Forum nine. The game went along on an even basis until the last half of the fourth inning when the Lambert squad staged a rally and went seven points in the lead. Not satisfied with just beating the Forum team they set out to completely demolish them, which they did in fine style. The final score was 23 to 9 in favor of Lambert's.

A number of errors by both teams marred the play, but the pitching was fair for an opening game.

Monday, July 15 ,has been designated as Visiting Day at the Northwest experiment station. Stephens, a most loyal friend of the institution since its earliest days; and to W. C. Coffey, dean and director of the Minnesota College of Agriculture and Experiment Station. Tentative plans include a morning inspection of the livestock and poultry, a dinner at noon, with a short speaking program, and an inspection of the experimental plots in the afternoon. Of special importance this year will be the work with pasture crop planted singly and in various combinations, the trials of farmers' lots of seed flax on wilt-infested soil in which it appears some sixty samples will be available, the use of sweet clover as a soil improvement crop for cereals and potatoes, depth of tillage experiments, and potato breeding work.

R. S. Dunham, station agronomist, will be in charge of the crops and soils program, while T. M. McCall, Horticulturist; O. M. Kiser, animal husbandman, and A. M. Pilley, poultryman, will have charge of the inspection of the work in their respective departments.

NORTHERN ZONE BASS FISHING LEGAL JUNE 21

It will become legal to take crappies, bass and sunfish by angling in the northern zone of the state beginning Friday, June 21. Members of the bass family included are striped, grey, yellow, black, silver and rock bass.

With the opening of the season in the northern zone for these three species of nest building fishes, all forms of angling will become legal in Minnesota.

An imaginary line extending across the state from Browns Valley to Sunrise through Morris, St. Cloud, Princeton and Cambridge divides the state into the southern and northern zones.

22 YEARS HIGH SCHOOL FOR ONE FAMILY

Fairmont.—For the first time since 1913—22 years—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nolte no longer will know first hand what's going on in Fairmont high school. It was in 1913 the first of their eleven children entered high school. At the 1935 commencement last week Nolte No. 11 and the last received his diploma. Of the entire eleven only one did not graduate. One son attended for a short time but left school to help his father on the farm.

SPILLS PREDICTED FOR ALL-AMERICAN RODEO

Spills like these will create many tense moments during the second annual All-American Rodeo to be held from June 22 to 30 on the Minnesota State Fair grounds. In this case the well-known bucking horse "Dynamite" bested his rider-adversary. The event is being sponsored by the Officers' Club of Fort Snelling and the Junior Associations of Commerce of the Twin Cities.

Minnesotan New Head Of AAA Dairy Section

Further recognition of Minnesota's leadership among the dairy states has been given by the appointment of Dr. Edwin W. Gaumnitz as chief of the AAA dairy section. Dr. Gaumnitz succeeds A. H. Lauterbach, also a Minnesotan, who has resigned to become general manager of the Interstate Milk Producer's association of Philadelphia.

Dr. Gaumnitz is a native of Minnesota. He attended the St. Paul public schools and in 1921 was graduated from the College of Agriculture, University of Minnesota. In 1922 he received the degree of Master of Science and in 1925, a Doctor of Philosophy degree from this institution. He then became extension specialist in dairy and poultry marketing in Iowa, and in 1927, he entered the employ of the Division of Markets of the California State Department of Agriculture.

In 1930 he took up dairy and poultry marketing research work for the Bureau of Agricultural Economics at Washington. Since May, 1933, he has been assistant chief of the dairy section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

He will assume his new duties as chief of the AAA dairy section July 1.

2-Cent Spread Between Cream Grades Adopted

Creamery Men of Red River Valley Counties Adopt New Price Scale

Price differentials of two cents per pound between sweet cream and grade one cream, and between grade one and grade two, will prevail throughout Red River Valley counties after July 1, as the result of action taken here last night at a meeting of creamery men from eight counties.

The meeting was held at the Northwest school auditorium with approximately 200 creamery representatives in attendance. They came from Polk, Red Lake, Norman, Kittson, Roseau, Marshall Pennington and Clearwater counties.

Compete in Grading Test

The afternoon session, held in the city hall, was attended by about 75 creamerymen, most of whom competed in a cream grading contest in which their own taste was the major test. Of those competing 70 per cent scored 100 per cent in the test, C. M. Pesek, inspector of the state agriculture, dairy and food department, announced today. Scoring of the contestants has not been completed.

The decision on cream price differentials to prevail in the valley came after more than two hours of discussion and a vote. In the ballot, 37 creameries voted for the two-cent price differential between each grade and seven creameries voted for a one cent variance between sweet cream and grade one and a two-cent variance between grade one and grade two.

Dr. A. A. Dowell, superintendent of the Northwest school, praised the creamerymen and the dairy industry for the cream grading program which has been set up in this country. He pointed out that in this respect the dairy industry is far ahead of other agricultural industries, such as hog-producing, in which there is no uniform grading system.

Cite Opposing Arguments

In the discussion on the cream price differential, those favoring the smaller spread in prices between grades maintained that the butter market at present does not warrant a two-cent premium on sweet cream over grade one cream.

It was the contention of those favoring the larger spread in prices between grades that the cost of production to the farmer warranted paying a two-cent premium on sweet cream over grade one cream and that with the former grade a better butter could be produced, thus inducing increased butter consumption and strengthening the butter market.

In the final vote the co-operatives, favoring the two-cent spread between each grade, won over the centralized and independent creameries favoring the smaller premium.

Law Specifies Grades

Sweet cream, as specified by law, is fresh, fine-flavored cream with not more than two-tenths per cent of acid at the time of grading; grade one cream is clean, free from undesirable odors and flavors and has not more than six-tenths per cent acid at the time of grading; and grade two cream includes any lawful cream not eligible to grade as No. 1 because of too high acidity or because it contains undesirable odors and flavors in a moderate degree.

The law provides for a minimum one cent spread in price between each grade, but creameries in general have attempted to discourage the number two grade as much as possible by providing a greater variance between this grade and grade one.

Charles Ommodt, assistant commissioner of agriculture, dairy and food, conducted the meeting last night. — Crookston Daily Times, June 12, 1935.

Physician Performs "Razor Blade" Operation

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Patricia Ann Fleege, died here in a hospital a few days ago, 30 hours after a physician had performed an emergency operation with a razor blade. The physician made the emergency incisions, on either side of the girl's windpipe, so that she could breathe after getting an object of some kind caught in her throat. Another operation was made at a local hospital later. Patricia Ann, 2, died of pneumonia, and not as a result of the operations.

Fled Accident In Fear of Wife

Minneapolis.—An admitted hit-and-run driver Wednesday blamed his action on the fear his wife would learn he was out with another girl. Ole Norsby, 26, 665 North Snelling avenue, St. Paul, pleaded guilty to leaving the scene of an accident when he was arraigned in Ramsey county district court before Judge R. D. O'Brien. The accident occurred early last Wednesday when his car struck Georgianna Wiest, 880 Aurora avenue, who was not seriously hurt.

"I had a girl with me whom I had met at 10 p. m.," Norsby told the court. "And I beat it after the accident because I didn't want my wife to find out about it. I was trying to find the boy friend of this girl I was with."

Judge O'Brien imposed a six-months sentence but deferred execution until Tuesday to permit investigation by probation officers.

Unusual Births

Moyedan, N. C.—Mrs. Alondo Atwood became the mother of twins twice within a year. Ten months ago the stork left her twin boys and a few days ago the stork returned with twin girls. A report comes from Madrid, Spain, discrediting the Dionne quintuplets a bit. Quintuplets were born to a mother of the Lavapies section of Madrid, one of the poorest sections of the Spanish capital. The report stated that the five babies came into the world without medical assistance and are thriving. At Maecer, Pa., the records of a pioneer physician recent disclosed that in 1826 Mrs. John Kelly had given birth to two sets of quintuplets and a set of twins, all within 20 months. Mrs. Kelly had given birth to a set of triplets before she moved here. The quintuplets' births occurred less than 12 months apart; the twins arrived eight months later. All the quintuplets, being premature, died soon after birth. The mother died soon after the birth of the twins. Jack C. Coffey, 34, of St. Louis, took out an insurance policy with Lloyd's of London against the possibility of twins being born to Mrs. Coffey. Coffey paid a premium of $90.00 Feb. 20th, and recently colected $1000.00. Mrs. Coffey did have twin children, Cynthia and Carol; the report states that they were born Friday, June 7.

DO WE WANT A NEW COURT HOUSE?

The county board of commissioners took the first step necessary if the county is to avail itself of the unprecedented offer of federal aid towards building projects last week, when it requested data from the district engineer regarding the cost of a new court house.

While the board has not committed itself in any way, we believe that the step that has been taken is well justified. The cost of estimating the project and furnishing the plans, are, we understand, carried by the federal engineering division, and whether or not the county makes use of the information that will be given at this time, it is wise to have some definite data to present to the people. We can not refrain from making the comparison between the action of the board in securing data and information first, and the action of the city council which said "give us $60,000 to spend and we will tell you afterwards how we intend to spend it.'

While the Forum is opposed to bond issues on general principles, we do realize that the offer of a grant of 45 per cent of total cost and a loan of the balance at 3 per cent interest which is being made by the public works division of the federal works division of the federal government at the present time is probably the best proposition which the county will have offered to it. There is no question in our mind, but that the present 4 billion 800 million dollars public works appropriation is the last such an appropriation that the congress will make. If that doesn't "prime the pump," congress will most likely decide that it can not be primed and will take other steps to put industry into operation.

It seems to us that the county should avail itself of this opportunity and build a new court house. The present building is a fire trap and an eyesore, and while we can probably close our eyes to the looks of the building, it would be hard to replace the records that are contained in the building if it was to be destroyed by fire. Needless to say, the loss would be far more than the cost of a new building, even if the entire cost was carried by the county.

We are sure that the county board would appreciate a little discussion of the matter by the citizens of the county and the Forum invites its readers to write us and give their views on the question. All letters which are signed by the writer will be published. Support democratic government and voice your opinion.

THE PRESIDENT'S CONFIDENCE IN THE FUTURE

The Minneapolis Star has been purchased by John Cowles, the publisher of the Des Moines (Iowa) Register. Mr. Cowles is rather well known as a Republican capitalist who supported Hoover. We assume that in his purchase of the Star he has done just what most any other man who has money to invest would do, namely invest it, in what he believes is, or can be made, a profitable enterprise. We may be unusually obtuse, of course, but we can see in the transaction no particular gain and no particular loss to Minseapolis nor to Minnesota. Certainly, we see in it no particular sign of an immediate bright future for the United States. In other words, it seems to us that however momentous the transaction may be for the vendor and the purchaser and possibly to the employees of the Star, it would not rate so very high in a history of the important events of the nation.

However, on the front page of the Saturday issue of the Star, there is heading a list of congratulations, a telegram from President Roosevelt which commends Mr. Cowles upon his "confidence in the future," as shown by his purchase of the Star. It may be that Mr. Cowles is a close and personal friend of the president. In that case the telegram is explainable as a friendly greeting. But, if he is not, then the president is showing some rather unfair discrimination in not also congratulating the people who are building a fishmeal factory at Warroad, as well as other businessmen in this city and elsewhere who are also displaying a confidence in the future by investing their money in expansion and improvements.

Perhaps the incident is trivial and this comment pointless, but it just struck us, that so far as we have heard, the president did not dispatch a congratulatory and commending telegram to Henry Ford when he raised the minimum wages in his factories from $5 a day to $6 a day. In our opinion, Mr. Ford's action bespoke far more "confidence in the future" and actually would have more bearing on the future economic life of the nation, than the fact that the Minneapolis Star has changed from the hands of one group of capitalists to the hands of another such group.

GOVERNMENT BY TELEGRAMS AND BY LOBBIES

We note that large part of the press is "viewing with alarm" what they term "government by coercion," as exemplified by the mass pressure brought to bear upon congressmen with telephone calls, letters and telegrams. These newspapers usually point out the danger to democratic institutions and the tendency towards mob rule in the activities of Dr. Townsend and Father Coughlin, when they exhort their followers to telephone, telegraph or write their congressmen as to their desires on sundry legislation.

We hold no briefs for any of the "One Man Bands" that are springing up under the leadership of Townsend, Coughlin, Long and Others, altho we heartily endorse most of the criticism aimed at the administration and the financial interests, particularly by Father Coughlin. But we do think that criticism of their tactics comes with poor grace from those newspapers which have always maintained the most persistent and powerful lobbies in Washington and in the various state capitols.

We have had the opportunity of seeing the lobbies maintained by the various private interests: railroads, power interests, banking crowd, trucking firms, automobile dealers, chambers of commerce, and what not, and we know that they were far more potent than letters and telegrams enough to swamp the mails and the wires. Added to that they are invariably selfish in their demands. Always seeking a special privilege which they would deny to others. Misguided as the telegram senders and the letter writers may be at times, they are usually unselfish, seeking only what they believe will be of general benefit to the entire nation.

Theoretically, we suppose that the lawmaking body in an Utopian democracy would be composed of highly intelligent and educated men and women, thoroughly informed, absolutely unfettered by any bonds of friendships, ties of business, economic and social security needs. They should be stuck away on a desert island where no highpressure salesmen having an axe to grind could get at them, there to deliberately legislate in the general welfare without undue influences to sway their judgment. But we are afraid that if such an arrangement could be accomplished the newspapers that now squawk against "government by coercion" would be the first to find fault with the arrangement.

A REBUKE TO THE CONSERVATIVE SENATORS

It is quite apparent that the voters of Minneapolis and the conservative members of the Minnesota Senate are not in accord on the matter of radicalism. It will be remembered that the conservative senators, including our own Senator E. L. Tungseth, threw up their hands in horror and refused to confirm Governor Olson's appointment of Mrs. Arthur (Marion) Lesueur to the State Board of Education because she is too "radical." Now comes news to the effect that Mr. Arthur LeSueur, the lady's husband and one of the best known radicals in the northwest, has been elected to the Board of Education in Minneapolis. May we now be told that because of his election a calvacade of factories and business houses will trek out of the state, led by the honorable conservative senators Wright and Wolfe?

DUST IN THE AIR

(From Iowa Unionist and Public Forum)

At ten o'clock Sunday night we sat reading a speech by Congressman Wright Patman on the present banking system. Our radio was set for Charles E. Coughlin, who talks frequently on that question. We do not care what party Patman belongs to, nor what church Coughlin belongs to; We want to know if what they say on the money question is true.

But the daily press of America never asks whether what these men say is true. The daily press discusses the supposed political ambitions of these men, or some other irrelevant question—just throwing dust in the air to keep the people from fixing their attention on the facts of a vital public problem.

THE NRA DECISION

(From The New Republic)

In political circles it was agreed that the NRA decision probably gave the President a tremendous advantage in the effort to be reelected in 1936. The NRA was a failure; it would have expired in less than three weeks, unless continued by congress and hope had been abandoned that this would be done without greatly weakening and curtailing the measure. Now, the political wiseacres point out, the president con go to the country with the argument that just as the NRA began to be truly effective, the court killed it. His alibi is perfect; so is his issue in the next presidential race. If he gets the new legislation he is seeking during the next seventeen months, he can demand that the execution of the New Deal should be entrusted to the fathers of the old one. If the fresh legislation is not forthcoming when the campaign begins, he can ask reelection in order to obtain it. Mr. Roosevelt is a shrewd political campaigner, and there is no doubt that he could recapture—has doubtless already recaptured—some of the support among the Progressives that had slipped away from him during the past year. From his point of view, nothing could be better than such a new party, a coalition of conservative Republicans and conservative Democrats, perhaps headed by Al Smith, as has lately been discussed. A bolt of the reactionaries in his own party would enormously increase his political strength in the country as a whole.

THE BUTTER IMPORT RACKET

(Farmers Union Herald)

Stories come to us from sources which we believe to be reliable, about butter imports, that make one want to do violence. Of course we cannot guarantee that what we relate is factually true, but personally we do not doubt their truth.

Within the past ninety days, eight million pounds of New Zealand butter, so one story goes, arrived in New York City. The butter was placed in bonded storage. The presence of so much butter in the city, of course, sent the current price level down. There was at that time only a four days' supply of domestic butter in the city. The New Zealand shippers or the importers, or both, bought up the domestic butter in storage. The price of butter went up, whereupon the New Zealand butter was taken out of storage and sold at the higher prices.

When the New Zealand butter was all sold, the domestic butter was then put on the market, whereupon the price of butter went down again.

That's one story. Here's the other. An American automobile manufacturer traded a bunch of cars in Holland for butter. The butter was brought into the United States and sold in competition with domestic butter. The auto manufacturer did not care about nor need to make any profit on the butter. He made his profit on his cars.

"FULL DINNER PAIL"

(Askov American)

Apparently the Republicans are getting busy on the 1936 national campaign with their "grass roots" conferences. An old-time campaign slogan of the G.O.P.—the "full dinner pail"—is again being brought forth.

Of course everybody wants a full dinner pail and that slogan has worked in some past national campaigns, but it may not be so easy to put it over again. The memory of many citizens easily runs back to the days of Harding, Coolidge and especially the days of Hoover. Actions speak louder than words, and it must be remembered that the full dinner pail for all is not an easy accomplishment when some individuals have incomes greater than the combined incomes of a thousand people.

Cut down on greed and monoply and there will be better chances for the full dinner pail all around.

Actual votes on the part of lawmakers on net income taxes, inheritance, gift and estate taxes—means of spreading the wealth of the nation and making for more purchasing power on the part of the masses—have a much greater bearing on the public welfare than any resolutions adopted.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

THE DRINKER AND THE AUTO

There are 32 million drivers of automobiles in this country driving 26 million cars. This in itself is 32 million reasons for prohibition. An automobile traveling at the rate of 60 miles an hour goes 88 feet a second. Ordinarily a second does not mean much, but when a man under the influence of drink travels 88 feet a second, it does. The drunken driver not only endangers his own life, but the lives of those with him in the car, other drivers, and other pedestrians.

Says Dr. William Brady, M. D., "The drunken drivers that escape accidents because the other driver or the pedestrian happens to be sober and alert, are the most prejudiced of all, for they assume that because they habitually drink and then drive without accident, all this stuff about retarding the reaction time is a lot of hooey.

"Frequently we see statistics of the frightful havoc wrought by automobile traffic and pleas to drivers to obey the law and the rules of the road and to be careful. Since the law is so lenient in interpreting drunken driving, and since so many people like a little drink themselves, the automobile will doubtless long remain our most deadly weapon."

Sweden Beats Panic with Public Ownership

Milwaukee. — How government enterprises are succeeding in thwarting the depression for Sweden is related by Dr. Yngve Larson, one of the six city commissioners of Stockholm.

Dr. Larson, recognized as one of the leading municipal authorities in Europe, is visiting Milwaukee, attracted, he said, by its reputation as the best governed city in this country. Four of the six city commissioners or burgomasters of Stockholm are Socialists, Dr. Larson said. Only one per cent of Sweden's population is unemployed under a Socialist regime.

"The Scandinavian countries are leading the world in solving economic problems," Mayor Hoan said in introducing economic problems," Mayor Hoan said in introducing Dr. Larson. "The Swedish people have the fine philosophy that if one part of the population is in distress the whole population is in danger, and that the problem is not solved until everybody is made secure."

With income derived from operation of its power plant, street cars, gas plant, telephones, water system and other utilities, Stockholm is able to reduce its tax ratio, Dr. Larson explained. Capital costs for the city are covered by these enterprises, he said.

"Taxes are based on anticipated revenue from real estate rather than on the property value," Dr. Larson related. "We collected about 89 per cent of our taxes during the depression several years ago, and now we collect 94 per cent."

The visitor touched upon Stockholm's city hospitalization and housing projects.

"There is only one private clinic of any importance," Dr. Larson said. "Almost all are treated in municipally owned hospitals.

"Staff doctors and district physicians are paid by the city and persons unable to pay receive free service. The service is maintained mostly by taxation and a part by fees, with the city contributing 4 million dollars a year.

"The city owns more than half the land in the city and 88,000 homes," he went on. "They were built during the depression. The dwellers pay rent to the city, and for a modern place of three rooms with conveniences the rent is about $20 a month.

"In addition, 20 per cent of the houses in Stockholm were built with the aid of municipal loans."

Dr. Larson disclaimed praise by Mayor Hoan that Stockholm had supplanted Vienna as the best governed city in the world since the Fascist control in the latter city.

"Here in Milwaukee with your fine homes, streets and parks you have a leading place as the best governed city," he said.

Suplementing Dr. Larson's remarks, Mayor Hoan pointed out that in Sweden 35 per cent of the enterprises are owned by the city, state or co-operatives.

"If we were as far advanced as the Swedish people, we would be getting 35 per cent of the national income, instead of having it go to a few," Mayor Hoan said. "That is the real reason why we can't buy things, and why factories have been closing down."

Views and Reviews

War and Fascism?

Those who still believe that the U. S. A. will not go fascist may be jolted into reality by the statements of Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, Jr., published in the Sunday editions of the Hearst newspapers recently. In his article, Stirling clearly voiced the opinion that government such as Germany had was commendable, and that Bolshevism such as existed in Russia should be destroyed. The statements were made by a private individual, and were disavowed by the administration; yet several other individuals voiced their approval. If the beliefs expressed in the Sunday feature do not have official sanction, they do have private sanction.

The Soviet Union has been successful, Stirling discovers (reports of famine in the Hearst press to the contrary notwithstanding). Stirling makes this envious remark: "Russia has, to all intents and purposes, withdrawn a fertile and populous land of over eight million square miles in extent, with a population of one hundred and sixty-five millions from the usual economic intercourse with the world . . . The doctrines of Bolshevism ever remain a menace to all capitalist nations." He calls for unity against this menace, and flays capitalist nations for their petty bickerings. "Will the rest of Europe divide itself and give Russian propaganda an opportunity to drive a Red wedge between the division? . . . Will the full force of this universal desire for conflict be expended in a fratricidal war in Europe? Or may we not look for a United Front aainst Communism?" Then he displays his admiration for Germany and the Nazis. 'Germany, in such an alliance, must become the great organizer and industrial producer. In her factories the instruments of war on a colossal scale could be turned out. In the guise of such a crusade, maybe yet inarticulate in men's thouhts, cannot one see the outline of a daring plan, not only forever laying the ghost of Bolshevism but for opening up the fertile lands of Russia to a crowded and industrially hungry Europe?"

Liberals of all shades of opinion have spontaneously protested against this display of wish-fulfillment, but the fact remains that there is a considerable class of the military minded in this country who would engage in war at the slightest pretext.

Great Britain is arming herself, and Stanley Baldwin and Sir Anthony Eden have sent greetings to the United States to enter into a pact with her against any future contingencies. It is generally conceded now that Italy will go into Abyssinia in the Fall, when the hot weather ceases, and Japan is already going into northern China. Hostilities may break out at several places.

Stirling but voices the imperialistic viewpoint. Capitalism must always expand by invading new territory. The American empire got land from the Indians. Japan is getting it from theChinese. Italy would get it from the Abyssinians. Stirling would get land for all Europe from Russia. It is but natural for such to have that viewpoint.

And in the Chaco valley between Paraguay and Bolivia, two small nations lay exhausted, both financially and physically, while the munition makers who sold them the instruments of warfare during the three years of the Chaco war, sit back, contented with the day's business. It is time for war to break out somewhere else, for the audience is getting restless.

Voice in the Muskeg

We have had Haldeman-Julius, Francis Shoemaker, the Ripsaw, the Minnesota Voice, and the Mid-West American; now we have THE NORTHWESTERNER, a hectographed sheet of liberal thought originated by John J. Hovorka, of Strathcona, Minn. Comparison with those mentioned is made both as a boost and as a knock. Hovorka's stuff is pungent—maybe too pungent for some, but pungent enough for others. He makes comment on politics, economics, morals,—all of man's follies,—and what he says usually worth while. At times he indulges in personalities—and for a while the air is blue. But on the whole the Northwesterner is somewhat different than the usual run of periodicals. Try it, folks.

Shoemaker and the Communists

Speaking of Francis Shoemaker, I am reminded of an interview he gave recently, in which he stated some views on a new third party. A convention to form such a party will be held in Chicago on July 5. and Mr. Shoemaker has been speaking in various parts of the country on that subject. The interviewer asked a few questions and Shoemaker answered them.

Q.—What about Father Coughlin and Huey Long—did you invite them to the convention?

A.—Well, yes, we invited Father Coughlin and Huey Long.

Q.—But, Mr. Shoemaker, don't you think it is rather dangerous to have such groups, who are obviously fascist in tendency, participating in such a movement?

A.—No, I don't think it is dangerous. We won't let them get control and what we want to do is to win their followers away from them.

Q.—Will the Comunist party be allowed to participate in the convention?

A.—Personally, I'm not in favor of having the Communists participate. You can't trust 'em. They disrupt everything they go into. In Minnesota we don't have any Communists to speak of. We ran 'em all out after we found out they wouldn't stand by their promises and keep faith with us.—You can't have any kind of a united front with the Communists. A united front to them means just what they want to do. You can't trust 'em. Just let one of 'em in and before you know it, he'll be running everything.—Another reason for not having the Communists is that they don't amount to anything anyway.

And that's that.

Civilization vs. Barbarism
By Arthur W. Hopkins

If human nature can't be changed, then everyone in the world is a barbarian, for that is what everyone was once. But we know that some men are civilized in the proportion that they are ethical and logical, humane and unsuperstitious— so that statement is palpably untrue.

Men progress in attaining logic and ethics and philosophy, the trinity of civilization, according to their environment. This environment has been seeded by the thought of philosophers, nourished by the blood of heretics, and watered by the sweat of the toilers and the tears of saints.

Barbarity and civilization are still in conflict in the world. The former is wedded to the competitive, the latter to the co-operative system. As men become civilized the competitive recedes and the co-operative advances. In proof, look about and see that all our civilizing institution are communal; start from the family, and look with open eyes and minds. And one will also find that all our uncivilizing institutions are competitive. For example, war is the ultimate of competition, peace the ultimate of cooperation.—Minneapolis.

"DAD, HERE'S TO YOU"

"We hapened in a home the other night, and over the parlor door saw the legend worked in letters of red, 'What is home without a mother?' Across the room was another brief, 'God bless our home.'

"Now, what's the matter with 'God bless our dad?' He get's up early lights the fire, boils an egg, and wipes off the dew of the lawn with his boots while many a mother is sleeping. He makes the weekly hand-out for the butcher, the grocer, the milkman, the baker, and his little pile is badly worn before he has been home an hour.

"If there is a noise during the night, dad is kicked in the back and goes down to find the burglar and kill him. Mother darns the socks, but dad bought the socks in the first place, and the needles and the yarn afterward. Mother does up the fruit; well dad bought it all, and jars and sugar cost like the mischief.

"Dad buys chickens for the Sunday dinner, carves them himself, and draws the neck from the ruins after everyone else is served. 'What is home without a mother?' Yes, that is all right, but what is home without a father? Ten chances to one it is a boarding house, father is under a slab and the landlady is the widow. Dad, here's to you; you've got your faults—you may have lots of them—but you're all right and we'll miss you when you're gone."—Ex.

Minute Sermons

By Dr. Crawford Grays

We are all by nature posessed of powers and energies much greater than are usually supposed. The level at which we commonly live, whether of physical strength, or intellectual capacity, or of moral power, is much lower than that which is posible to us.

Our degree of strength has much to do with our state of mind.

Under unusual stress we are able to perform feats of strength and endurance of which otherwise we should deem ourselves incapable.

The limits of possibility in our daily lives, of thought and deed, are defined less by the body than by the mind. The resources of our individual power are psychical rather than physical in character. Therefore because we allow the physical to influence us more than the mental a very large part of our capability goes unused.

Why?

Because we harbor the subtle demons of fears, doubts, imaginations which paralyze initiative, courage, resistance, and usefulness.

"To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."—Romans 8:6.

A Boost for the Philosophy of Technocracy

by KAY JACKSON

Why should ninety percent of us have to constantly deny ourselves, skimp and scrape, "make this do," "get along without that," "make it over," and all the other pitiful substitutes for living "the more abundant life," when we are all living in the midst of abundance?

Isn't it just good, hard, sound common sense that, since this Nation's Industrial Plant can now, for the first time, produce necessities and luxuries in abundance, we change the ownership of that Plant by the right and power of Eminent Domain so we all may, with production and distribution under single, efficient management, by experts, enjoy the fruits of our labor, skill, and machinery?

Thus Mr. Sinclair's Epic Plan, to employ only idle men in idle shops, would be broadened to include every individual now at work, every factory now running. Thus Dr. Townsend's $200 a month, only for persons over sixty, would be the minimum available for every person of voting age. Thus Father Coughlin's Government Ownership, only of Banking and Credit, would include the means of production, distribution, and communication. Thus Senator Long's Share the Wealth would be realized, not by taking merely the tokens of wealth from the rich to give to the poor, but by the simple device of collective ownership of the means by which wealth is produced, whereupon simple justice would require that it be equitably shared. Thus the goal of all Third Party men, and Progressives, envisioned as attainable in 1940-1944-1948, would be reached, fully realized and enjoyed now, today, 1935-1936!

Then kindle a fire under your Congressman! Keep it hot. Don't let him forget for one moment that you know what is wrong, that you know Congress can speedily make it right, and that the use of EMINENT DOMAIN is the legal, always available, peaceful and thoroughly constitutional way to do it now!

The age of scarcity, of substitutes, of enforced denials, is past. Then have done with it. The age of abundance is here. Then accept it. Embrace it. Take it!

Lincoln Said:

"I see in the near future a crisis arising which unnerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. The money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudices of the people until all the wealth is aggregated in the hands of a few and the Republic is destroyed. I feel, at this time, more anxious for my country than ever in the midst of war."

TWIN GEESE HATCHED FROM SINGLE EGG

Red Lake Falls.—At the Fay walker farm where geese have been raised every year an unusual event took place in the goose family when twin geese were hatched from a single egg. One of the goslings came forth into the world from the egg shell in fine shape but the second was unable to make its way out and was dead when discovered by members of the Walker family.

DREAMS and MEMORIES by Lawrence Hawthorne

Let's turn aside from the busy way
Where the crowds go rushing by;
Let's find a nook by a tinkling brook
And stop there—just you and I;
Let's live again for a little while
In the Land of Used-To-Be,
And I'll paint memories for you
While you weave dreams for me.

I'll paint such beautiful memories
Of the days when we were young,
Of things we said to each other then,
And the songs that then were sung;
And you can weave all the golden dreams
That will set our hearts aglow;
Then, hand in hand, we'll search again
For the joys we used to know!

FARM BUREAU MEETS

A meeting of the local Farm Bureau will be held at the Woodman Hall on Friday evening, June 21st, at 8 o'clock p. m. Several speakers will be present and an interesting program will be given.

The Grygla Co-operative Creamery Ass'n wishes to announce to patrons of the Gas and Oil Department that the dividends for 1934 purchase, as shown on the annual statement, will be held as a reserve until the end of this year and then paid out together with the 1935 rebates. As this department was not opened until in the fall the rebates to each patron naturally would not amount to a great deal and paying it out together with the 1935 rebates will eliminate considerable work. We hope that this method of handling it will be satisfactory to our patrons and we wish to thank you for your splendid support and patronage of the several branches of our creamery.—Mrs. Adolph Erickson, Sec.-Treas.

VALLE LADIES AID SALE

A pleasant, warm day and a good sized crowd made a big success of the Valle Ladies' Aid sale held at the P. I. Levang home last Saturday afternoon. The day was opened by a short devotional service by Rev. S. Anderson. A free dinner was served to the whole crowd by the Ladies Aid, after which Enok Hestad and Art Nordby auctioneered the sale.

After the Ladies' Aid had finished their sale the Willing Workers had a sale of the articles of sewing made by the birls in that club. The proceeds from this sale will go to some Orphans' home.

A nice sum was netted by the Ladies' Aid from the sale, as well as from the ice cream and pop stand, and a pleasant afternoon was spent by the whole crowd.

Attention Conservation Club

It has been decided by the officers of this club and the captains of the two contesting teams that the "Crow Hunt" shall terminate Saturday evening, June 29th. All points or credits must be delivered to Oliver Peterson by that time as none will be counted or given credit for after that date. The following evening, Sunday the 30th, the club will have its meeting in the R. N. W. hall, at which time the winners shall be announced and such other matters will be taken up for the betterment of the club and conservation in general. It is hoped that the entire membership turns out for this meeting, which very likely will be the last one until the fall sessions. A feed will be dispensed to all the hungry sportsmen and a general good time is in anticipation.

J. Brandt to Address Cooperation Institute

One of Minesota's widely known co-operative leaders, John Brandt, president of the Land O'Lakes Creameries, is one of three lecturers chosen to address the eleventh annual session of the American Institute of Cooperation on the practical application of cooperative principles and methods to the welfare of farmers. The institute will be held at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, July 15 to 20.

Mr. Brandt will tell how his organization has succeeded through its efforts to improve service to consumers. The other two speakers in this special series of talks will be H. E. Babcock, of the Cooperative G. L. F. Exchange of New York, largest farmers' cooperative purchasing association in the United States, and Earl W. Benjamin, representing the Pacific Egg Producers' association.

Charles W. Holman, secretary of the cooperation institute, says the annual session is a school for farm leaders on the application of cooperative methods to the marketing of farm products and the purchase of supplies required to produce farm products.

Another series of meetings at the Cornell session will deal with methods of telling the cooperative story, both to farmers who are members of cooperatives and to farmers who are not members.

State Acts to Speed Federal Road Program

Minnesota's program for expenditure of the federal grants for road construction and grade crossing separations will be submitted to Washington authorities in sections in order to speed up approval of the work, according to N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

Engineers of the department, faced with regulations altogether different from those which governed previous grants, have had to abandon tentative programs prepared in advance.

"Judging from incomplete official information thus far received," Mr. Elsberg said, "the $5,000,000 federal grant for road work must be used largely on pick and shovel, hand labor projects. Apparently it will be impossible to use any of this money for paving or any other high type of improvement. Light grading, graveling, shoulder widening and frost boil treatments are some of the work which seems to be eligible under the federal regulations.

"Another complicating phase of the situation is that 90 per cent of labor must be employed from relief rolls. This would rule out counties having few men on relief unless arrangements can be made to transport workers back and forth from unemployment centers. If this cannot be done, all work apparently must be done where there are large numbers on relief.

"The relief labor requirements also aplies to the $5,000,000 grade crossing separation program."

Train Crippled Children For Useful Occupations

A complete coverage of the entire state will be the aim of the Minnesota Association for Crippled Children, in a program which is now in the course of development.

A financial campaign of the association will be launched the week of June 16th, under the auspices of the American Legion Auxiliary to raise a fund of $52,490.00 to carry out the program.

The recent studies of cripples made in the state show that there are large numbers who have not been reached by previous surveys or clinics. By having a medical social worker on the job all of the time the association can prepare the way for clinics and insure adequate follow-up. Unless steps are taken to make effective the recommendations at the clinic the full value is lost. The same applies to follow-up after hospital care. There is a large need for artificial appliances and wheel chairs.

Mrs. M. E. Withrow, state campaign chairman, is calling on all sections of the state to assist in the campaign to raise the $52,490. "The Minnesota Association for Crippled Children is a state-wide organization," Mrs. Withrow said. "The program which it will launch will carry its active services into every section."

Liquor Makers Say Gas And Alky Won't Mix

By W. G. Calderwood

One of the leading American distilleries has made the startling announcement thru the news and magazine press that it will spend $100,000 to teach the American public the dangers of drinking. With commendable forthrightness the first advertisement carries at its head the caption quoted above and adds: "Liquor has no place in the front seat of an automobile—alcohol and gasoline do not mix."

The fact that alcohol, even in very small doses is a dangerous driver is a bit of technical scientific education which the motoring public sadly needs, and a hundred thousand dollars spent in publicity to put that fact over is a social service of no mean order. The drunken driver is a relatively small factor in the traffic problem. Robbins Stoeckel, Motor Vehicle Commissioner of Connecticut, says, "The really dangerous driver is the man who has had one or two drinks only, who still thinks he is in possession of his faculties, but whose driving judgment is impaired."

It is only a few months since that vital fact began to penetrate the thinking of the general public and particularly the thinking of the very moderate drinker, who can truthfully say that he has been a moderate drinker for years, but has never once been drunk. Many such drivers nurse the delusion that their judgment, caution, muscular control, and neuromuscular reactions are unimpaired by the very small amount of alcohol that they drink. They believe that the mild exhilaration that follows their drinking gives added skill, sharpened perception and surer judgment.

Now a great distillery is spending a king's ransom to tell them tha they are all wet, in more than one sense. It joins its warning voice to the teaching of science that the man who is not drunk, or even nearly drunk, but who has been drinking has no business to try to manipulate the control mechanism of the modern juggernaut which last year crushed and mangled 35,000 Americans to death, and inflicted wounds, sometimes worse than death, upon over a million more.

"I who am a Prohibitionist" join with "Those who make whisky" when they say, "Drinking and driving Do NOT MIX."

MINNESOTA BREVITIES

RAIN WASHES TAIL OFF COW

—O—

Carlton.—While Charles Dodge of Scanlon realized that this territory had experienced some heavy rains this summer he never expected a downpour that would wash the tail right off one of his cows. Last week he traded some livestock with a cattle dealer at Duluth, brought them home and turned them into the pasture. During the night a heavy rain set in and the following morning in driving the cattle into the barn he noted one of them was tailless. Closer inspection revealed that the cow had aparently been born that way and a tail had been glued on. The missing part was found in the pasture with evidence that it had previously been glued on

62 YEAR OLD "SILVER BAT" COMES TO LIGHT

—O—

Waseca.—A silver-plated baseball bat, a trophy that was prized by many southern baseball teams over sixty years ago, is on display in this city. Frank Wasgatt of Winnebago produced this to prove that his city had real baseball teams in the early days. The bat was originally awarded by the Rice County Agricultural Society to Bloming Grove, Sept. 17, 1873. Following this it was won by several southern Minnesota baseball clubs, and was finally taken from Waseca by the Winnebago Clippers. As the bat was passed on to each team a ring of silver plate was added noting the event, until it became known as the Silver Bat. However, after it had been won by Winnebago it was held as a trophy at the college there until someone stole all the silver bands except the one over the end.

CLOVER WITH 11 LEAVES PROMISES FINDER LUCK

—O—

Rochester. — Little boys who grow up to become disillusioned about the veracity of Paul Bunyan's story may not believe that an eleven leaf clover three inches in diameter was recently found near this city. Claire Rooney of this city has this clover to prove it. While working on the belt line beautifying project he found something which if four-leaf clovers bring good luck, should set him up for life.

NEW YOUNGEST 'GRANDMA'

—O—

Another candidate for the role of the nation's youngest grandmother has been reported in Crow Wing county. She is Mrs. Lillian Wood of Riverton. Mrs. Wood became a grandmother when she was 31 years and four months old which beats the record of Mrs. Fred Tiffany, Fargo, and Mrs. Alphonse Vassall of St. Paul.

PICKPOCKET GETS $70 FROM VICTIMS AT CHURCH DINNER

—O—

Royalton.—A pickpocket who jostled about among the crowd at the church dinner of Holy Trinity church took about $70 from the pockets of three victims. His method was to push through a crowded group, jostling his victim, and remove the wallet from the victim's pocket in the confusion. When it became known that the three parties had lost money, members of the parish recalled seeing a stranger but no one took notice of his departure.

J. Brandt to Address Cooperation Institute

One of Minesota's widely known co-operative leaders, John Brandt, president of the Land O'Lakes Creameries, is one of three lecturers chosen to address the eleventh annual session of the American Institute of Cooperation on the practical application of cooperative principles and methods to the welfare of farmers. The institute will be held at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, July 15 to 20.

Mr. Brandt will tell how his organization has succeeded through its efforts to improve service to consumers. The other two speakers in this special series of talks will be H. E. Babcock, of the Cooperative G. L. F. Exchange of New York, largest farmers' cooperative purchasing association in the United States, and Earl W. Benjamin, representing the Pacific Egg Producers' association.

Charles W. Holman, secretary of the cooperation institute, says the annual session is a school for farm leaders on the application of cooperative methods to the marketing of farm products and the purchase of supplies required to produce farm products

Another series of meetings at the Cornell session will deal with methods of telling the cooperative story, both to farmers who are members of cooperatives and to farmers who are not members.

State Acts to Speed Federal Road Program

Minnesota's program for expenditure of the federal grants for road construction and grade crossing separations will be submitted to Washington authorities in sections in order to speed up approval of the work, according to N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner.

Engineers of the department, faced with regulations altogether different from those which governed previous grants, have had to abandon tentative programs prepared in advance.

"Judging from incomplete official information thus far received," Mr. Elsberg said, "the $5,000,000 federal grant for road work must be used largely on pick and shovel, hand labor projects. Apparently it will be impossible to use any of this money for paving or any other high type of improvement. Light grading, graveling, shoulder widening and frost boil treatments are some of the work which seems to be eligible under the federal regulations.

"Another complicating phase of the situation is that 90 per cent of labor must be employed from relief rolls. This would rule out counties having few men on relief unless arrangements can be made to transport workers back and forth from unemployment centers. If this cannot be done, all work apparently must be done where there are large numbers on relief.

"The relief labor requirements also aplies to the $5,000,000 grade crossing separation program."

Train Crippled Children For Useful Occupations

A complete coverage of the entire state will be the aim of the Minnesota Association for Crippled Children, in a program which is now in the course of development..

A financial campaign of the association will be launched the week of June 16th, under the auspices of the American Legion Auxiliary to raise a fund of $52,490.00 to carry out the program.

The recent studies of cripples made in the state show that there are large numbers who have not been reached by previous surveys or clinics. By having a medical social worker on the job all of the time the association can prepare the way for clinics and insure adequate follow-up. Unless steps are taken to make effective the recommendations at the clinic the full value is lost. The same applies to follow-up after hospital care. There is a large need for artificial appliances and wheel chairs.

Mrs. M. E. Withrow, state campaign chairman, is calling on all sections of the state to assist in the campaign to raise the $52,490. "The Minnesota Association for Crippled Children is a state-wide organization," Mrs. Withrow said. "The program which it will launch will carry its active services into every section."

Liquor Makers Say Gas And Alky Won't Mix

By W. G. Calderwood

One of the leading American distilleries has made the startling announcement thru the news and magazine press that it will spend $100,000 to teach the American public the dangers of drinking. With commendable forthrightness the first advertisement carries at its head the caption quoted above and adds: "Liquor has no place in the front seat of an automobile—alcohol and gasoline do not mix."

The fact that alcohol, even in very small doses is a dangerous driver is a bit of technical scientific education which the motoring public sadly needs, and a hundred thousand dollars spent in publicity to put that fact over is a social service of no mean order. The drunken driver is a relatively small factor in the traffic problem. Robbins Stoeckel, Motor Vehicle Commissioner of Connecticut, says, "The really dangerous driver is the man who has had one or two drinks only, who still thinks he is in possession of his faculties, but whose driving judgment is impaired."

It is only a few months since that vital fact began to penetrate the thinking of the general public and particularly the thinking of the very moderate drinker, who can truthfully say that he has been a moderate drinker for years, but has never once been drunk. Many such drivers nurse the delusion that their judgment, caution, muscular control, and neuromuscular reactions are unimpaired by the very small amount of alcohol that they drink. They believe that the mild exhilaration that follows their drinking gives added skill, sharpened perception and surer judgment.

Now a great distillery is spending a king's ransom to tell them tha they are all wet, in more than one sense. It joins its warning voice to the teaching of science that the man who is not drunk, or even nearly drunk, but who has been drinking has no business to try to manipulate the control mechanism of the modern juggernaut which last year crushed and mangled 35,000 Americans to death, and inflicted wounds, sometimes worse than death, upon over a million more.

"I who am a Prohibitionist" join with "Those who make whisky" when they say, "Drinking and driving Do NOT MIX."

MINNESOTA BREVITIES

—0—

Carlton.—While Charles Dodge of Scanlon realized that this territory had experienced some heavy rains this summer he never expected a downpour that would wash the tail right off one of his cows. Last week he traded some livestock with a cattle dealer at Duluth, brought them home and turned them into the pasture. During the night a heavy rain set in and the following morning in driving the cattle into the barn he noted one of them was tailless. Closer inspection revealed that the cow had aparently been born that way and a tail had been glued on. The missing part was found in the pasture with evidence that it had previously been glued on

Waseca.—A silver-plated baseball bat, a trophy that was prized by many southern baseball teams over sixty years ago, is on display in this city. Frank Wasgatt of Winnebago produced this to prove that his city had real baseball teams in the early days. The bat was originally awarded by the Rice County Agricultural Society to Bloming Grove, Sept. 17, 1873. Following this it was won by several southern Minnesota baseball clubs, and was finally taken from Waseca by the Winnebago Clippers. As the bat was passed on to each team a ring of silver plate was added noting the event, until it became known as the Silver Bat. However, after it had been won by Winnebago it was held as a trophy at the college there until someone stole all the silver bands except the one over the end.

—0—

Rochester. — Little boys who grow up to become disillusioned about the veracity of Paul Bunyan's story may not believe that an eleven leaf clover three inches in diameter was recently found near this city. Claire Rooney of this city has this clover to prove it. While working on the belt line beautifying project he found something which if four-leaf clovers bring good luck, should set him up for life.

Another candidate for the role of the nation's youngest grandmother has been reported in Crow Wing county. She is Mrs. Lillian Wood of Riverton. Mrs. Wood became a grandmother when she was 31 years and four months old which beats the record of Mrs. Fred Tiffany, Fargo, and Mrs. Alphonse Vassall of St. Paul.

—0—

Royalton.—A pickpocket who jostled about among the crowd at the church dinner of Holy Trinity church took about $70 from the pockets of three victims. His method was to push through a crowded group, jostling his victim, and remove the wallet from the victim's pocket in the confusion. When it became known that the three parties had lost money, members of the parish recalled seeing a stranger but no one took notice of his departure.

A REAL OPTIMIST

Bill Fox may well be called the champion optimist. He was sitting on a roof of his house during a flood, watching the water flow past, when a neighbor who owned a boat rowed across to him.

"Hello, Bill," said the man.

"Hello, Sam," replied Bill, pleasantly.

"All your fowls washed away this morning?"

"Yes, but the ducks can swim."

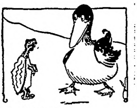
"Orange trees gone, too?"

"Yes, but everybody said the crop would be a failure anyhow."

"I see the river's reached above your windows, Bill."

"That's all right, Sam," was the reply. "Them windows needed washin'."

NATURE-FAKIR



Duck—It's funny.

Turtle—What is?

Duck—You say you're eighty years old and you're not out of your shell yet.

Heaven Forfend!

Gene—Has the depression hit you yet?

Bill—I'll say it has! First I lost my job and went back to the Old Man's to live; sent my children to the orphans' home; my wife went back to her mother, and I shot my dog.

Gene—That's bad.

Bill—Yes, sir, if times get any worse, I'm afraid I'll have to give up my car.—Safe Driver.

Not Guilty

The report came to a teacher who was in charge of the playground that a child was throwing stones at a team of horses tied in a nearby field. The teacher called the child to her and began:

"Charles, did you throw a stone at those poor horses?"

"Oh, no, Miss—" said the six-year-old earnestly. "No, I just threw a rock."—Indianapolis News.

Keeping Harmony

A northern Indiana family had a new dog and finding a name to suit all was becoming difficult when four-year-old Jack said:

"We better name her after Aunt Lou or she'll be sore, like she was when we named the baby Emma."—Indianapolis News.

Revised

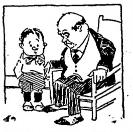
"Has Jones told you all the bright things his youngster has been saying?"

"Yes."

"What did you say?"

"I told him that children should be seen and not heard from."

VERY FEW O' THEM



"What's a diplomat, pa?"

"A successful married man."

Costly Information

"Broken off your engagement to Mary?"

"She wouldn't have me."

"You told her about your rich uncle?"

"Yes. She's my aunt now."

He Was There

Teacher—Now, Tommy, take the globe and point out Australia.

Tommy does so.

Teacher—Now, Calvin, who discovered Australia?

Calvin—Tommy did.

Dog Doing Well

Neighbor—Mrs. Dingbat, do you know that your dog barks all night?

Mrs. Dingbat—Yes, I know he does. But don't worry about him—he sleeps all day.

No Need to Worry

Father—Bottom of the class again, my boy? It's terrible!

Son—Please don't worry, father. They teach us the same at both ends of the class.

Honk, Honk!

Motorist's Wife—What lovely fleecy clouds. I'd just love to be up there sitting on one of them.

Motorist—All right. You drive the car.

Can't Blame Her

CHAPTER XIV

ABLE told Dawn of Ben's activity, watching her face narrowly because he understood the obstacle that was between these two. He saw hope come, followed by misgiving and trouble.

It was on Friday that Dawn left Tincup, striking across country far from the road toward Hoot Owl.

She was going to see Ben Elliott and tell him that she must see him now, that her heart could have no peace without him; that he must come to her and let her stand beside him while he pried into the past and attempted to make it give up truth.

Martin was alone in the office when she entered and started up so sharply at sight of her that the girl, in turn, was startled.

"I'm sorry!" she exclaimed a bit mystified. "Did I frighten you?"

"No. Not frightened. . . . My thoughts were . . . far from here."

"Is Ben about?"

"Haven't seen him since dinner. Don't know where he went."

Tim Jeffers, just down from camp, entered then.

"Where's Ben at?" he asked Martin.

"I don't know. Miss McManus, here, was just asking."

Martin moved to the old table Ben used for a desk.

"Sometimes he leaves a note for me when he's going away." He bent over the table, looking at the litter of papers on it. "No, he left no word. . . . Hum. . . . What's this?"

He picked up a slip of paper, read the single line inscribed on it and looked at Dawn.

"I didn't mean to pry. . . . Probably he's gone to meet you, though. This is a note for you."

"A note! Why, I . . ." Frowning, she took the paper and read: "Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon—Dawn."

"Why!" she cried. "I didn't . . . But I must have!" looking from one to the other. "That's my writing."

"Oh!" She let the paper flutter to the floor.

"I wrote that! I wrote that years ago!" she cried, struggling to speak distinctly. "I wrote that note for Mr. Brandon. . . . Years ago. . . . How did it get here? Who is calling Ben to the lodge?"

"What's this?" Tim Jeffers asked roughly. "Brandon? . . . Callin' Ben off alone?"

"Don't you see?" Martin cried and his voice was thick. "Dawn write it, all right. But he's sent it to Ben. . . . It's a decoy! Tim, the lad's on his way to the lodge alone and Brandon's planned it!"

No need for more words, then! On went Martin's jacket. From a corner he snatched snowshoes and a pair for Tim.

"We'll go," he said to Dawn. "You tell Buller—"

"But I'm going, too!" the girl cried sharply. "I'm going. Oh, hurry, Tim! We may be too late, now!"

They crossed the railroad tracks at a run, put on their snowshoes and with Jeffers breaking trail, entered the timber. Another had gone that way today, a man whose heart burned and sang. Dawn had sent for him; Dawn wanted him!

Entering the office while Martin was in the mill his eyes had encountered Dawn's note. No thought of how it came to be there presented itself. The quick conclusion at which he arrived was that Dawn and others had gone to Antler Lodge; that was where the shot had been fired which sent Sam Faxson to his death. Perhaps Able had taken Dawn there. Hastily, he took his snowshoes and departed.

The distance was a good five miles, however, and part of the going was in soft footing. So it was nearly two hours after his start that he came in sight of the building on the high bank of the Mad Woman.

"Dawn!" he called loudly as he shoved open the door. "Hello, who's here—"

He had crossed the threshold, peering into the gloom, a sudden and cold misgiving sweeping him. "Turn back; withdraw!" a small voice warned but before he could gather himself a blow struck him and he went down under a heavy, living weight.

But as Elliott went down, with his assailant on top, he drew his knees upward, bowed his back and with a trick of rough-and-tumble fighting used the very impact which had floored him to toss the man on beyond.

He heard him curse, saw the other turn as he pitched across the floor and scrambled to his feet.

"Brandon!" he cried hoarsely as a savage joy swept him.

Brandon did not speak. He rushed with head lowered. Great arms wrapped Ben's body, a head drove into the pit of his stomach, driving the breath from his body.

He fell to the floor fighting, but his blows were weak, ineffective. A hand clutched at his throat and he tore at it with all his strength. The fingers shut down on the windpipe and he writhed under that agony, summoning all his courage, all his will to break free, to outlast that strangling pressure. But he could not do it. He went numb; his brain clouded. He lay still and then after a time, sweet air poured again into his lungs.

That was all of which he was aware for a long interval: air, bathing his tortured chest. Air, which had been denied him by the strangling grip of a man's hand.

That thought burned away the haze which enveloped him and he started to throw himself over, to rise, to be up and fighting. But he found that he was unable to move.

His hands were stretched out above his head; a harsh bond held each wrist helpless. He tried to kick and failed. His feet were locked together and held there as by a great weight.

Footsteps, then, came across the floor, and Nicholas Brandon looked down at him in the dim light, a whisky bottle in his hand, swaying a bit on unsteady feet.

"So!" he grunted and laughed. "So you fell for it! So you followed your blessed Dawn, eh?" He went off into a tantrum of crazy laughter.

Ben twisted slowly against his bonds and discovered that the rope which bound him was wet. He could no more free himself without aid than he could hope to fly.

"It worked!" Brandon cried. "G—d, how it worked! 'Dawn!' you yelled like a fool, standing outside there. 'Dawn!' . . . And then stepped into my trap, eh?"

He sat heavily in a chair.

"It all worked, even to the weather! You came alone. It's starting to snow. Nobody's nearer than the Hoot Owl and the smoke of a burning camp wouldn't be seen twenty rods a day like this."

He leered.

Smoke of a burning camp! Ben's racing thoughts connected that idea with the odor which filled the room. . . . His fingers felt the strands of hemp that stretched from his wrists to the posts of bunks against the wall. Surely the rope had been soaked in kerosene. So it was Brandon's intent to leave him tied helpless, to fire the building. . . . Then his mind centered on thwarting the scheme of this ruthless man gone wholly mad. . . .

"Yeah. It worked . . . so far," he replied, and grinned.

Brandon snorted in contempt.

"So far, yes; and on to the end, it'll work. You're tied fast, aren't you?"—leaning low so Ben could see the cruel lights in his eyes. "You're tied hand and foot! I'll touch the camp off. You'll roast . . . because this old camp'll burn like h—l itself! They'll find your bones here; they'll find an empty whisky bottle. That's all they'll find."

Brandon had schemed competently: no detail which would implicate him seemed to have been overlooked. Still, fear did not manifest itself in Elliott's heart; only contempt was there for a man so merciless. Contempt and a stout determination to stall for time.

"You're smart, Brandon," he said. "I'll admit that. The plan's so good I'm surprised that you overlooked a bet."

The other turned sharply.

"A bet?" he cursed derisively. "What d'you mean, a bet?"

"A little thing. A thing almost anybody might overlook. But it's bound to come to light if I don't show up, and one murder charge's as good as another. I'm talking about a letter Don Stuart wrote me just before he died."

"It's a lie! Whatever he wrote was a lie!" Brandon's cry was shrill. "He was a drunken, lying bum! Lies can't hurt me, you fool. Plotting and scheming, were you, to drag that old case up and try to turn it against me? And basing it all on the death-bed ravings of—

"Stuart didn't know! He knew nothing, I tell you! He wasn't even here! He took Faxson's word for it and even Faxson didn't know. He was asleep in that room right there"—pointing—"and he came out while we were talking and Mac went crazy and—"

Elliott could not restrain the impulse to laugh in a wild shout of triumph.

"While we were talking! So that's it! And you've sworn that you weren't here that night! And you were here after all!"

"I wasn't here. . . . I wasn't here. . . . Wasn't here, I tell you. . . . And McManus won't dare come back, with a warrant waiting. . . . He won't dare . . . won't dare. . . ."

"So you admit, as the rest of us now know, that McManus didn't throw himself into the river that night, eh? So you admit he still lives, do you?"

"Admit nothing . . . nothing. . . . He's a murderer, I tell you. . . . And I wasn't here . . . He's a murderer, I tell you. . . . And I wasn't here . . . wasn't here. ' . ."

He rubbed his palms together, looking about dully, like some hunted, haunted thing. . . .

And back to the northward three people came through the darkening forest on Elliott's trail, bending low against the mounting storm. Two men were ahead, beating down a track for the girl who followed, pleading with them now and again for more speed.

Ben watched Brandon narrowly. The man's mind, under the influence of the whisky he had taken to goad himself to go through with his murderous plan, and beneath the shock of Elliott's fortunate shot in the dark, was cracking. Ben needed time, now; he spoke:

"I've a proposition, Brandon. How'd you like to trade? How'd you like to have Stuart's letter for, say, the use of my hands and feet for a minute?"

Brandon come slowly close and leaned over him.

"Mean that? Where is it?"—craftily.

"My affair." Even then, he could feel the bill-fold in his breeches pocket where old Don's letter reposed. "What d' you say?"

Brandon's fingers plucked at his lips.

"For the letter. And for word of McManus, I might, Elliott. I might trade your liberty for—"

He checked himself with a grunt as if realizing that he had by his own words placed himself completely in Elliott's hands.

"To h—l with you and your questions!" Brandon snarled, straightening. "To h—l with you, Elliott! I'm not afraid of lies and McManus was so drunk he never knew what happened!

"They'll find your bones," he growled between teeth which remained clamped to still their rattling, "They'll find . . . after a while . . . your rotten bones."

From beneath the sink he dragged an oil can and sloshed its contents along the walls, across the floor, over Ben's body until Elliott lay in a pool of inflammable liquid.

"You crossed me!" Brandon cried, digging into a pocket. "From the moment you hit town, you did what no one else had dared do! You kept it up, turning them against me, slipping through every trap I set!" He found the match for which he searched. "But you sealed your doom when you took me on, Elliott!" The match flared.

"It's over now, you fool! It's the trail Faxson took for you! Cross Nick Brandon? H—l. . . ."

He took one step to a pile of oil-drenched debris against the oil-soaked wall. He bent forward to apply his torch and stopped, as if frozen, hand extended.

A shout outside; a body crashed against the door. It burst open and Tim Jeffers plunged into the room. Behind him came Martin and as Dawn slid down the steep drift to the entry the burning curl of tinder dropped to the floor and Brandon whirled.

"Get him, Tim!" cried Ben. "Nail him! Don't give him a chance!"

With a muffled shout Martin and Jeffers flung themselves on Brandon as he charged for the doorway. He screamed. He fought frantically, but quickly they bore him down.

"Take that!" Tim's voice bellowed. "'Nd that! 'Nd that!" The sound of knuckles on flesh came with the words. . . . Curses, inarticulate shouts, and then Dawn's frantic voice:

"Ben, where are you?"

The struggling ceased suddenly, with a long, gagging sound from Brandon.

Tim rose, looked around the room and moved to where Elliott's prone figure showed indistinctly in the gloom.

"Well I'll be d—d!" he said. "Get up. . . . What? What's this?"

"Trussed up, Tim. Cut me loose. . . . Hurry! This is going to be a great party!"

A knife blade clicked open; the oil-soaked ropes parted. Ben lurched to his feet.

CHAPTER XIV

ABLE told Dawn of Ben's activity, watching her face narrowly because he understood the obstacle that was between these two. He saw hope come, followed by misgiving and trouble.

It was on Friday that Dawn left Tincup, striking across country far from the road toward Hoot Owl.

She was going to see Ben Elliott and tell him that she must see him now, that her heart could have no peace without him; that he must come to her and let her stand beside him while he pried into the past and attempted to make it give up truth.

Martin was alone in the office when she entered and started up so sharply at sight of her that the girl, in turn, was startled.

"I'm sorry!" she exclaimed a bit mystified. "Did I frighten you?"

"No. Not frightened. . . . My thoughts were . . . far from here."

"Is Ben about?"

"Haven't seen him since dinner. Don't know where he went."

Tim Jeffers, just down from camp, entered then.

"Where's Ben at?" he asked Martin.

"I don't know. Miss McManus, here, was just asking."

Martin moved to the old table Ben used for a desk.

"Sometimes he leaves a note for me when he's going away." He bent over the table, looking at the litter of papers on it. "No, he left no word. . . . Hum. . . . What's this?"

He picked up a slip of paper, read the single line inscribed on it and looked at Dawn.

"I didn't mean to pry. . . . Probably he's gone to meet you, though. This is a note for you."

"A note! Why, I . . ." Frowning, she took the paper and read: "Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon—Dawn."

"Why!" she cried. "I didn't . . . But I must have!" looking from one to the other. "That's my writing."

"Oh!" She let the paper flutter to the floor.

"I wrote that! I wrote that years ago!" she cried, struggling to speak distinctly. "I wrote that note for Mr. Brandon. . . . Years ago. . . . How did it get here? Who is calling Ben to the lodge?"

"What's this?" Tim Jeffers asked roughly. "Brandon? . . . Callin' Ben off alone?"

"Don't you see?" Martin cried and his voice was thick. "Dawn write it, all right. But he's sent it to Ben. . . . It's a decoy! Tim, the lad's on his way to the lodge alone and Brandon's planned it!"

No need for more words, then! On went Martin's jacket. From a corner he snatched snowshoes and a pair for Tim.

"We'll go," he said to Dawn. "You tell Buller—"

"But I'm going, too!" the girl cried sharply. "I'm going. Oh, hurry, Tim! We may be too late, now!"

They crossed the railroad tracks at a run, put on their snowshoes and with Jeffers breaking trail, entered the timber. Another had gone that way today, a man whose heart burned and sang. Dawn had sent for him; Dawn wanted him!

Entering the office while Martin was in the mill his eyes had encountered Dawn's note. No thought of how it came to be there presented itself. The quick conclusion at which he arrived was that Dawn and others had gone to Antler Lodge; that was where the shot had been fired which sent Sam Faxson to his death. Perhaps Able had taken Dawn there. Hastily, he took his snowshoes and departed.

The distance was a good five miles, however, and part of the going was in soft footing. So it was nearly two hours after his start that he came in sight of the building on the high bank of the Mad Woman.

"Dawn!" he called loudly as he shoved open the door. "Hello, who's here—"

He had crossed the threshold, peering into the gloom, a sudden and cold misgiving sweeping him. "Turn back; withdraw!" a small voice warned but before he could gather himself a blow struck him and he went down under a heavy, living weight.

But as Elliott went down, with his assailant on top, he drew his knees upward, bowed his back and with a trick of rough-and-tumble fighting used the very impact which had floored him to toss the man on beyond.

He heard him curse, saw the other turn as he pitched across the floor and scrambled to his feet.

"Brandon!" he cried hoarsely as a savage joy swept him.

Brandon did not speak. He rushed with head lowered. Great arms wrapped Ben's body, a head drove into the pit of his stomach, driving the breath from his body.

He fell to the floor fighting, but his blows were weak, ineffective. A hand clutched at his throat and he tore at it with all his strength. The fingers shut down on the windpipe and he writhed under that agony, summoning all his courage, all his will to break free, to outlast that strangling pressure. But he could not do it. He went numb; his brain clouded. He lay still and then after a time, sweet air poured again into his lungs.

That was all of which he was aware for a long interval: air, bathing his tortured chest. Air, which had been denied him by the strangling grip of a man's hand.

That thought burned away the haze which enveloped him and he started to throw himself over, to rise, to be up and fighting. But he found that he was unable to move.

His hands were stretched out above his head; a harsh bond held each wrist helpless. He tried to kick and failed. His feet were locked together and held there as by a great weight.

Footsteps, then, came across the floor, and Nicholas Brandon looked down at him in the dim light, a whisky bottle in his hand, swaying a bit on unsteady feet.

"So!" he grunted and laughed. "So you fell for it! So you followed your blessed Dawn, eh?" He went off into a tantrum of crazy laughter.

Ben twisted slowly against his bonds and discovered that the rope which bound him was wet. He could no more free himself without aid than he could hope to fly.

"It worked!" Brandon cried. "G—d, how it worked! 'Dawn!' you yelled like a fool, standing outside there. 'Dawn!' . . . And then stepped into my trap, eh?"

He sat heavily in a chair.

"It all worked, even to the weather! You came alone. It's starting to snow. Nobody's nearer than the Hoot Owl and the smoke of a burning camp wouldn't be seen twenty rods a day like this."

He leered.

Smoke of a burning camp! Ben's racing thoughts connected that idea with the odor which filled the room. . . . His fingers felt the strands of hemp that stretched from his wrists to the posts of bunks against the wall. Surely the rope had been soaked in kerosene. So it was Brandon's intent to leave him tied helpless, to fire the building. . . . Then his mind centered on thwarting the scheme of this ruthless man gone wholly mad. . . .

"Yeah. It worked . . . so far," he replied, and grinned.

Brandon snorted in contempt.

"So far, yes; and on to the end, it'll work. You're tied fast, aren't you?"—leaning low so Ben could see the cruel lights in his eyes. "You're tied hand and foot! I'll touch the camp off. You'll roast . . . because this old camp'll burn like h—l itself! They'll find your bones here; they'll find an empty whisky bottle. That's all they'll find."

Brandon had schemed competently: no detail which would implicate him seemed to have been overlooked. Still, fear did not manifest itself in Elliott's heart; only contempt was there for a man so merciless. Contempt and a stout determination to stall for time.

"You're smart, Brandon," he said. "I'll admit that. The plan's so good I'm surprised that you overlooked a bet."

The other turned sharply.

"A bet?" he cursed derisively. "What d'you mean, a bet?"

"A little thing. A thing almost anybody might overlook. But it's bound to come to light if I don't show up, and one murder charge's as good as another. I'm talking about a letter Don Stuart wrote me just before he died."

"It's a lie! Whatever he wrote was a lie!" Brandon's cry was shrill. "He was a drunken, lying bum! Lies can't hurt me, you fool. Plotting and scheming, were you, to drag that old case up and try to turn it against me? And basing it all on the death-bed ravings of—

"Stuart didn't know! He knew nothing, I tell you! He wasn't even here! He took Faxson's word for it and even Faxson didn't know. He was asleep in that room right there"—pointing—"and he came out while we were talking and Mac went crazy and—"

Elliott could not restrain the impulse to laugh in a wild shout of triumph.

"While we were talking! So that's it! And you've sworn that you weren't here that night! And you were here after all!"

"I wasn't here. . . . I wasn't here. . . . Wasn't here, I tell you. . . . And McManus won't dare come back, with a warrant waiting. . . . He won't dare . . . won't dare. . . ."

"So you admit, as the rest of us now know, that McManus didn't throw himself into the river that night, eh? So you admit he still lives, do you?"

"Admit nothing . . . nothing. . . . He's a murderer, I tell you. . . . And I wasn't here . . . He's a murderer, I tell you. . . . And I wasn't here . . . wasn't here. . . ."

MARSHALL CO. BD.

Another section on SAR B to connect with the Oslo road west of Argyle also will be graded up this year, although there are no plans for the immediate gravelling of the stretch. A number of gravelling jobs also are contemplated for various sections of the county this year. Completion of gravelling of CAR 1 south of Alma creamery, to connect with the Great Eastern is also planned by the county highway department, the road involved extending over a 3-mile stretch.

CAR 4, west from the Englund store, also will be gravelled this year, while CAR 2 will be given a single mile of gravel surfacing to connect present gravel on that highway with SAR 2 west of Argyle, and a 4-mile section of CAR 22 will also be gravelel near Middle River.

CAR 4, east of Stephen, also is to be regravelled for a distance of approximately seven miles. Bids for this and other projects referred to will be called for at the regular July meeting of the board with work to be completed by fall.

The new grading contracts let at Warren Tuesday, include the following highway sections:

CAR 15, north of March Siding, 4 miles, $2,083.09.

CAR 35, south of Ellerth Store, 4 miles, $3,023.77.

Car 29, west of Middle River, 2 miles, $1,509.63.

The total cost of grading projects awarded by the board has been announced as $5,516.63.

TRUCKERS MEET

County Attorney H. O. Berve called attention to the fact that there have been violations of the truck rate laws and that the problem should be to so equalize the rate structure that the truckers are not penalized. It is the duty of the commission as well as the county legal counsel to enforce the laws, he stated, and they must accept them as they find them, having no voice in the framing of them. He stated, however, that many of the truckers have complained that they are unable to procure copies of the classification schedules and suggested that the commission should see that these classifications are available to the truckers so that they may know into which classes the various kinds of freight fall.

Paul A. Harris, member of the Railroad Brotherhood's legislative Board, called attention to the fact that the truckers present had not presented any figures on labor costs, and that labor is an important item which the railroads are forced to consider. Many truckers are doing their own driving, he pointed out, and are not charging enough to give themselves the wages they should have in addition to the charges for gas, oil, and wear and tear of their equipment.

Commissioner Wefald summed up the meeting by saying that in fixing rates the commission notifies all parties concerned, and hold a hearing where shippers, railroads and other common carriers and truckers are represented. The rates decided upon by the commission, he stated, are fixed after due consideration of the claims and counter claims of the various parties represented. He assured the truckers he would make it his personal business to see that they get classification schedules if they would leave their names and addresses with the clerk, and invited them to come to the commission with their grievances so that they can be properly ironed out. He would report to the commission that this meeting of truckers and shippers agreed to abide by the rates, classifications and laws which govern their business, and that if they are not satisfied they will present their objections in the regular way, so that they may be heard and considered. "You must abide by the law," he stated, "and if there is anything that is not satisfactory you should petition the commission for revision."

Mr. Wefald was accompanied by Mr. Hendry, a transportation rate expert employed by the commission, and a stenographer.

Another section on SAR B to connect with the Oslo road west of Argyle also will be graded up this year, although there are no plans for the immediate gravelling of the stretch. A number of gravelling jobs also are contemplated for various sections of the county this year. Completion of gravelling of CAR 1 south of Alma creamery, to connect with the Great Eastern is also planned by the county highway department, the road involved extending over a 3-mile stretch.

CAR 4, west from the Englund store, also will be gravelled this year, while CAR 2 will be given a single mile of gravel surfacing to connect present gravel on that highway with SAR 2 west of Argyle, and a 4-mile section of CAR 22 will also be gravelel near Middle River.

CAR 4, east of Stephen, also is to be regravelled for a distance of approximately seven miles. Bids for this and other projects referred to will be called for at the regular July meeting of the board with work to be completed by fall.

The new grading contracts let at Warren Tuesday, include the following highway sections:

CAR 15, north of March Siding, 4 miles, $2,083.09.
CAR 35, south of Ellerth Store, 4 miles, $3,023.77.
Car 29, west of Middle River, 2 miles, $1,509.63.

The total cost of grading projects awarded by the board has been announced as $5,516.63.

TRUCKERS MEET

County Attorney H. O. Berve called attention to the fact that there have been violations of the truck rate laws and that the problem should be to so equalize the rate structure that the truckers are not penalized. It is the duty of the commission as well as the county legal counsel to enforce the laws, he stated, and they must accept them as they find them, having no voice in the framing of them. He stated, however, that many of the truckers have complained that they are unable to procure copies of the classification schedules and suggested that the commission should see that these classifications are available to the truckers so that they may know into which classes the various kinds of freight fall.

Paul A. Harris, member of the Railroad Brotherhood's legislative Board, called attention to the fact that the truckers present had not presented any figures on labor costs, and that labor is an important item which the railroads are forced to consider. Many truckers are doing their own driving, he pointed out, and are not charging enough to give themselves the wages they should have in addition to the charges for gas, oil, and wear and tear of their equipment.

Commissioner Wefald summed up the meeting by saying that in fixing rates the commission notifies all parties concerned, and hold a hearing where shippers, railroads and other common carriers and truckers are represented. The rates decided upon by the commission, he stated, are fixed after due consideration of the claims and counter claims of the various parties represented. He assured the truckers he would make it his personal business to see that they get classification schedules if they would leave their names and addresses with the clerk, and invited them to come to the commission with their grievances so that they can be properly ironed out. He would report to the commission that this meeting of truckers and shippers agreed to abide by the rates, classifications and laws which govern their business, and that if they are not satisfied they will present their objections in the regular way, so that they may be heard and considered. "You must abide by the law," he stated, "and if there is anything that is not satisfactory you should petition the commission for revision."

Mr. Wefald was accompanied by Mr. Hendry, a transportation rate expert employed by the commission, and a stenographer.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

IF YOU LIKE BASEBALL, BOOST YOUR TEAM BY ATTENDING THE GAMES

Thief River Falls has a splendid baseball team. We dare say that never before in the history of the city have we been accorded the privilege of witnessing such high class presentation of the national pastime as that displayed by the local aggregation during the past several weeks. Their showing against the House of David batsmen was remarkable and they have defeated two of the best semi-pro colored teams in the country.

However, we know that if this class of baseball is to be continued the fans will have to support it better than they did last Sunday, if those who have succeeded in locating this team here are not going to be forced to go down and pay a deficit. A poll of the stands last Sunday clearly demonstrated this fact.

We believe that a good ball club is an asset to the city. However, what we think doesn't make a great deal of difference, it is the attitude of the fans and their attendance that counts. Let us suggest that before the fans allow their apathy to drive good baseball out of town, that they go to the next game and get an old-fashioned thrill such as only a real ball game can give.

LIQUOR CRAZED MAN BEATS HIS DAD TO DEATH

Mike Quirk is Bound Over to October Term of Court When Arraigned

INQUEST HELD MONDAY

Slain Man, 76 Years Old Laid To Rest in St. Bernard Cemetery

Mike Quirk, 32-year-old farmer living eighteen miles southeast of this city, was arraigned in municipal court Tuesday and charged with second degree manslaughter in connection with the death of his father, William Quirk. The defendant was bound over to district court and the bond has not yet been set or furnished. The charge was made following the outcome of an inquest held Monday evening.

From testimony at the inquest it developed that the accused arrived at home intoxicated at about 9:30 p. m., Friday evening and an altercation started when the older Quirk ordered him off the place while in that condition. A hired man, Schenke, altho present during the altercation was incoherent as to the actual details, but stated that he saw the younger man beating and kicking his father while the latter was lying on the floor. He stated that he did not try to interfere except to admonish the assailant. He left the house and hid in the barn, he stated, when the accused also threatened him. Another man, Al Walker, also witnessed a part of the fight.

The accused arrived on the place in company with his wife and Mrs. Wetch, a sister, who was driving the car. When the trouble started, Mrs. Quirk and Mrs. Wetch ran to the neighbors for help. Mrs. Quirk going to one place where she asked the men to go with her and stop the fight. Mrs. Wetch went to another farm and called the sheriff.

When the sheriff arrived he found the old man on a cot in a small room off the kitchen where the fight had taken place, and the younger man sitting on the edge of the cot. The assailant was taken into custody and the victim removed to a hospital where he died from his injuries on Saturday night.

The deceased, William Quirk, was 76 years old, and came here from Larimore in 1904 settling on a farm in Kratka township. He is survived by his wife, Mathilda Quirk, three daughters, Mrs. Helen Beste of Osakis, Mrs. Agnes Wetch of this city and Miss Margaret Quirk of Kratka. Mike Quirk is his only surviving son.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at the St. Bernard church and interment was made in St. Bernard cemetery.

LANGLIE AND GRONINGEN SEND HOMERS TO FENCE

Visitors Show High Class Ball. Two Neat Double Plays Feature Session

The Dekkomen tamed the Omaha Tigers last Sunday in a fast and clean game on the local diamond. The game started with both sides going out in one-two-three order in the first session and Heiberg on the mound for the Giants duplicated the performance in the first half of the second inning. Decier, hurling for the visitors, got into trouble when Dekko's cannonaders came to bat. M. Thordal got on with a grounder to first which the baseman muffed and before the spree was over the locals had hung the Tigers' hides on the fence to dry with 4 runs garnered from three hits coupled with three errors. The locals brought in onescore in each of the two next innings by heady playing and Langlie contributed a home run in the fifth. Groningen, peeved after having struck out twice at bat, nailed another home run over to the north fence in the sixth, sending H. Thordal in ahead of him. Easterling of the Tigers, not to be outdone, cracked one over to the fence in the eighth for four bases. The fracas ended with the locals taking home the bacon with a nine to four score.

PAULSON SPEAKS TO JUNIOR C.&C. THURS. EVENING

Mentions Plans for 25th Anniversary Celebration for Pennington County

About twenty-five young men gathered in the Florentine room of the Evelyn Hotel last Thursday evening for the third meeting of the newly formed Junior Civic and Commerce club.

O. C. Paulson, member of the senior organization, spoke in behalf of the older group and explained what the junior group could do to help make this city a better place for civic enterprises. He stressed particularly the plans for the proposed skating rink that is now being discussed and planned by the American Legion, Rotary club, and the Civic and Commerce Association. Mr. Paulson told the group they could either get behind some one phase of the building or they could work with the senior group and push for the whole project.

The opportunity which an organization of this kind had to help build a better community was cited and it was urged that the organization be built upon a solid foundation to preserve itself for posterity. Mr. Paulson also told of the need for a youth's organization in this city for a number of years.

Gorman Thompson, president of the group, expressed the appreciation of the body for the suggestions made by Mr. Paulson. Among the suggested projects was one for a fall celebration. This year marks the twenty-fifth year of existence of Pennington county and it is felt by civic bodies that a gigantic fall festival would be a fitting climax to the first 25 years of the county's severance from Red Lake county.

Members of the group were told to interest young people of this city in the new organization by Mr. Thompson and to bring them to the next meeting which will be held July 17th.

An invitation was extended to the Junior Civic and Commerce club to be the guests of the senior group at their next meeting, July 11th; the invitation was accepted and all members are planning to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Olson arrived the first part of this week from Minneapolis to attend the wedding of Mr. Olson's sister.

CAMPAIGN HAS CLOSE CONTESTS FOR BIG PRIZES

Sortedahl, Furan, Conklin are Returned Winners of the 1st, 2nd aud 3rd

MAILING LIST SHOWS ENORMOUS GROWTH

Mrs. Mayer-Oakes, A. Ecklund And Gilbert A. Brattland Tabulate Returns

The Forum Good Will Subscription contest closed at noon Saturday. And after the campaign manager had completed his final report the judges, Mrs. Mayer-Oakes and Adolph Ecklund and Gilbert Brattland, set to work to tabulate the returns. This work was completed at 6:30 p. m., and showed the condidates in the following standing: Mae Sortedahl of Red Lake Falls, first; Lars L. Furan, of this city, second; Agnes Conklin, of Holt, third; Jack Houfek, of this city, fourth; and Mrs. M. R. Levorson of this city, fifth.

After the announcement, however, Mrs. Levorson found that she had not been credited with as many votes as her work sheets indicated that she should have. She brought in her sheets and a careful check disclosed that on one of her reoprts she had failed to take credit for the full amount of the votes the work on that sheet indicated. The work sheets of all the candidates were thereupon carefully checked for any possible errors, but no other of any consequence was found. One of the judges, Mr. Brattland, was then called in again and he opened the ballot box and the ballots were checked back against the work sheets. An additional ballot covering the part of Mrs. Levorson's work which had not before been credited was added and the new totals run up. So close was the race that the new results reversed the standing of Jack Houfek and Mrs Levorson with H. W. Hicks runner-up. In order to be absolutely fair, the Forum decided to pay two fourth prizes, one to Levorson and one to Houfek. Hicks gets the fifth prize.

The final results are as follows: Sortedahl, first prize; Furan second Prize, Conklin, third prize; Levorson and Houfek each a fourth prize; and Hicks, fifth prize. Helen McDade of Highlandinfl Mrs. D. W. Ewing of St. Hilaire were close behind the leaders.

The Forum wishes to extend its sincere thanks to the judges and all others who participated so wholeheartedly in making this campaign a succcess. Our lists were increased almost 50 per cent.

Chalmers Urges Non-Swimmers to Enroll In Swimming Classes

Swimming classes are being conducted daily at Tindolph Park under the supervision of Don Chalmers, and according to the instructor there are 87 boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 18 registered in these classes. Mr. Chalmers stated that the cold weather has handicapped this week's program and has prevented many from enrolling. New classes will be organized every Monday so that everyone will have an opportunity to learn to swim this summer, Mr. Chalmers stated.

Water classes are being conducted with "water safety" as the objective, Mr. Chalmers states, as no one's life is safe when boating or bathing until he can actually swim and handle himself properly in the water. Water accidents, it was explained, very seldom occur with swimmers. He urges all persons unable to swim to take advantage of the opportunity which is now presented through the courtesy of the local Red Cross and the city's park board.

"WESTERN" NOVEL STRIKES NEW KEY

Author of "Winter Range" Adds Mystery Touch to Cowboy Yarn.

ALAN LE MAY

Alan LeMay, young master of "Western" fiction, whose latest thriller appears in the columns of this newspaper, brings to this virile type of American literature a fresh viewpoint and a roistering, picturesque style.

In "Winter Range" he achieves the unique accomplishment of combining a gun-smoking, hoof-beating tale of a cattle war with a fascinating mystery that rivals the technique of today's outstanding writers of "detective" stories. His gooseflesh suspense keeps the reader hanging on to the very last word.

LeMay, who makes his home in San Diego, Calif., numbers among his successes "Painted Ponies," "One of Us Is a Murderer," "Gunsight Trail," and "Thunder in the Dust." He is known for his contributions to Collier's, Cosmopolitan and the Saturday Evening Post. Now we invite you to seek adventure with him in "Winter Range." It will appear serially in this newspaper.

Starting this Week

Reports indicate that Pennsylvania's state-owned liquor stores have proved to be a flop, or a dud, or a wash-out. Basing estimates on returns to date it is estimated that the sales for the first 18 months will fall $100,000,000 below estimates.

INTERNATIONAL FISHING LICENSES BRING $5,530

Licensing of 80 comercial fishermen by the Division of Game and Fish relative to fishing operations on three Canadian boundary lakes resulted in the collection of fees amounting to $5,530 for this season, Erling Swenson, director of the Division, reported. Lake of the Woods leads in the number of commercial fishermen with 62, followed by Rainy with 13 and Namekan Lake with five.

In all, 120,000 feet of gill netting is under license, 90,000 in the Lake of the Woods, 20,000 in Rainy Lake and 10,000 in Namekan.

Lake of the Woods fisherman paid $4,730 for fishing privileges, with Rainy, $645, next, then Namekan Lake with $155 in license fee.

On the three lakes, 95 fyke nets were licensed, Director Swenson said.

Fishing operations are under way on the lakes with game wardens supervising the work. George Weaver is in charge of all commercial fishing activities for the division.

Relief Chiselers Refund $1,369; Campaign Active

St. Paul. — Relief chiseling doesn't pay in Minnesota. This became apparent with the announcement by L. P. Zimmerman, acting director of the SERA, that as a result of the anti-chiseling campaign launched by the SERA two months ago one county alone has refunded $1,369.68 and several convictions have been obtained by court action.

The refunded relief money came from St. Louis county where it was found that one relief client had a bank deposit of $1,800. Mr. Zimmerman pointed out that as a result of the campaign which has been carried out in every county of the state the relief "chiseling racket" has been held to a minimum.

"Pope county cut its case load 10 per cent," he said, "while in Ramsey county from 20 to 25 cases probably will be prosecuted and in Hennepin a thorough payroll check of virtually all payrolls has diminished the number of chiselers."

Water Conservation, Flood Control Program Progresses

Completion of one important dam and construction of another is reported by Walter S. Olson, director of the Division of Drainage and Waters, with water conservation and flood control as dual objectives.

A dam at Breckrenridge on the Red River is practically completed and work of building a dam on the Whetstone river near Ortonville is going forward. Both projects are under relief labor.

Approval of 12 dams in the Chipewa National Forest by Mr. Olson will result in construction by Civilian Conservation Corps workers.

Use of Gland Treatment To Be Topic of Discussion

St. Paul.—Medical quacks and fakers have been quick to seize upon the results of modern scientific research about the mysterious ductless glands of the body to lend magic and persuasion to the sale of worthless or dangerous pills.

The question, do the advertised gland extracts really restore youth and vitality must still be answered in the negative according to a bulletin on the subject issued by the Public Health Education Committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association.

There is no doubt in the minds of researchers, today, that the system of endocrine or ductless glands including the pituitary, the thyroid and parathyroids, the adrenals, the pancreas and the gonads, do very largely control the growth and sex developments of the body.

When these glands are disordered; when they pour out their secretions too fast into the body or when they provide less than the normal amount of the secretion, then physical and mental abnormalities or disease are likely to develop. Thus the giants and the dwarfs and the "fat women" of the circus are regarded as victims of gland disorders these days.

Just how to correct these disorders even with the use of extracts containing the vital elements of these glands which medical scientists have been able to provide in the last few years is still uncertain and the subject of study in many parts of the world, and there is no immediate likelihood that youth will be restored by them.

Some startling results have been achieved, as in the control of diabetes with insulin from the pancreas; but much yet remains to be discovered and an important section of program time at the 82nd annual meeting of the Minnesota State Medical Association to be held in Minneapolis June 24, 25 and 26 will be devoted to the subject.

One world famous exhibit and demonstration will show the dramatic effects upon five generations of white rats of the extract produced from another gland, the thymus, by Dr. Adolph Hanson of Fairbault. In the fifth and sixth generation these rats mature so rapidly that they are born with teeth and hair.

Dr. E. L. Sevringhaus of Madison, Wisconsin, will address the association on the use of endocrine extracts.

Boneheads Real Thing

Atlantic City, N. J.—Discovery of a new disease, "Boneheadedness," was announced here recently. A thickening of the skull in patches, it brings about many ailments such as excessive fattening of the shoulders and hips, bad headaches, frequent dizziness, muscular weakness, mental depression, dimness of vision, double vision and in the final stages invalidism and to some insanity.

The discovery was made within the last year by Sherwood Moore, M. D., professor of Radiology and director of the Edward Mallincrod Institute of Radiology at Washton University of Medicine in St. Louis.

Of 6,650 persons examined 229 had thick interior patches; ninety eight per cent of these were reported to be women. Dr. Moore found this definitely by examining 20,000 skull X-ray pictures.

The dog caught the largest fish taken in those parts this year, a 4 pound pickerel.

Can a Horse Hair Become a Snake?

John P. Tunrer, zoology instructor at the University of Minesota, is seriously considering the possibility of producing hair-less horses. It all came about in this way:

A St. Paul woman came to him yesterday with a thin wiggling thing in a bottle of water.

"Mr. Turner, this is a horse hair that turned into a snake. How did it happen?"

"Lady," said Mr. Turner. "This is a common hair worm." Apparently Mr. Turner has been approached on this so often that he was about to pull out his own hair.

"But," she went on. "I found some horse hair in some mulch and placed it in a bottle; people told me if I put it in water it would become a snake. I did and it is a snake."

Mr. Turner was heard muttering to himself for some time after. The eggs of the hair snake are deposited on the hair of a horse. When the hair becomes detached and immersed in water the eggs hatch. The hair snake consumes the hair, and you have a snake and no hair.

CITY OF BERLIN FINANCES FACING BREAKDOWN

Berlin (TIS—With the financial situation of the city of Berlin rapidly becoming desperate the municipal authorities have addressed an urgent appeal to the government requesting substantial help. The appeal is in the form of a secret memorandum and describes the financial difficulties in details. It confirms by implication that the recently published budget of the municipality is only a fake and intended to throw dust into the eyes of experienced observers.

The secret document proposes radical measures and warns that if these are not soon effected the city will be forced to suspend the payments of salaries and wages. Amongst the measures proposed is radical curtailment of the public transportation services. Some lines will be entirely dropped and service on many more will be limited. Dismissals are not yet contemplated for the time being. The employees will be forced, however, to work longer hours without wage compensations.

5,000-Acre Alfalfa Crop Is Assured By Limestone Project

St. Paul.—A 5,000 acre alfalfa crop on 500 southeastern Minnesota farms has been assured thru a limestone crushing project sponsored by the rural rehabilitation division of the SERA.

More than 10,000 tons of this soil rectifier have been ground and distributed, L. P. Zimmeman, acting director of the state relief administration, announced, providing work for approximately 400 men. This has provided ground limestone for at least 5,000 acres, he said, making an average of about 20 tons to the farm

The project is being carried on in seven counties under the direction of S. H. Rutford, director of rural rehabilitation. They are Fillmore, Houston, Mower, Dodge, Winona, Olmsted and Wabasha where each of the crushers is turning out from 50 to 100 tons daily at a cost of from 75 to 90 cents per ton. The hauling cost is about 5 cents per ton-mile.

570,000,000 Wall-eyed Pike Fry is Estimated

Although complete reports have not been received from all state-owned fish hatcheries, Dr. Thaddeus Surber, in charge of fish propagation activities for the Division of Game and Fish, estimated that 570,000,000 wall-eyed pike fry will be distributed in Minnesota's lakes this spring. This is an increase of 200,000,000 wall-eyed pike fry over 1934, Dr. Surber stated.

Distribution of trout fry is under way from the Glenwood and St. Peter state-owned hatcheries because the "water supply has not appreciably increased notwithstanding copious spring rains," Erling Swenson, division director. reported.

Adverse weather conditions were responsible for a below normal take of wall-eyed pike eggs at Redby. At Tower the number of wall-eyed pike eggs has been decreasing each year and the small amount of spawn obtained there this spring had ben anticipated. Other stations had unusual runs of superior quality wall-eyed pike.

A phenomenal run occurred out of Rainy Lake and Black bay up the Rat Root River and all records were broken before operations were halted because of high water.

"Weather conditions in May prolonged the hatch of wall-eyed pike fry to a greater extent than has ever been previously known," Dr. Surber said. "This condition was fortunate in one way in that it permitted fry distribution without overcrowding capacities which in many instances causes losses at the hatchery or in transit."

Coop. Bank Loan Policies Broadened

Important additional credit services are provided for farmers' cooperatives in the farm credit act of 1935 approved by President Roosevelt on June 3, it was announced by the St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives this week.

Under the new act farmer-owned cooperatives that purchase or furnish farm supplies for their members may now obtain loans for such purposes as erecting warehouses, or gasoline stations, or providing other facilities essential to their business. "Physical facility loans have not hitherto been available to cooperatives engaged in purchasing and furnishing farm supplies, but were made only to farm cooperatives engaged in marketing or processing farm products.

Another new provision authorizes the Banks for Cooperatives to make loans to farm cooperatives which furnish farm business services. The act also provides that the bank may make commodity loans which are secured by warehouse receipts, and that it may re-discount such loans with the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank.

About one-third of the loans made by the St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives have been "physical facility" loans, the volume of such loans up to the end of April being approximately $1,247,000 out of a total of $3,873,000.

The larger volume of its loans has ben made for marketing and for working capital and includes loans to dairies, cheese factories, grain elevators, fruit and vegetable canneries and similar cooperatives.

The present rate on "physical facility" loans is 4½ per cent and on working capital loans is 3 per cent. Each cooperative that obtains a commitment from the Bank for Cooperatives is required to purchase shares of stock in the bank.

Facility loans are usually made for period of 8 years or less and payments are usually made in monthly installments. Working capital loans for seasonal operations are drawn to fall due generally when the product marketed or processed is sold.

Farm Loan Ass'ns of Four States Hold Meet

Nearly 3000 secretary-treasurers and directors of National Farm Loan Associations in the 4 states of the 7th Farm Credit Administration district attended a series of meetings closed a few days ago and heard tentative suggestions for the consolidation or grouping of associations as part of a proposed plan for greater economy and efficiency advanced bythe Federal Land Bank of St. Paul.

Nineteen meetings were held in the states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota. Representatives of the Land Bank, including President Roy A. Nelson and George S. Gordhamer, executive vice president and treasurer, attended the meetings, which were so distributed as to provide for attendance by representatives of all the 730 associations in the district.

"The officials were pleased with the reception they received by the local association officers and with the large attendance," said Mr. Nelson. "The purpose of the meetings was to inform the local officials as to their responsibility in the operation of what is perhaps the largest agricultural financial cooperative organization in the world—the Federal Land Banks and Farm Loan associations. It is the established policy of the bank and in line with the policy of Farm Credit Adminis1rations in Washington to keep the members of the associations informed of the activities of the bank."

NAZIS BETRAY WORKERS IN WAGE STRUGGLE

Saarbruecken (TIS)—The value of labor coordination by the Nazis has again been demonstrated in a recent labor conflict at the mining enterprise "Burbacher Hutte." The workers asked for a raise of 15 pfenning per hour in compensation for the recent rise in the cost of living. The management offered a three pfenning increase and threatened to close the mine if its proposal was not accepted. The Nazi labor leader declared blusteringly that the work would then go on and the mine would be taken over by the Nazi party in the interest of the workers.

After lengthy negotiations, a compromise was reached in which the Nazi spokesman accepted a raise of 2.5 Pfenning, or less than the management had originally offered.

Lights Defecive on Half Of Cars Tested by Police

More than half of the automobiles on Minnesota highways have defective lights, while about 15 per cent have defective brakes, if 5,000 cars checked by the state highway patrol in the past two weeks are typical of the rest of motor vehicles, according to a highway department bulletin.

In view of these conditions, the patrol will continue its present intensive checking campaign until the whole state has ben covered. Return trips also will be made to localities already visited.

The patrol has issued a public warning that drivers will avoid trouble and expense, and at the same time will be aiding the cause of public safety, if they have their driver's license at all times on the road, and see that their brakes and lights are in first class condition. Several score of arrests have been made of persons driving without a license. The patrol also is making arrests for failure to have 1935 registration plates.

In the past two weeks, out of 3,978 cars given brake tests, 541 were defective. Of 1,151 cars given light tests, 664 were defective.

Historical Pageant at Itasca Park Sun. June 30

Historic scenes in Minnesota's early days, before she was admitted to statehood, hectic happenings in the fur-trading business when Minnesota was an integral part of the battleground between America's two leading fur companies, will be depicted in the 1935 Historical pageant which opens Sunday, June 30, at Itasco State park. The performance will be the first of 12 to be given thruout the summer at the various state parks in Minnesota.

Chief figures of this early Minnesota history include John Baptiste Cadotte, Henry Rowe Schoolcraft, Rev. William Boutwell, William A. Aitkin, Hester Crooks, and Joseph Renville, all colorful, intrepid characters whose valorous deeds went far toward establishing the then seething, riotous territory into a state governed by law and order.

The picturesque voyageur, with his odd dress: dark trousers, deerskin leggins, short shirt, blue capote, red woll cap, gaudy sash, gay beaded bag hanging from the sash, and the inevitable pipe, is faithfully portrayed in the pageant story.

Odd methods of trade which the white man employed: a stack of beaver pelts piled on the ground to equal the height of the gun the Indian wanted, soon became outmoded when the Indian discovered the true value between pelts and gun, and cash payment was established. And sometimes the pipe of peace was smoked with the same insincerity on the part of the red man and his white brother showed in barter, with the result that ambushes were so frequent they became almost monotonous (except to those directly involved), and skirmishes were so frequent they finally flared into open and prolonged warfare. Then the colonists moved in, and the Indian found himself gradually, but surely, moving out.

So goes the story of the 1935 Minnesota historical pageant, which opens Sunday, June 30, at Itasca State park, repeats there on July 14, and proceeds to Whitewater park a week later, where history will be given another chance to repeat itself, on July 21. More than 200, including 50 Chippewa Indians from the White Earth reservation, take part. Presentations at Jay Cooke and Fort Ridgely parks will be held during the month of August.

Gentlemen Farmers In Washington Trek

Washington.—What kind of a "march on Washington" was that of the 4,000 farmers who converged on the capital to boost the AAA amendments? It was greeted by frankly sceptical and rather puzzled reporters. Hunger marches of unemployed, bonus marches of needy veterans, poverty-stricken farmers and sharecroppers coming to tell their bitter plight—all of these have made themselves familiar to Washington. But the farmers coming to boost the AAA were certainly not here on any hunger march.

Charging that county agents and jobholders probably played a leading part in organizing the demonstration, farmers' representatives contrasted its monied luxury with the hardships which delegations of the poorer working farmers have had to endure to bring their demands to Washington.

Not a March But a Ride

When some 500 farmers came to the capital in support of the Frazier-Lemke bill and similar farm legislation, they had to put up in tourist camps and the cheapest lodgings, and many of them went short on their meals. But the pro-AAA farmers stayed at expensive hotels and in Pullmans, it was pointed out.

"Are you going to march on the Capitol?" one of them was asked.

"Hell, no," he replied, "We'll ride there."

In Pullman cars they came from distant Iowa and the Dakotas, in special trains from Texas and southern states.

Hunger marchers were made to sleep on a bleak hillside and on a concrete highway. The Bonus marchers had to camp on the flats of Anacostia or in flophouses.

Who Pays Cost?

"Who is putting up all this dough?" the reporters kept asking. "Who's organizing this, anyhow?"

"We're paying our own way" the farmers' leaders replied. "The neighbors just gathered together and put a dollar or so apiece into the pot, to send us here."

The reporters grinned and winked and were unconvinced.

One Minnesota farmer said openly that he had been solicited by his county agent and promised remuneration equal to his expenses, but he had refused to participate in the "march."

The AAA was pestered with inquiries, until its officials got quite peevish. "This is not our show, we know very little about it," they kept repeating.

A few weeks before, a delegation of the neediest farmers, from drought-stricken, dust-swept areas, had been in Washington denouncing the AAA for aiding the rich farmers and middlemen at the expense of the poor.

Were Different Type

These were certainly a different breed of farmers from those who had come before. These had hired men to whom they could leave the work while they went to Washington. Most of them were rather vague about the AAA amendments which they came to boost.

When unemployed and needy veterans first made their marches on Washington, they started something. Members of Congress who before had thought themselves safely shut off from the miseries and demands of their poorer constituents, suddenly found these miseries and these demands following them right into the carpeted seclusion of their Capitol offices.

WE EXTEND OUR THANKS TO CANDIDATES AND FRIENDS

The Forum's Good Will circulation campaign is closed, and the publisher wishes to take this opportunity of thanking the public for its generous response with renewals and new subscriptions. Our list has grown by nearly fifty per cent while the old list was brought almost 100 per cent in advance.

To the candidates we want to extend our heartiest thanks for the wonderful work they did. All of them worked hard and conscientiously and brought in a fine amount of business. We are only sorry that there could not be a prize for each of them. The missionary work they have done for the Forum cannot be computed in dollars and cents. They have contacted people that could not be reached in any other way and convinced them that the Forum truly has the welfare of the people at heart and hews to the line for clean and efficient government.

Some of the reports that have been brought to this office of falsehoods which have been disseminated by politicians whose rule or ruin racket is threatened by the Forum, are almost unbelieveable. In one community where we have had no readers in the past we found that people who have never read the Forum had ben led to believe that it is a "wet paper" and "in league with the underworld." When the condidate showed by the Forum files that it has consistently fought the liquor traffic and the underworld and has never carried a beer, liquor or cigarette advertisement, that community subscribed to the Forum nearly one hundred per cent.

We extend our thanks and congratulations to the Nickeson Circulation Service for having conducted a fair and clean campaign. It may be(perhaps, that the campaign did not gross as high as they, and we had hoped for, but we are satisfied that it has added thousands of new readers, has enhanced the prestige of the paper and has been financially successful. In addition to his fee, Mr. Nickeson has the satisfaction of knowing that he has conducted a really "Good Will' campaign.

For the benefit of our thousands of new readers, we renew our covenant with our subscribers and advertisers: We shall endeavor to give you as big and newsy a paper as our resources and equipment will permit; we shall continue to give you a clean, liberal newspaper; We shall continue to fight for the rights of the producing class; the farmers and the workers, fearlessly, as our ability permits us to see those rights; We shall continue to refuse advertising space in our columns to products which we know are detrimental to the health and well-being of the people.

AGAIN WE THANK YOU, ONE AND ALL.

WHY ARE WE FARMER-LABOR?

There appears to be a concerted effort on the part of some of the Farmer-Labor Press to swing the Farmer-Labor forces behind Roosevelt and the democratic machine in the 1936 elections. The latest offender in this line is the Mille Lacs County Times. Like the Country Press of Moorhead, it seems to believe that the Farmer-Laborites should support Roosevelt, and oppose the formation of a national third party.

We do not question their sincerity as Farmer-Laborites, but we do ask them to stop for one moment and analyze their motives when they make these suggestions.

If we are Farmer-Labor because we have in its organization a powerful machine that can with certain manipulation be made to function as an excellent job getting agency for those who would feed at the public trough, then by all means let us affiliate with Roosevelt and the Democrats, for they have proven that as creators of boards, commissions, bureaus, authorities and what not, they have no parallel in history. No doubt they will set up nice little apartments for some of our patronage seeking friends. But, let us remember that the union will at the best be the illegitimate affair of the streetwalking hussy, for Roosevelt and the Democrats are definitely wedded to Capital. Let those who believe thtat being a bobbed tail to be wagged by a democratic dog has its advantages read up on their history and consider the fate of the People's Party. It too, at one time, thought it might be expedient to be the democrat's mistress in return for bed and breakfast.

On the other hand; if we are Farmer-Laborites because we believe in the principles which our organization has enunciated; if we believe what we said in the preamble to our 1934 platform, that "Capitalism has failed and immediate steps must be taken by the people to abolish capitalism in a peaceful and lawful manner and that a new sane and just society must be established," then we have nothing in common with Mr. Roosevelt and the Democratic Party, for they are definitely opposed to changing the economic system and establishing the Cooperative Commonwealth. Their every effort is devoted toward easing distress as far as that can be done without offending the organized financial powers, until such time as business can again return to what they term normal.

As Farmer-Laborites we know that what Republicans and Democrats refer to as Normalcy and Prosperity is merely another wild ride and the inevitable crash into the ditch of depression. As Farmer-Laborites we want to advance the Co-operative Commonwealth with an opportunity for all to contribute their share of the world's labor and in return enjoy social security and their share of the world's wealth. That means that we must provide the organization and the candidates so that the people can thru the exercise of their franchise "take immediate steps to abolish capitalism and establish a sane and just society in a peaceful and lawful manner." A national third party is the only way this can be accomplished. Let us stop playing possum with Roosevelt's fleshpots and get at the work.

PETTY TECHNICALITIES
(St. Paul Daily News)

Even if the charges against Governor Olson had been substantiated there would have been slight excuse to remove him from office.

The man who framed the corrupt practices act never intended that flimsy technicalities would be invoked because of private enmity or political motives.

The complaint charged that Gov. Olson was one of the owners of the Minnesota Leader because he belonged to the Farmer-Labor association, which controls the paper, and that he had failed to make this known, thereby violating the law. It was also charged that he had not included donated radio time in his list of campaign expenditures.

This is a democracy in which the will of the majority rules. The way to defeat Gov. Olson, if the people don't want him, is at the polls, not in a courtroom through petty and childish accusations.

Judge H. D. Dickinson of Hennepin county district court was quite right in dismissing the action.

FARMER'S SHARE OF CONSUMER'S DOLLAR
(Minnesota Leader)

A correspondent asks how much of the consumer dollar reaches the farmer for products produced by him. The answer is that a smaller share goes to the farmer now than at any time in the 20 years before the 1929 crisis. This estimate is made by the Consumer's Guide, published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and is based on the cost of 10 important foods since 1910.

From 1910 to 1914 the farmers received 53.6 per cent of the consumer's dollar. From 1915 to 1920 the farmer's share amounted to 61.5 per cent. Then it went down to about 50 per cent, where it remained for the next nine years, until 1929.

Then the farmer's share began to drop—but not the share claimed by the processor and distributor. By 1932 the farmer's "bit" had dropped to 34.9 per cent, the lowest in 22 years. In February of this year it had mounted to 45.6 per cent, still below any period since 1910.

GROWING DICTATORSHIP
(Mandan, N. D., Pioneer)

What is becoming of the constitution given right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness"? We sorely need a modern Rienzi to awaken us to the fact that we are ruled by a "horde of petty tyrants," to arouse us to the danger of our rights as American citizens, our rights to peaceful possession of property, sapped by one after another of iniquitous laws passed by a spineless lot of legislators who are transforming our democracy into a dictatorship, into a political octopus whose tentacles reaching out in a hundred directions are drawing the life blood of America into a reservoir controlled by venal political organizations.

THE CONSTITUTION AND LOCOMOTIVES
(Minnesota Leader)

The Constitution of the United States of America was adopted on Sept. 24, 1787. It was not until nearly a third of a century later, on Oct. 23, 1824, that the first locomotive actually pulled a train of cars. It is no reflection on the framers of the Constitution that they had never seen a locomotive, perhaps had never dreamed of one. They were brilliant men with keen minds. But they had no conception of the America of today and in many respects the magnificent Constitution they drew up no more fits present-day conditions and problems than the ox cart or stage coach could serve today's transportation problems.

There is point and wisdom therefore in the proposal by progressive Congressmen, headed by Ernest Lundeen, Farmer-Labor, that state legislatures be urged to initiate a call for a Constitutional convention to re-write, bring up to date and submit to the people for their approval a new Constitution fitted for the age of locomotives, airplanes and industrial development of the cobbler's bench to the trustified shoemaking industry of today.

President Roosevelt says that the Supreme Courts interpretation of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution took the nation back "to the horse and buggy age." He might have gone farther and said that except for a few amendments the greatest nation in the world is operating under a Constitution adopted in the days of the ox cart.

It is not more possible successfully to put new wine into Biblical old bottles than properly to govern a 1935 industrial nation within the confines of a Constitution adopted in the year 1787.

TIMES CHANGE
(Pope Co. Tribune)

It is only a few years ago that it was practically as hard to find a democrat in this part of the state as to find a needle in a haystack. Glenwood had one real democrat in the name of John R. Serrin who never tried to hide his colors. That was about all. The republicans used to dominate this part of the state and they were not afraid to show their colors. Republican rallys were held frequently and everywhere. Now it is just about impossible to find anyone that admits that she or he is a republican while democrats are as numerous as sand on a sea shore.. At the rally held at Alexandria the other night close to one hundred so-called democrats sat down for a banquet. All were loud in their praises of the democrats and were proud to be in democratic company.

Just how long the situation is going to last is a matter of conjecture. Will the tables turn again and the democrats become as scarce as they once were? Will both the old parties disappear and a new party arrive to take their place?

THE JOBS ARE SECURE
(Red Wing Eagle)

The jobs of the chair warmers who have been directing the affairs of the NRA are secure. They are to be retained, "for the most part," to gather data as to how the nation progressed under the NRA and how it progresses without the NRA. That is the President's decree. Like all bureaucratic attempts at government, we get the bureaus as everlasting appendages, whether we continue the duties of the bureaus or not.

HISTORIC WARNINGS
(Alexandria Echo)

President Roosevelt's indignation against the high court seems to have been tempered by the fact that the late Teddy Roosevelt and the late Senator LaFollette both lost elections based on this very proposition of clipping the wings of the supreme court.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

Millions of people were led to believe that repeal of the 18th amendment would bring about much improved conditions with regard to law enforcement and law observance. But such has not been the case, for it is being forcibly demonstrated day by day that not only is there no improvement, but conditions are becoming worse daily.

The promised revenue from the sale of liquors has not materialized, but bootlegging, which it was promised would be abolished, has increased.

The frightful scourges of crime, kidnappings, lynchings and murders have daily increased since repeal.

In fact, the Repealists themselves have become so alarmed at what they have brought upon the country ,that the latest move on their part is to organize " A Council for Moderation." This newest wet organization held a dinner in New York, on May 2, addressed by Mrs. John S. Sheppard and Nicholas Murray Butler, both well known wets.

Suicide is the Quickest Way Out

(By Chas. D. Egley, Mgr., Farmers Union Livestock Com., So. St.Paul.)

Several years ago my father and I were standing in the Union Depot in St. Louis, Mo. St. Louis is larger than St. Paul and Minneapolis put together, and with all trains coming into one depot it makes quite an accumulation of people there at times. And that happened to be the case at this particular time.

Somehow I got a kick out of just looking at people. Or maybe it was just looking at the girls. Anyhow after looking at them for a while I turned to my father and said: "There certainly are a lot of different kinds of people in the world. Tall and small. Fat and lean. No two look alike.'

"Yes," my father answered, "there are a lot of different kinds of people in the world. But they all have an identical problem. That of making a living."

And I am sure every one of my readers is confronted with that same problem. .And isn't it paradoxical—I don't know just what that word means but hope it fits alright.—isn't it paradoxical that the more efficient we get in the means of production the harder it seems for people to make a living?

Now there are folks who believe that there isn't any need for all of this suffering in the midst of plenty. That there isn't any sense to it. That those things don't just have to be. That something can be done about it. But that that something must be done by the exploited classes—farmers and workers—themselves. The beneficiaries under the present economic system are not going to change it FOR us. Santa Claus will not do it FOR us.

Now so far as our life on this earth is concerned I suggest that the quickest way to solve this problem is to commit suicide, and daily newspapers show that an increasing number of people are accepting this suggestion of mine. However, by far the majority of people seem to want to live in this land of deprivation. I don't know why. I asked a man once, "Why," and he said, "The only reason I want to live is to see what the h—— will happen next. Things are happening awful fast."

Now if you insist on living you have to have food, clothing and shelter. That is called wealth, and is the only real wealth. Many people feel that in a country capable of producing too much of everything they should have more than just a bare existence. Our homes should be equipped with the modern conveniences—electricity, bath, furnace. That our children should have at least a college education. Even a farmer should have a couple weeks vacation per year to make a trip to California one year, Florida the next. And in a life time at least one trip around the world.

That means work. The only way this wealth can be produced is to roll up your sleeves. The farmer carefully prepares the soil, selects the seed and cultivates the growing crop. He then sends his raw material to the factory where the worker makes the sausages, tans the hides, and makes the shoes, mills the flour and bakes the bread, spins the wool or cotton, knits the cloth and makes the clothes.

Now in the production of these products, from the raw material to the finished product, the farmer and laborer is quite efficient. And willing. But in the distribution of these products to the consumer—and by that time the producer, the farmer and worker, ceases to be a producer but becomes a consumer—in distributing these products back to the producer who has become a consumer, we have fallen down completely, woefully. We permit the use of an economic system that makes it impossible for the producer to buy back the finished product when he becomes a consumer.

Now the method employed in production and distribution is known as an economic system. As a social order. .The economic system now in use is known as the capitalist system, or profit system. .Before the profit system was born and developed we had a different social order which was known as Feudalism. Under the capitalist or profit system we have made wonderful strides in production, but have failed almost completely in distribution.

The reason we have failed in distribution, in my opinion, is because the profit system is based on exploitation. And so long as we have an economic system based on exploitation somebody is going to be exploited. A man who makes a profit receives in pay for the things he produces more than they are honestly worth. He receives something over and above decent wages. And if one man receives too much—gets more than the things he produces are worth—then somebody else must get less. Hence, the rich get richer and the poor poorer.

I propose, therefore, that we build a new social order—the co-operative .system — where business is done just opposite to the capitalist or profit system. The capitalist system is based on private ownership. The cooperative system is based on collective ownership. The capitalist system permits stock to vote, the co-operative system permits man to vote—one man one vote. The capitalist system pays stock and dividends, the cooperative system pays patronage dividends. The capitalist system therefore, concentrates wealth, the cooperative system decentralizes wealth.

Vacation in the Ozarks

Some day I'm going to the Ozarks, particularly to Mena, Arkansas, where the famous Commonwealth College is located. That is the place where students work out part of their tuition, wear overalls to classes, and plan their own courses. A two-months' summer session beginning July 1 has just been announced. Among the lecturers secured for the courses to be treated are such writers as Charles J. Finger, John Gould Fletcher, James T. Farrell, Jack Conroy, and Ben Botkin, and such labor workers as Ward Rodgers, Bill Reich, and Ella Reeve Bloor. These people are known in radical and liberal circles as masters in their lines, consequently they should have something interesting to say. Although Commonwealth college is avowedly liberal in policy, its liberalism is not the narrow sort which bars discussion of radicalism and revolutionary activities. That is one reason why I am going there. Another reason is that the college offers a course in outdoor activities which is too often lacking in college curricula.

One Who Resisted War

No matter what his motives were, Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, draft-dodger of 1917 days, now elicits a grudging admiration for his firmness (or obstinacy) in refusing to answer the summons of the war-drums. His wife is now in this country working for a full pardon for her husband. We have only a shameful memory of how he was pursued from country to country, hounded for years after the war ceased. Only a few years ago, a couple of ex-service men attempted to kidnap him in Germany and bring him back to the U. S. to stand trial. Some of us should see the irrationality of such a proceeding. One man refuses to fight another man's war, and is hounded to death; another man makes millions of war profits from that same war, and suffers only a slight attack of congressional investigation. True patriotism requires that we act more like Bergdoll and less like the blind fools who answered the war summons.

The New Deal and the Workers

Now that it is practically over, various agencies are summing up the good done to the working class by the NRA. An A.F. of L. survey reveals that, while wages have gone up some, living costs have gone up more, resulting in a reduction of six per cent in real wages, at the least. Unemployment has been officially reduced; but millions on relief will testify that their condition is not much better than that of the unemployed. The reason for this is that only fifteen per cent of the total spent by the New Deal was used for relief. The rest went as loans to banks, railroads, etc., and for war preparations.

Some things were accomplished. however. Six million pigs and seven million cattle were slaughtered, and about two million sharecroppers and tenants were driven off the land. Dividends and interest payments have increased fifty per cent over the 1926 high, although payrolls were 40 per cent lower and production was only two-thirds that of 1936. Certain lines of merchandise (cigarettes, for example) have been veritable gold mines for the manufacturers, for while production costs have been driven down, the selling price remained the same.

Verily, the New Deal accomplished wonders, and for that reason, could not be expected to last.

USURY DEVOURS THE NATION
By S. O. Sanderson

Interest on U. S. Bonds is the world's greatest usury racket.

From 1900 til 1917 the average rate of interest on U. S. Bonds was $19.72 per $1000, or less than 2 per cent on an average debt of $1.276,000,000.

The average rate from 1918 til 1931 had increased to $39.46 per $1000, or very nearly 4 per cent on an average debt of nearly twenty billion dollars.

On March 1, 1935, the Public Debt stood at $28,525,994,303.30.

The total amount of interest paid on the public debt from 1900 til 1917 was $453,000,000, while the total interest paid from June 30, 1917 til March 1, 1935 amounts to the huge sum of $13,514,944,272.20 or very nearly thirty times as much for a shorter period of time.

Changed into gold coins, this interest money would load 638 freight cars with 64,000 lbs. each, and leave eleven million dollars for pocket change.

On a percapita basis, this interest amounts to less than $4 for the period from 1900 til 1917, while from 1918 til 1935 it amounts to $111 for every man, woman and child, or $777 for a couple with five children.

The real sad part, however, of this tragic system, is that this huge interest burden must come out of the meager earnings of the men and women who toil and produce the wealth of the nation, and whose children must go hungry and ill clad in order to pay usury to the Money Changers.

President Roosevelt has failed us by not using his power to issue currency instead of bonds.

Therefore it is now up to the Common people to demand of Congress that action be taken now on this all-important matter.

Write your Congressman and Senator today and urge the issuance of currency instead of bonds.

THE LIUOR PROBLEM A GENERATION AGO
By W. G. Calderwood

—O—

Forty-one years ago the village of Balclutha in New Zealand went dry under the banish-the-bar law, similar to local option in America. Arrests for all offenses declined from 292 in the last wet year. to 12 for the first year without bars. The arrests chargeable to drinking were reduced more than 66 per cent.

Ashburton, one of the medium-size cities of the islands, soon followed, and witnessed a reduction of 74 per cent in drunkenness, 71 per cent in crime against the person, and 64 per cent in all offenses.

In Oamaru, another middle-size city the results were even more striking, arrests for drunkenness showing a decline of 84 per cent, and the records of arrests for other causes show proportional decreases.

In 1926 Chinemuri, a small city which had been dry, returned to license with the result that convictions for drunkenness increased 275.0 per cent, assaults, and other offenses against the person, 129.5 per cent, and miscellaneous offenses, 113.6 per cent.

These results run parallel with the experience of American cities under local option. Seventeen cities in West Virginia serve as an illustration. Arrests for drunkenness dropped from 8,853 during the wet year to 2,973 during the dry, or a decrease of 66 per cent, while arrests for all causes declined 52 per cent.

On June 21, 1889, after local option had been in effect in Atlanta, Georgia, for several years, the Atlanta Constitution, a leading daily of that city said, editorially: "Prohibition in this city does prohibit. The law is observed as well as the law against carrying concealed weapons, gambling, theft and other like offenses."

After the repeal of local option in Raleigh, N. C., in 1888 a local paper exclaimed editorially:

"God only knows the fearful results of the reopening of the barrooms. There is at least five times more drunkenness and commensurate with the increase of drinking and drunkenness, is the increase of wickedness and crime."

To make vice convenient and respectable is no remedy for it.

Minute Sermon
By Dr. Crawford Grays

Humanity is a multitude, lost in materialistic pursuit, knowing not which way to go nor in whom to believe or trust. Humanity is seeking life and hundreds of depraved influences are offering "life for sale" and hordes of the misguided and "try anything once" type make a try, only to discover they bought ashes instead of life.

There are a few who have found the Way but few there be who want to follow. The path of least resistance and an immediate "good time" is mostly what the herd desires.

Humanity is bitter with disappointment yet seeks to drown the bitterness yielding to alluring diversion the foam of which but deepens disappointment's sting.

Humanity is like sheep without a shepherd; people are unattached to right relationships and but few are getting along very well.

Then as now, "when Jesus saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion for them, because they fainted, and were scattered, as sheep without a shepherd"—Matthew 9:36.

He is the Way to life. There is no other.

GERMAN LABOR HONORS SLAIN LEADER DESPITE POLICE MEANNESS

—O—

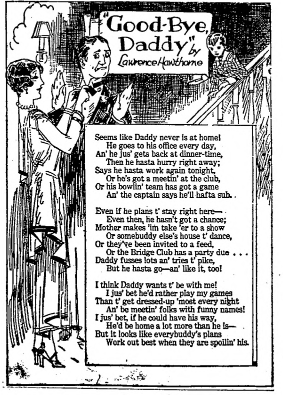
Bochum.—(TIS)— The funeral of Fritz Huseman, a well-known president of the German Mine Workers Federation, and recently murdered by the Nazis under the pretext of "trying to escape," has been an enormous public demonstration on the part of oppressed German Labor. Although nothing was known about the date and hour of the funeral, thousands of people attended . The state secret police became so excited about the manifestation seemingly organized from nowhere that it ordered the arrest of eight former officials of the German Mine Workers Federation who are accused of having communicated the date and hour of the funeral to many of the slain leader's friends. They were arrested when leaving the cemetery, as well as were others who came from nearby cities.

It is reliably reported that the police departments of all cities in the Rhineland sent secret agents to the funeral in order to ascertain all those who dared to come to Bochum and thus silently to register their protest against Nazi methods.

NAZI TERROR UNABATED

—O—

Berlin (TIS)—According to a compilation just completed by the Berlin under-ground organization of the Social-Democratic party, 107 well-known Socialists and trade unionists have been arrested in Berlin alone since May, 1934, and sentenced to a total of 114 years and 3 months hard labor and 119 years and 9 months in prison. Other cities report similar terror sentences. The number of those arrested and incercerated during the last year alone reaches several thousand.



"Good-Bye, Daddy" by Lawrence Hawthorne

Seems like Daddy never is at home!
He goes to his office every day,
An' he jus' gets back at dinner-time,
Then he hasta hurry right away;
Says he hasta work again tonight,
Or he's got a meetin' at the club,
Or his bowlin' team has got a game
An' the captain says he'll hafta sub.

Even if he plans t' stay right here—
Even then, he hasn't got a chance;
Mother makes 'im take 'er to a show
Or somebuddy else's house t' dance,
Or they've been invited to a feed,
Or the Bridge Club has a party due . . .
Daddy fusses lots an' tries t' pike,
But he hasta go—an' like it, too!

I think Daddy wants t' be with me!
I jus' bet he'd rather play my games
Than t' get dressed-up 'most every night
An' be meetin' folks with funny names!
I jus' bet, if he could have his way,
He'd be home a lot more than he is—
But it looks like everybuddy's plans
Work out best when they are spoilin' his.

A total of 6,256,000 stream trout and 702,700 lake trout are ready for distribution or will be before distribution can be made, according to Dr. Thaddeus Surber, superintendent of fish propagation for the Division of Game and Fish. Work of placing this supply of trout in suitable lakes and streams will be pushed as repidly as possible with some of the stream trout fingerlings already measuring up to three inches in length, Dr. Surber said.

AW GO ON! TELL US!

Mr. Swear and Mr. Swanke were old business enemies, but chance had placed them on the same board of directors.

One day after a business meeting Mr. Swear was holding forth.

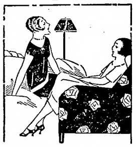
"There are hundreds of ways of making money," he said, provocatively.

"Yes," put in Mr. Swanke, "but only one honest way."

"Why, what's that?" asked Mr. Swear, sharply.

"Ah!" retorted Mr. Swanke. "I thought you wouldn't know it."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

YEARS AND YEARS



"Clover married a man a good deal older than she is, so I hear."

"Older! Why, he's twice her real age and three times the age she says she is."

Why He Broke the Date

Linda had given her boy friend a calling down for breaking his date with her the night before.

"It was the fault of that old dog of yours," the boy friend protested. "When I came to the gate he was barking and growling. I was afraid to come in."

"Oh, but didn't you know that back of it all there was a friendly tail wagging," she said.

"Yes, but that wasn't the end I was afraid of," her young gallant replied.—Capper's Weekly.

Twitting on Facts

The exceedingly stout lady indignantly tackled a buss inspector at a busy stopping place.

"I want to report the conductor of that bus that's just gone," she shrilled. "He's been rude!"

"How?" asked the bored official.

"Why," went on the lady, "he was telling the people the bus was full up, and when I got off he said, "Room for three inside!"—Stray Stories Magazine.

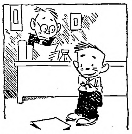
Baby Food

Billy's mother is ultra-modern, and the lad hears much talk of calories. When calling on a neighbor where a new baby recently arrived, the conversation drifted to health.

"I want my baby to make a healthy looking boy like Jack."

"Feed him calory," Bill advised. —Indianapolis News.

AND UNDERTAKERS



Teacher—Into what two great classes is the human race divided?

Pupil—Motorists and pedestrians.

Why Sis Saw Red

Sis' Boy Friend—How does your sister like the engagement ring I gave her?

Her Small Brother—O. K. I guess, except it's a little small. Anyway she has a hard time sometimes getting it off when that other fellow comes to call on her.

Motive of Sympathy

Little Richard—Mother, may I have a nickel for the old man who is crying outside?

Mother—Yes, dear, but what is the old man crying about?

Richard—He's crying, "Peanuts, five cents a bag."

Hard to Do

News Photographer (lining up children for a picture) to small boy —Smile nicely at this little girl over here.

Small Bow—Aw heck, that's my sister.

Unexpected Discovery

"What did it cost you to have your family tree looked up?"

"Only $500 just for having it looked up, but I had to pay $1,000 to have it hushed up."

Wrong on the Color

"Have you read 'Freckles,' Sammy?" asked the teacher.

"No, ma'am," stammered Sammy, "mine are the brown kind."

Water and Ice

Teacher—What is the most striking alteration when water becomes ice?

Pupil—The enormous rise in price.

GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

THE INFECTIOUS COLD

A good many infectious diseases give you immunity when you have had one attack, but not a cold. You can be just over one, and contract another the next day.

So far, medical science has not been able to isolate the germ that causes the infectious cold. The germ is so infinitesimally small that it goes through every bacterial filter we have in our laboratiories, and it cannot be seen with the microscope. But some day some scientist will be able to "catch" it in some kind of net, and then when we can isolate it from other germs, we will be able to work on it, and the same scientist, or some others, will be able to discover the way of killing it. Let us hope these discoveries come soon. The common cold is certainly the cause of an amazing amount of discomfort in this world.

Medical science, however, has learned that there are two types of colds—one that is contagious and one that is not. The non-contagious type is the one that most cronic head cold sufferers have. The infectious type is the one that most of us get. It is the one that comes in "waves."

Medical science, too, has determined pretty well that we all have the cold virus (a germ is called a virus when it is so small that you cannot see it with a microscope) in our noses and throats constantly. When we are well the cold virus doesn't bother us any more than a dust spot on healthy skin bothers us. But let us get below par, then—well, the cold virus is there ready to attack, and loses no time "getting in its work."

In experiments which we have been carrying on in the University of Illinois, we have learned that the temperature of the lining of the nose has a great deal to do with whether or not we are resistant to a cold. Briefly the action is this: In a normal healthy person, when cold water or cold air strikes the body anywhere, the temperature of the lining membrane of the nose drops instantly below normal, and before the temperature of the skin drops. Then within the space of a few minutes, the temperature of the lining of the nose rises above normal and stays there long enough to counteract the bad effect of the below normal period. Then it settles back to normal. In other words, a healthy body machinery has the ability to adapt itself, within reason, to exposure to cold, and to ward off its ill effects.

But now supposing the body is below par. Then when cold air strikes the skin at any spot, the temperature of the nose goes down instantaneously, but instead of going up again immediately as it should, it stays down for perhaps half an hour or longer. And when the blood holds away from the surface for longer than ten minutes, we have found, the cold germs seize the chance to get in their work, and in a very short time our noses are running and we are sneezing. The cold germs are multiplying by the millions and ready to fasten themselves on any person that comes in contact with our wet handkerchiefs or the spray from our mouth. It is in this beginning stage that the common cold is most infectious.

But it is now that quick work on our part can often stop the cold. If we can get the temperature of the nose to rise above normal for a while so that we can sweat and the blood in the nose can come to the surface to battle against the germs, and we can rest our bodies for a bit, the chances are pretty good that we can conquer the cold within a few hours. The best tactics to use at this time are those grandmother used—a steaming hot foot bath while wrapped in blankets, a hot lemonade to drink, a warmed bed to get into, and then rest there.

But if the soft underlying tissues of the nose become water-logged with serum filtered through the walls of the blood capillaries, the cold will run its normal course.

The best way to prevent infectious head colds is to keep the lining of the nose and its underlying vascular network in a normal state of function.

The skin of the whole body must be kept in "tone," and this can be done by a warm morning bath followed by a cool shower, or at least a washing of the face, arms and hands with cold water and a cool rubdown of the rest of the body. Then be out in the open air at least an hour a day. Eat plenty of fruit, vegetables, dairy products, lean meats, and go easy on starches and sweets.

And avoid as you would a pestilence, the person who is in the sneezing stage of a cold and who is showering the air with germs. No one is resistant enough to withstand a too big dose of fresh cold germs.

Livestock Market Could Be Worse Experts Say

In spite of the recent break in livestock prices, "the market could be worse." The latter quotation has been commonly repeated by numerous shippers who have had stock on the South St. Paul market during the past two weeks, says the livestock market bulletin issued by the Central Cooperative association, farmer-owned livestock selling agency at that market.

This recalls to mind some of the remarks made by shippers at this time last year. When hogs were struggling to reach the $5.00 mark shippers were frequently heard to say, "if we could only get around $8.00 for our hogs, we wouldn't kick."

When long fed steers sold at $7.00 to $7.50 per cwt., some remarked, that a $9.00 to $10.00 market on choice steers would be plenty high. In fact one southern Minnesota man who was looking for thin stock to take back to the country said that he would be perfectly satisfied if he could be sure of getting $8.50 or $9.00 per cwt. when his steers were finished.

All the branches of the livestock market have suffered declines during the past four weeks. There have been reasons for the sharp break, such as seasonal grassy condition of cattle, meat boycott in the east, demoralized dressed meat trade, general depression, etc. Yet after this break which has amounted to as much as $2.00 or more per cwt., prices today are equal to and above the greatest hopes expressed by the feeders a year ago.

The following table lists a few representative quotations today and those of a year ago.

Choice Steers, $10.50-$11.00; yr. ago, $7.00-$8.00

Fair steers, $7.50-$8.00; yr. ago, $4.00-$4.50.

Choice cows, $7.25-7.50; yr. ago, $4.25-4.50.

Canner cows, $3.00-4.00; yr. ago, $1.50-2.00.

Choice heifers, $9.00-10.00; yr. ago, $6.25-6.50.

Plain heifers, $5.50-6.50; yr. ago, $2.50-3.25.

Bologna bulls, $5.00-5.25; yr. ago, $2.75-3.00.

Choice Springers, $60.00-$72.50 (head); yr. ago $40.00-50.00.

Top vealers $6.50-7.00; yr. ago, $4.50-5.00.

Top hogs $9.30; yr. ago $4.75.

Top lambs $8.00; yr. ago, $8.75.

A glance at this list reveals that most quotations on hogs and cattle are from 50 to 75 percent above a year ago with instances of 100 per cent gain. Lambs alone are selling below a year ago.

It is estimated that during 1934 John Barleycorn was responsible for 24 traffic deaths every day of the year, with a monetary loss of nearly $8.500 every minute.

Conclusion of

The MAN from YONDER

by HAROLD TITUS

Dawn, running into the kitchen of the camp she knew so well, came back with a lamp, its reservoir half filled. The wick was lighted and the shadows of the room retreated.

"We seen the note," Jeffers muttered. "Dawn there, 'd come out. We suspected you were in trouble and—"

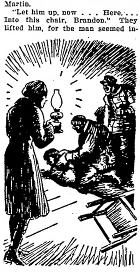
"Never mind about he, now," Ben broke in.

"But you're all that matters!" Dawn said. "Ben. . . . It was my note that decoyed you. It was an old one, written to him. He'd saved it."

Elliott smiled and covered her hands with his.

"Never mind anything that has to do with me. I'm only an accident in this. It's going to be a wonderful day, dear Dawn. This part is tough for you, but . . ." He gave his head an emphatic twist, smiled at her in assurance, then, putting her gently aside, stepped close to Martin.

"Let him up, now . . . Here. . . . Into this chair, Brandon." They lifted him, for the man seemed incapable of movement himself. "Sit still now. We're simply going to get a few little matters straight for these people."



The Wick Was Lighted and the Shadows of the Room Retreated.

He stood back a pace and rubbed his chin with a knuckle.

"We've got this citizen in quite a stew," he said. "He schemed to get me out here and did a good job." He looked at Dawn quickly. "I hadn't even had time to wonder about that note. It doesn't matter, though. You saw me tied, there; that rope's soaked with oil. The place is drenched with it. He was just touching her off when you three came in and it would have been as neat a murder as I've heard about in a coon's age!"

"A lie!" Brandon muttered. "Was only trying . . . trying . . . letter. . . ." He leaned forward and brushed his mouth unsteadily as he looked from face to face. His dazed eyes fastened on Dawn and light flickered in them. His lip drew back and the girl shuddered. "You, too, eh?" he whispered. "Your sweet lover was in . . . trouble, eh? And you came to . . . save him, eh?" He gave a whispered laugh. "Save him! For what? . . . Think he'll take you?" he demanded, voice rising. "Think he'll take you, spawn of a murderer? A dowry, eh? A fine dowry to take to your lover!"

"Have you forgotten what you admitted to me, Brandon?" Ben asked sharply. "You gave it away, gave yourself away!"

'You fool, you. You think you've got me cold, eh? You've nothing on me that'll amount to a snap of my thumb!" His gaze went back to Dawn. "And I've watched you shrink and cringe all your life, and I'm glad now that it's warped you and weakened you—"

"Hold your tongue, Brandon!"

That was Martin's voice breaking in, thickened and shaken with congested rage.

He advanced toward Brandon slowly. He halted and did not speak for a long moment. Eyes still fast on the other, he reached toward the table, groping for a pair of rusted shears which lay there. A cloud came over Brandon's eyes and he blinked.

"And you'd taunt her with it! Because McManus disappeared!" Martin said slowly with low tensity. "Ah, it made a plausible case, Brandon. . . . It, and your stories. . . ."

Then he did a strange thing. He lifted those shears in a quick gesture to his chin and a lock of the thick beard fell away.

"And you'd make lives h—l because you held the power. . . . And you'd write to the hiding, skulking McManus for years and tell him she was gone . . . that she was married . . . . that she hated her father's name, eh?" Another lock of hair fell, and another. His blue eyes were burning, now, and Brandon's chin trembled as a look of horror crept into his face.

"But if he was to come back, Brandon, and swear to her with his own lips that he did not kill . . . swear so, to a girl like that. . . . She'd believe him, wouldn't she? She'd believe him, wouldn't she, and be at peace. . . . At peace. . . . Ay, at peace with herself and . . . the one she loves."

He cut the last lock from the bearded jaw and flung away the shears. He stood erect, spreading his hands.

"See!" he cried. "See, Nick Brandon?"

The man in the chair made as if to rise. He could not. He lifted an arm as though to fend a blow.

"Denny!" he choked. "Denny McManus. . . . You're a d—d . . . you're a . . ."

He ended in a wild scream and cowered back against the wall, sobbing.

Beside Ben, Dawn was trembling. He put his arm about her and she sagged against him.

"So I wouldn't come back, eh?" the man they had known as Martin cried, and whirled to face her. "I came, Dawn! I've come back to tell you that I'm not afraid. . . . That my heart's clean. . . ." He gathered her in his arms, dropped his cheek to her head and closed his eyes. "I'm no killer. I don't know who killed Faxson. Nick told me I did and I lost my head for an hour and then it was too late. . . . I've hidden for years because he's written me things, terrible things to read, little Dawn. But I couldn't stand it longer!"

"And a warrant!" Brandon croaked. "A warrant's here . . . there, in Tincup. Murder won't outlaw. . . . You'll pay . . . you'll pay. . . ."

McManus drew Dawn even closer. "But you'll know, little Dawn! . . . You'll know!" he murmured.

"Wait!" cried Ben. "All of you! Listen! This . . . this . . . this thing, here, as much as admitted to me that he killed Faxson himself! He was here in this cabin the night Faxson was shot. He was here, I'm telling you! He admitted it to me, not ten minutes ago!

"I don't know much about the rules of evidence"—tugging at the bill-fold in his pocket—"but I've a good guess about what Don Stuart had to tell the night he died, now that Brandon has trapped himself!" He shook the soiled, folded envelope from the purse. "I've had this thing for weeks and like a fool I didn't read it. . . .

"Listen!"

He ripped open the flap and Brandon, cowering against the wall, watched him with jaw sagging.

"I have been a coward," Ben read aloud. "McManus did not kill Faxson. Brandon did. Brandon had McManus drunk and was getting him to sign away his share of the partnership when Faxson tried to stop it. Brandon shot Faxson and when McManus was sober enough to understand, told him that he—McManus—had done it. McManus believed him. I don't know what became of McManus. Brandon came to me before Sam died and told me McManus had lit out and that if I did not swear that Faxson said McManus shot at him he would send me to the pen for stealing from the company. This is God's truth. I was afraid to do anything else. I have been a coward. I am sorry I did not tell this years before."

Brandon's head was twitching.

"Lie," he gasped. ". . . drunken bum. . . ."

"No lie, Brandon. It's truth!" Ben said without heat, quite soberly.

Tim Jeffers turned to McManus smiling gently, and as he moved Brandon sprang forward. With a wild cry he gained the doorway, snatched it open and plunged outside.

"Get him!" Tim cried and McManus followed, leaping out into the gloom of late afternoon. . . .

"Don't leave me alone! Not here, Ben!"

It was this cry of Dawn's which arrested Ben on the threshold. He turned to see her swaying dizzily.

"Hold me! Hold me close. . . . Ah, Ben, dear!"

Her arms clasped his neck and she began to cry softly.

"Easy!" he said unsteadily. "Easy, now! It's all over. . . . Everything's over!"

No sounds of the three who had fled into the darkness came for many minutes and then old Tim Jeffers stamped grimly into the room. He did not speak as the two looked inquiringly at him. He waited for the man who had been known as John Martin. . . . He came slowly, this man, breathing heavily.

"Compensation," he said in a whisper as he advanced toward Dawn, arms outstretched hungrily. "The Mad Woman has him. . . . Here it started. . . . Into that river I was supposed to have gone, in a confession of murder. . . . There he went tonight. . . . We saw it, Tim and I. . . . We watched him swept under the ice. . . ."

* * * * * * *

It was after midnight when the group assembled in the McManus home. Tim Jeffers, Able, Doctor Sweet, Denny McManus, Dawn and Ben Elliott sat rather silently in the long, low living room while Aunt Em busied herself in the kitchen.

The evening had been an ordeal, explaining, recording evidence; talking with the coroner, the sheriff, the young prosecutor; and though it had ended in triumph, when the prosecutor slowly tore to bits the old warrant for Denny McManus, the tragic facts with which they had been concerned took toll.

Little was said and when Aunt Em appeared, bearing a tray laden with glasses and a bottle, she walked into a hushed silence.

"Fiddlesticks, what folks you are!" she exploded. "Sittin' here like it was a funeral instead of about the happiest time this house has seen in a coon's age!"

She passed the glasses but no one spoke. She took the last herself and looked around the circle of faces in disgust.

"Has the cat got all your tongues?" she demanded and Able chuckled and old Tim Jeffers smiled.

Still, no one spoke until after old Tim had said his say. He rose to his feet, a giant of a man in that low-ceilinged room. He eyed the clear wine in his glass and then looked about, lifting it in a little gesture of salute.

"Well," he said. . . . "Happy days!"

[THE END.]

Pheasant Crop Analysis Shows They Are Not Harmful Report States

An investigation of the food habits of pheasants carried on within the last few days by the University Farm in co-operation with the Game and Fish Division in response to numerous complaints by farmers about pheasant damage in fields of newly planted corn has shown that in general these complaints are not wholly justified, and that much damage by insects and gophers has been wrongly attributed to pheasants.

Over 50 pheasants killed in the region from which most complaints have come were submitted to Mr. Ralph T. King, instructor, Economic Zoology at the University Farm, for an examination of the crop contents, and an analysis of the food taken, according to Mr. King's report, shows that while pheasants have eaten some corn they have not done nearly the amount of damage for which they have been blamed.

Examination of the crop contents of the 54 birds revealed only 62 kernels of whole corn and 3 sprouted kernels which may or may not have been seed corn, while they contained 86 kernels of mutilated corn, which had already been destroyed by ground squirrels or gophers, which eat the germ of the kernel, leaving the remainder. It is obvious that a large part of the damage attributed to pheasants has ben done by other animals.

The crops contained a certain amount of waste corn which was not in germinating condition. There were 327 kernels of ensilage corn, much of which had apparently been picked up from animal manure, and 577 grains of oats which also seemed to have been gleaned from manure. It was obviously not seed grain.

The pheasant crops contained a number of injurious insects, and undoubtedly pheasants in search of such harmful insects are often wrongly blamed for damaging corn. Sixty-eight cutworms, 77 beetles, 5 magots, pupae, or adult flies, 11 ants, and 2 wireworms were found in these birds. This is the year of greatest abundance of June beetles over a three year period, and many of them are being eaten. One bird examined by a warden but not included in this report contained 72 June beetles in its crop.

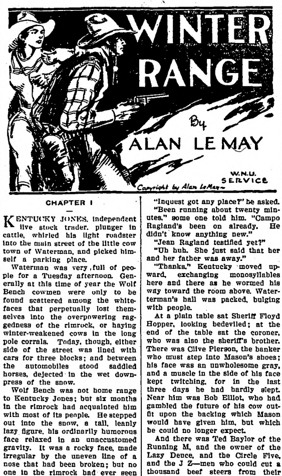
Their fondness for weed seeds make the pheasants valuable agricultural aids. Two of the birds contained 3342 and over 6,000 ragweed seeds respectively; one bird contained 16 dandelion heads, and the remaining bird contained 11 seeds of wild buckwheat, 19 mustard heads, and 551 miscellaneous weed seeds. Every farmer knows the damage which weeds do, and appreciates this aid in his fight to keep them under control.

When the present food investigation is examined, together with what we know about the food habits of pheasants througout the year it becomes apparent that the total food of pheasants contains man yitems of a harmful nature, many of neutral value, and fewer items of food which are valuable. During most of the summer the pheasants eat large numbers of insects, and throughout the year weed seeds form a large proportion of their food.

LOWLY BULLHEAD LEADS IN LAKES IMPROVEMENT

Bullheads with a total of 38,725 pounds, represented the major part of the production in inland lakes of the state during May in effort of the Division of Game and Fish to improve fish lakes conditions. In all, 43,145 pounds were removed from lakes fished in Douglas, Aitkin, Redwood, Renville, Pine, Chippewa and Washington counties. A total of 3,170 pounds of carp was included, Erling Swenson, Division director, reported.

Seven fishing crews were in operation during the month under the supervision of George Weaver, in charge of fish lakes improvement for the division.



CHAPTER I

KENTUCKY JONES, independent live stock trader, plunger in cattle, whirled his light roadster into the main street of the little cow town of Waterman, and picked himself a parking place.

Waterman was very full of people for a Tuesday afternoon. Generally at this time of year the Wolf Bench cowmen were only to be found scattered among the whitefaces that perpetually lost themselves into the overpowering raggedness of the rimrock, or haying winter-weakened cows in the long pole corrals. Today, though, either side of the street was lined with cars for three blocks; and between the automobiles stood saddled horses, dejected in the wet downpress of the snow.

Wolf Bench was not home range to Kentucky Jones; but six months in the rimrock had acquainted him with most of its people. He stepped out into the snow, a tall, leanly lazy figure, his ordinarily humorous face relaxed in an unaccustomed gravity. It was a rocky face, made irregular by the uneven line of a nose that had been broken; but no one in the rimrock had ever seen it so austerely somber as it was now, as he turned into the restaurant known to all cowboys as the Greasy Spoon.

As he entered, however, his face lightened somewhat. He kissed the girl at the counter absent-mindedly, and helped himself to a wedge of pie. "Where's the inquest going to be?" he asked.

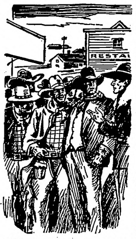
"They're having it in the hall over Kerry's store. It started nearly half an hour ago. They—

"Good Lord!" He hurriedly pushed the pie wedge into the girl's hands. "Save this." He took to the street again at a trot.

Kerry's store itself was appropriately closed, but the hall above was full to overflowing. Here inquest was being held over the body of John Mason.

It was hard to believe that John Mason was dead, his name had so long represented unassailable strength in the Wolf Bench rimrock. That he was head of the Waterman bank had been an index but not the key to his significance. He had been a cowman once, and up to the very end he had thought as a cowman, never losing touch with the farthest corners of the Wolf Bench range. He had been in the saddle on one of his long circuits of the range in the hour that he died. His common understanding of both cows and money had made him more than the kingpin of Wolf Bench finance; almost he was the economic structure itself.

Through the hard times which low beef prices had brought to Wolf Bench, Mason had managed to carry along many a weakening outfit where a nervous banker, or one less a cattleman would have abandoned all hope. But with Mason dead the bank swayed precariously, teetering on the edge of a smash that might carry down with it half the outfits of the Bench. To many it seemed that only another Mason could avert disaster—and there was no other.



"Jean Ragland Testified Yet?"

This was the man whose inquest jammed the little town hall above Kerry's store until the overflow filled the stairway and left a milling bunch of the less aggressive in the street.

Some of those at the foot of the stair spoke to Kentucky Jones as he came up.

"Inquest got any place?" he asked.

"Been running about twenty minutes," some one told him. "Campo Ragland's been on already. He didn't know anything new."

"Jean Ragland testified yet?"

"Uh huh. She just said that her and her father was away."

"Thanks." Kentucky moved upward, exchanging monosyllables here and there as he wormed his way toward the room above. Waterman's hall was packed, bulging with people.

At a plain table sat Sheriff Floyd Hopper, looking bedeviled; at the end of the table sat the coroner, who was also the sheriff's brother. There was Clive Pierson, the banker who must step into Mason's shoes; his face was an unwholesome gray, and a muscle in the side of his face kept twitching, for in the last three days he had hardly slept. Near him was Bob Elliot, who had gambled the future of his cow outfit upon the backing which Mason would have given him, but which he could no longer expect.

And there was Ted Baylor of the Running M, and the owner of the Lazy Deuce, and the Circle Five, and the J Z—men who could cut a thousand beef steers from their herds in a week's notice, but might easily be set back to their beginnings if Mason's death should cause the bank to close its doors; and many others.

Lee Bishop, the blocky, almost burly foreman of the Bar Hook, was in the witness chair, very red in the face from public speaking and the heat.

"I was going out to the pump house, carrying a couple of pails of hot water from the kitchen," he was saying. "I aimed to thaw out the pump. Then I seen this hump in the snow—thought maybe a calf had drifted in and fell down. I went out and looked; and it was Old Ironsides—I mean John Mason."

"How long did you think he had been dead?"

"He wasn't lying there around one o'clock, when we left the home ranch. And there wasn't any snow under him. It begun snowing around two o'clock, out there."

"Then you figure Mason had this accident between one and two o'clock?"

"That ain't what I said. I only said there was no snow under him."

Sheriff Floyd Hopper exhibited annoyance. "Let's not quibble over words! What we want is to get done, here."

"Well," Lee Bishop went on with an unnecessary air of stubbornness. "I turned him over, and I saw that he'd been shot. His gun was in his hand—that long-barreled .45 he always carried to take a pop at a coyote with it. If he should see a coyote."

"Is this the gun?" said the sheriff's brother, turning toward a cluttered window ledge at one side. A deputy handed the coroner the required weapon. Bishop identified it. "Well," he went on, "I sent up a long yell but nobody answered; and I took out and run for the house. . . ."

Kentucky Jones had been searching all the room for a sight of Jean Ragland, and now he was surprised to discover her so near the focus of interest that he had missed her in searching too far away. She was sitting beside her father, the big stoop-shouldered owner of the Bar Hook. The two sat almost under a window ledge where a deputy kept his eye upon a muddled collection of exhibits.

The sheriff was bombarding Lee Bishop with questions of little point. "Is that cut-off trail between the 88 and the Bar Hook often used?"

"Almighty little!" It was the first emphasis Bishop had used.

Kentucky's eyes sought Jean Ragland again. Suddenly he perceived that she had leaned back so that she could peer between the standing deputies and was looking directly at him. He smiled at her but her face did not change.

Then suddenly he was aware that she had signaled him to draw nearer. It had been the faintest narrowing of an eye, the slightest inclination of her head; yet he knew absolutely, as she again averted her face, that a signal had been conveyed.

Deeply puzzled, he began to work his way along the side of the hall. The sheriff, he noticed, was perspiringly pushing ahead with his questions, evidently very conscious of his far-gathered audience. The sheriff's brother, the coroner, was nudging him, but he was barging ahead, as Kentucky Jones presently reached a point not more than three yards from Jean Ragland.

He was trying to catch Jean Ragland's eye as a sound of scuffling and contention broke forth in the back of the room. The sheriff glared, faltered, and stopped. A tall deputy left Jean Ragland's side to go pushing back through the crowd.

Coughlin Went From Wall St. Attack to Big Banker's Bosom

From "The Challenge"

NEW YORK. — When Father Charles E. Coughlin left New York's Madison Square Garden after condemning Wall Street and international bankers for two hours in his recent meeting, he went directly to the apartment of a man who has ben connected with banks and money exchanges, both domestic and international, for the last 20 years, The Socialist Call has revealed.

Coughlin, though registered at the New York Athletic club, stayed with Francis Keelon in the Hearst-owned Hotel Warwick, says the Call.

Keelon is a partner in Gilson, Keelon & Andrus, with offices in the Cotton Exchange Building and seats on the Commodities Exchange and Oriental Exchange, where they act as tradeers in gold and silver.

Keelon has worked for the Lawyers Title and Trust company, and the Irving Trust company, and was a member of the National Metals Exchange where he gambled in gold and silver for himself and his clients.

The Call also charged that among "influential" men close to Coughlin are: William Randolph Hearst, redbaiter; President Tom Farrell of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., who gave Coughlin steel for his church; high officials in General Motors corporation; and President James H. Rand, Jr., of Remington-Rand, a leader in the National Association of Manufacturers.

Asking that steps be taken to encourage enrollment in the camps he said that a late ruling from Harry L. Hopkins, works Progress administrator, stating that enrollment in the CCC does not preclude employment by another member of the same family on a relief project. All CCC applicants must represent dependent families.

4-H CLUB

The Grygla 4-H club held their regular meeting at the school house on Saturday, June 22, 1935. In the absence of President Gordon Bush, the meeting was taken charge of by the county agent, R. A. Reierson, of Warren. The program consisted of a piano solo by Lorraine Bucholz, and a play "You May Stay After School," the characters including Edith Andersen, Lillian and Wilfred Sorenson, Gerald Nelson, Fay Bucholz and Robert Stewart. This was followed by a song by a group of girls who were accompanied by Wilfred Sorenson on the guitar. Mr. Reierson, after discussing their different projects with the boys and girls, told about the County 4-H club picnic to be held at the Old Mill Thursday, June 27th, and urged as many as possible to attend. It was decided that each member should bring a nickel to each meeting from now on, this money to be used for the good of the members later on.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. Ed Giving entertained a number of little folks last week Thursday, the occasion being the sixth birthday of her daughter Joyce. She was assisted by Fay Bucholz. Joyce was the recipient of many pretty little gifts from her friends. The guests included Joyce Giving, honor guest; her sister Marlis, Jean and Ronald Bucholz, Jean and Wayne Holbrook, Geraldine and LeRoy Maney, Donna and Wallace Grovum, Clifford Jr. and Marilyn Lunde, Arlene Peterson, Donna Wee Moquin, Marion Bush and Eileen Olson.

FARM BUREAU

The Regular meeting of the Grygla Farm Bureau was held at the Woodman Hall Friday evening, June 21st. The meeting was called to order by President J. W. Stewart. Messrs R. A. Reierson of Warren and J. M. Larson, farm representative of the Federal Housing Administration, each gave a very fine and instructice talk. Mr. Reierson's talk dealt mainly with noxious weeds and their control. He warned of the seriousness of three weeds in particular which are invading this section of the country, namely: French weed or garlic, creeping jenny or wild morning glory, and worst of all the Leafy Spurge. This is almost impossible to eradicate and is also poisonous to livestock. Mr. Reierson also stated that on the third Friday in July he will be in Grygla for the purpose of discussing a cow testing association with the farmers. It was sugested by Mr. Reierson that the name "Community Club" might be more generally satisfactory than the present name. The officers would like to have the sentiment of the people in and around Grygla on this matter.

Mr. Larson's talk dealt with federal loans for the purpose of making permanent improvements on real estate such as, new buildings, fencing, painting, digging wells, plumbing, installing lighting and water systems or any other improvements which are of a permanent nature on farm or city property. Among other things he stated that too few people realize the importance and economy of paint on buildings. He stated that in New England, for instance, where buildings are kept well painted and are on a good foundation, the average life of them is about two hundred years, while in districts where they are perhaps painted once and then forgotten about, the average life is from twenty-five to thirty years. This loaning agency, he stated, is not for the purpose of encouraging people to go further into debt, but rather to help them secure improvements which in the end will save them money and make the home more serviceable and attractive to live in. These loans are available to rural and city people alike and can be secured thru local banks or thru the Production Credit association.

Conservation Topic At Science Meeting

Officials of the state department of conservation pointed out the significance of conservation being chosen as a chief topic for discussion at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science which will be held in Minneapolis June 24 to 29.

"We are assured rapid progress in conservation when science is enlisted in the cause," E. V. Willard, conservation commissioner, commented. "Modern scientific methods are being included as rapidly as possible in our conservation program here in Minnesota."

More 'Stop' Signs on Trunk Roads Likely

Speeding motorists on trunk highways usually can be brought to a complete stop in built-up districts and other danger zones easier than they can be slowed down to a safe gait, it is indicated by experiments conducted by the Minnesota highway department.

Some engineers who have been studying the reactions of drivers to various types of warning signs believe that the future may see much trunk highway traffic brought to a complete stop at the edge of populated districts, and then permitted to proceed at a reasonable speed, says a highway department bulletin.

The department is also considering bringing traffic to a full stop when entering zones where crews are at work on the roads. Failure of drivers to slow down sufficiently when warned to do so has resulted in death and injury to several road workers this season.

Six Camps Operating in Soil Erosion Control

Six soil erosion control camps under the federal emergency work program are now in operation in southeastern Minnesota where conditions have assumed critical proportions, according to Walter S. Olson, director of the Division of Drainage and Waters. Camps are located at Rochester, Zumbrota, Caledonia, Spring Valley, Plainview and Lewistown.

An additional seven camps are planned to aid in carrying out plans resulting from a survey conducted last winter under the direction of Mr. Olson. Of these, one camp of Civilian Conservation Corps workers will be devoted entirely to water conservation projects included on the Cannon River. This work is designed to control levels in lakes located between Faribault and Mankato.

Actual work is being supervised by the soil conservation service of the U. S. department of agriculture.

4-H CLUB

The Grygla 4-H club held their regular meeting at the school house on Saturday, June 22, 1935. In the absence of President Gordon Bush, the meeting was taken charge of by the county agent, R. A. Reierson, of Warren. The program consisted of a piano solo by Lorraine Bucholz, and a play "You May Stay After School," the characters including Edith Andersen, Lillian and Wilfred Sorenson, Gerald Nelson, Fay Bucholz and Robert Stewart. This was followed by a song by a group of girls who were accompanied by Wilfred Sorenson on the guitar. Mr. Reierson, after discussing their different projects with the boys and girls, told about the County 4-H club picnic to be held at the Old Mill Thursday, June 27th, and urged as many as possible to attend. It was decided that each member should bring a nickel to each meeting from now on, this money to be used for the good of the members later on.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. Ed Giving entertained a number of little folks last week Thursday, the occasion being the sixth birthday of her daughter Joyce. She was assisted by Fay Bucholz. Joyce was the recipient of many pretty little gifts from her friends. The guests included Joyce Giving, honor guest; her sister Marlis, Jean and Ronald Bucholz, Jean and Wayne Holbrook, Geraldine and LeRoy Maney, Donna and Wallace Grovum, Clifford Jr. and Marilyn Lunde, Arlene Peterson, Donna Wee Moquin, Marion Bush and Eileen Olson.

INJURED BY ACCIDENT

Oscar Johnson, brother of Mrs. Gunder Grovum and Miss Julia Johnson, was shot through the hand recently when a loaded gun which he was handling was accidentally discharged. His wounds were taken care of by Dr. McCoy, and at this writing he is getting along nicely.

FARM BUREAU

The Regular meeting of the Grygla Farm Bureau was held at the Woodman Hall Friday evening, June 21st. The meeting was called to order by President J. W. Stewart. Messrs R. A. Reierson of Warren and J. M. Larson, farm representative of the Federal Housing Administration, each gave a very fine and instructice talk. Mr. Reierson's talk dealt mainly with noxious weeds and their control. He warned of the seriousness of three weeds in particular which are invading this section of the country, namely: French weed or garlic, creeping jenny or wild morning glory, and worst of all the Leafy Spurge. This is almost impossible to eradicate and is also poisonous to livestock. Mr. Reierson also stated that on the third Friday in July he will be in Grygla for the purpose of discussing a cow testing association with the farmers. It was sugested by Mr. Reierson that the name "Community Club" might be more generally satisfactory than the present name. The officers would like to have the sentiment of the people in and around Grygla on this matter.

Mr. Larson's talk dealt with federal loans for the purpose of making permanent improvements on real estate such as, new buildings, fencing, painting, digging wells, plumbing, installing lighting and water systems or any other improvements which are of a permanent nature on farm or city property. Among other things he stated that too few people realize the importance and economy of paint on buildings. He stated that in New England, for instance, where buildings are kept well painted and are on a good foundation, the average life of them is about two hundred years, while in districts where they are perhaps painted once and then forgotten about, the average life is from twenty-five to thirty years. This loaning agency, he stated, is not for the purpose of encouraging people to go further into debt, but rather to help them secure improvements which in the end will save them money and make the home more serviceable and attractive to live in. These loans are available to rural and city people alike and can be secured thru local banks or thru the Production Credit association.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. A. J. Miller entertained a number of children Tuesday afternoon, in honor of her daughter Dorothy, whose ninth birthday occurred on Monday. Conservation Topic At Science Meeting

Officials of the state department of conservation pointed out the significance of conservation being chosen as a chief topic for discussion at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science which will be held in Minneapolis June 24 to 29.

"We are assured rapid progress in conservation when science is enlisted in the cause," E. V. Willard, conservation commissioner, commented. "Modern scientific methods are being included as rapidly as possible in our conservation program here in Minnesota."

More 'Stop' Signs on Trunk Roads Likely

Speeding motorists on trunk highways usually can be brought to a complete stop in built-up districts and other danger zones easier than they can be slowed down to a safe gait, it is indicated by experiments conducted by the Minnesota highway department.

Some engineers who have been studying the reactions of drivers to various types of warning signs believe that the future may see much trunk highway traffic brought to a complete stop at the edge of populated districts, and then permitted to proceed at a reasonable speed, says a highway department bulletin.

The department is also considering bringing traffic to a full stop when entering zones where crews are at work on the roads. Failure of drivers to slow down sufficiently when warned to do so has resulted in death and injury to several road workers this season.

Six Camps Operating in Soil Erosion Control

Six soil erosion control camps under the federal emergency work program are now in operation in southeastern Minnesota where conditions have assumed critical proportions, according to Walter S. Olson, director of the Division of Drainage and Waters. Camps are located at Rochester, Zumbrota, Caledonia, Spring Valley, Plainview and Lewistown.

An additional seven camps are planned to aid in carrying out plans resulting from a survey conducted last winter under the direction of Mr. Olson. Of these, one camp of Civilian Conservation Corps workers will be devoted entirely to water conservation projects included on the Cannon River. This work is designed to control levels in lakes located between Faribault and Mankato.

Actual work is being supervised by the soil conservation service of the U. S. Department of agriculture.
